SULZER MUST GO TO TRIAL, COURT RULES

Contention That Impeachment at Extra Session Was Illegal Rejected by 51 Votes to 1.

TAKEN IN SECRET SESSION

But All Proceedings Later Are Made Public—Senator Wende Only Supporter of Sulzer.

CULLEN GIVES HIS VIEWS

His Opinion Against Respondent's Argument Explained When Name Is Reached.

FINAL OBJECTIONS TO-DAY

Argument Will Be Made Against Impeachment Articles Dealing with Campaign Funds.

GARRISON HEARING WAITS

Put Off Until This Afternoon at Troy — Sheriff Insists Upon Incarcerating Prisoner.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—The High Court of Impeachment to-night decided that William Sulzer must go on trial for high crimes and misdemeanors, when by a vote of 51 to 1 its members overruled the motion of the Governor's counsel to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that he was unconstitutionally impeached by the Assembly, because that body was in extra session when the impeachment was brought.

Senator Gottfried H. Wende of Buffalo, a Democrat, an ardent supporter of the Governor, cast the solitary nay. Senators Brown, Bussey, Fitzgerald, Thomas, Walters, and Wheeler and Judge Gray were absent.

This was the second setback for Mr. Sulzer. The first was the decision last Friday overruling the challenges against four Senators as members of the court.

To-morrow will find the lawyers for the respondent making their stand in the last line of preliminary defense. D Cady Herrick of counsel for Mr. Sulzer and Edgar Truman Brackett, for the Board of Impeachment Managers, will present argument for and against the proposition that some of the offenses charged against Mr. Sulzer—his alleged juggling of the campaign fund and the use of some of the funds contributed to his campaign in Wall Street speculation—are unimpeachable offenses. Three of the eight articles of impeachment are based on the disclosures made in this connection before the Frawley Committee first and subsequently before the Board of Impeachment Managers.

Should to-morrow's battle end with a decision adverse to Mr. Sulzer, an attack on the form of the impeachment will be the only thing to intervene before the charges contained in the articles of impeachment will be squarely before the High Court on an issue of facts.

Sulzer Refuses Comment.

Of Mr. Sulzer's lawyers, Louis Marshall was almost constantly on the firing line during this afternoon's session. With great eloquence and force and citing many cases in support of his contention, he took up the argument which was interrupted by the court's adjournment last Friday, and which, had he been sustained by the court, would have put an end to all further proceedings.

While Mr. Marshall was fighting his battles before the court, Mr. Sulzer was closeted at the Executive Mansion with ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman, who is making preparations against the day when Mr. Sulzer will be called to the stand as a witness in his own defense. At the mansion to-night after the decision of the Court of Impeachment was made known, Mr. Sulzer declined to make any comment.

The vote on the question before the Court of Impeachment to-day was taken in executive session. It was the first time since the court convened that the Senate Chamber had been cleared of counsel, spectators, and newspaper correspondents alike. The executive session was of only about half an hour's duration, and after it was over Presiding Judge Cullen directed that a complete record of the proceedings be made public.

As on last Friday, when the court was called upon to vote on an important question, Presiding Judge Cullen, while leaving the decision to the court, showed no hesitancy in expressing his own views on the question at issue. On Friday, after he had expressed his views, these were acquiesced in by all the other members of the court. In this instance there was one solitary exception—Senator Wende.

Cullen Addresses the Court.

"My brethren," said Presiding Judge Cullen, after the lawyers had concluded their arguments, "of course, you will readily appreciate that the point which has been discussed before us goes to the very foundation of this proceeding. If decided in one way the proceedings must necessarily stop. Therefore it is fitting that this question should be decided by the whole of this court, and the presiding member of the court does not feel inclined to use the power granted under the rules to decide it in the first instance, though he has no hesi-

COLD WAVE STRIKES SOUTH.

Frost in Alabama and Pensacola Has Record Temperature Drop.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 22.—The first frost of the year was seen here this morning, the earliest in four years. Slight damage is reported.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 22.—To-day's weather established a record for this section. The temperature dropped to 55 degrees during the day, the coolest September day in Pensacola in the Weather Bureau history.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 22.—A record unequaled since the establishment of the Weather Bureau was made yesterday, when snow fell at nearly all points in Northern Minnesota and around the shores of Lake Superior. The earliest previous snowfall was recorded Sept. 24, 1907. Wintry scenes prevailed in the vicinity of Port Arthur, Ont., and Grand Marais, Minn., where the ground was blanketed with snow. The average temperature at Duluth was 35 degrees.

Special to The New York Times.

LIMA, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Most of Lima went supperless to bed to-night and found the way under covers in the dark, too, as, in the midst of a terrific snowstorm this afternoon, the natural gas supply failed.

The snow was whirled through the city by a forty-mile gale. The temperature was unusually low for this time of the year, and Lima citizens, unprepared for such a wintery blast, suffered. The temperature dropped down below the 30 degree notch, and, to make matters worse, the artificial gas supply is about exhausted.

Fully an inch of snow fell, breaking all records for early snowfall in this section. People at first viewed the snow with surprise and interest, but this feeling later turned to chagrin when they found no gas at home with which to prepare supper, and there was not enough pressure even to furnish a light. Manager Cutshall of the gas company could offer nothing in the way of encouragement for a better supply of gas.

MYSTERY IN THREE WILLS.

Maryland State's Attorney Looking Into Miss Warfield's Death.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—Three wills play a part in the mystery surrounding the sudden death of Miss Ella Lawrence Warfield, a relative of former Gov. Warfield, who died on a lonely farm near Sykesville at midnight on July 23.

It became known to-day that the will which was read after her funeral has disappeared. In spite of a diligent search and careful questioning by State's Attorney Edward O. Weant of Carroll County, its whereabouts is a mystery, so far as the authorities are concerned.

The first will filed was written three years ago. It left everything to the mother of Miss Warfield and directed that after Mrs. Warfield's death the estate should go to Mrs. Mary Josephine Ward, Miss Warfield's sister.

A second will, written within the last year, was found in the possession of Henry Jones, with whose family Miss Warfield and her mother boarded last Winter. It leaves all Miss Warfield's property to her mother, without any reversion to Mrs. Ward.

While the State's Attorney was investigating the status of this second will, which he believed to be the last, he learned that a third will had been read after Miss Warfield's death. Mr. Weant left for Philadelphia this afternoon to have a talk with a person now there who may be able to throw some light on the mystery.

GAYNOR'S FRIEND A SUICIDE.

Morris Metzgar Hangs Himself for Grief After the Funeral.

For a quarter of a century, ever since the time when both of them were comparatively young men in the City of Brooklyn, Morris Metzgar had been a friend and a stanch admirer of William J. Gaynor. Since the early nineties Mr. Metzgar owned a butcher shop at 472 Boulevard, Rockaway Beach, and when he set up his business there he moved to Rockaway Beach to live, but he never completly lost touch with his old friend and never ceased to enjoy talking to his neighbors and customers about the man he was always sure would do great things. He gloried in the Gaynor Mayoralty, and when the news went out that the Mayor would make his independent fight for re-election, no one in Rockaway Beach shouted louder than Mr. Metzgar.

When a week ago last Thursday the news came that Mr. Gaynor had died at sea Mr. Metzgar went about with bowed head. He seldom went to his shop, and talked of little morning, noon, and night, besides the death of the man he had so admired. Early yesterday afternoon he loitered about the newsstand near his home at 25 South Pleasant Avenue waiting for the editions of the evening papers that would carry the accounts of the funeral.

These came at 2 o'clock, and with them under his arm he set off in the direction of his home. That was the last seen of him alive. At 3 o'clock a maid in the Metzgar household went into the stable back of the Pleasant Avenue home and found the body of Mr. Metzgar swinging by a halter from one of the rafters. The members of his family and his circle of friends could advance no other theory to explain his suicide than that he had killed himself out of grief for the death of the Mayor.

Mr. Metzgar was 61 years old. Mrs. Metzgar and a son and daughter survive him. He was a man of considerable property, and his friends had understood that he wanted to contribute liberally to the Gaynor campaign fund. He had even talked of launching a separate league of Gaynor supporters in Rockaway Beach.

PAY TOO HIGH, HE QUIT.

F. Spencer Goodwin Thought $3,600 Far Too Much for City Job.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Sept. 22.—F. Spencer Goodwin, a member of the Goodwin family of this city, a millionaire in his own right and a first cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan, resigned to-night as President of the Hartford Board of Water Commissioners because the Common Council had persistently refused to adopt his recommendations regarding the conduct of the board.

Mr. Goodwin's chief recommendation was that his salary be reduced from $3,600 to $600 a year, and that the incumbent of the office be relieved from the necessity of devoting his entire time to the work. Mr. Goodwin admitted that he had not had enough to do to warrant his salary, and he urged the council to pass an ordinance providing that the Chief Engineer of the department have complete control of the affairs of the board, and that the President have nominal supervision of its work.

FORCE BOSS BARNES TO CHANGE HIS PLANS

Root Will Preside at To-day's Republican State Convention, Not Hinman.

WERNER FOR CHIEF JUDGE

Show of Opposition Only—To Test Barnes's Strength in Vote on a Platform Plank.

Although William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, will retain control of the State Convention which the party will hold at Carnegie Hall to-day to select candidates for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals and Associate Judge, he had to make concessions yesterday which upset his plans considerably.

Mr. Barnes had it all arranged to have Harold J. Hinman, leader of the Assembly minority, designated either as Permanent Chairman of the convention or Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. Assemblyman Hinman is a member of the "Old Guard," and has always been a stanch Barnes supporter. The members of the anti-Barnes element in the party are opposed strongly to Hinman, and at a meeting at the Union League Club yesterday at which representatives of both factions were present, Mr. Barnes was informed that trouble would develop in the convention if he attempted to force Hinman upon the delegates.

After some controversy Barnes agreed to the selection of United States Senator Elihu Root for Permanent Chairman and Job E. Hedges for Chairman of the Resolutions Committee. Those present at the Union League Club meeting were Nicholas Murray Butler, William D. Guthrie, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Bar Association; Jacob Gould Schurman, who is to be Temporary Chairman of the convention; Francis Hendricks, James M. Beck, and Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee. Herbert Parsons and Henry L. Stimson, leaders of the anti-Barnes forces, happened along later.

It was agreed that harmony was necessary for the good of the party, especially in view of the fact that a Governor is to be elected next year, but the anti-Barnes leaders insisted that the proceedings should not be too reactionary. Acting upon this suggestion the Barnes forces agreed to modify the platform, but to leave enough anti-Roosevelt sentiment to show that the party does not intend to commit itself to Progressive policies.

May Take a Test Vote.

Although this much was agreed upon by both sides, the anti-Barnes forces are anxious to have a test vote in the convention, in order to determine the full extent of the anti-Barnes feeling throughout the State, and it is likely that the Stimson-Parsons forces will offer an amendment to one of the pro-Barnes platform planks, which will cause a line-up of opposing forces. Just what this amendment is to be could not be learned last night, and the Barnes supporters said they hadn't heard of it.

The platform, which will be framed by the Committee on Resolutions at a meeting to be held this afternoon at the Hotel Astor, will contain a plank denouncing the new Currency bill and another indorsing the Mayoralty candidacy of John Purroy Mitchel, the Fusion candidate, on the ground that anti-Tammany is now a State issue.

There will also be a resolution calling for an early meeting of the Republican National Committee with the idea of calling a special National Convention to take up the question of changing the basis of representation in National Conventions.

The anti-Barnes men also want a resolution incorporated in the platform calling for a change in the representation in the National Committee. They want to base membership in the committee on the last Presidential vote, and not have the membership of the committee composed of one member from each State. If this plan is adopted, some of the Southern States may not be represented in the National Committee. Barnes is opposed to the plan, and the test vote may come upon this resolution.

The platform also will contain planks denouncing the recall of Judges and judicial decisions.

Werner for Chief Judge.

The State Committee held a meeting at the Republican State Headquarters in Thirty-ninth Street last night, but only routine matters were discussed. The matter of candidates had been settled to all intents earlier in the day, when it was practically agreed that the nomination for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals should go to William E. Werner of Rochester, the only Republican member of the court. Leaders of both factions are in favor of Mr. Werner's candidacy, but for the sake of appearances, at least, another name, that of ex-State Senator Edgar Truman Brackett of Saratoga, will be submitted to the delegates and a vote will be taken.

The fight for candidate for Associate Judge lies between Justices Frederick E. Crane of Brooklyn and Frank H. Hiscock of Syracuse. It was said last night that the chances greatly favored Justice Crane, but the delegates will be allowed to vote for their favorites. The solid delegation from Kings County is behind Justice Crane, but Francis Hendricks of Syracuse has been working hard for Justice Hiscock.

One of the features of the convention will be an address by District Attorney Whitman. His subject will be "The Non-Partisan Judiciary." The other speakers will include Elihu Root, Assemblyman Hinman, James M. Beck, and Mr. Hedges. The convention will be called to order by Dr. Schurman, the Temporary Chairman, at 11 o'clock this morning, but an hour later a recess will be taken until 8 o'clock at night, when most of the speeches will be made.

BAY STATE PRIMARY TO-DAY.

Gardner's Contest for Nomination for Governor Leads in Interest.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—Sharp contests in both the Republican and Democratic Parties are to be decided by the State primaries to-morrow.

The only serious contest among the Democrats is between Richard H. Long and Edward P. Barry for Lieutenant Governor. Long is the selection of the State Committee, but Barry has made a bitter fight. Only last year Long was a candidate for nomination on the Republican ticket.

Republican voters have to choose between Representative Augustus P. Gardner, Senator Lodge's son-in-law, and Col. Everett C. Benton as candidates for Governor. Gardner has made his fight on progressive lines. Benton has been called a stand patter.

Lieut.-Gov. David I. Walsh is an unopposed candidate for head of the Democratic ticket, and Charles S. Bird will lead the Progressives for a second time.

It was reported to-day that Gov. Foss, elected as a Democrat, who failed to receive a sufficient indorsement to run on the Republican primary ticket for Governor, would enter the field as an independent candidate for a fourth term. He has refused to commit himself on the subject.

AFFINITY DIVIDES AN AUTHOR'S HOME

Mrs. Aubrey Lanston Says Husband Urged Her to Share It with His Soulmate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Asserting that her husband had sought her permission to maintain a "soul mate" whom he had met in Belgium, Mrs. Ethel V. Lanston to-day entered suit for a limited divorce in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia against Aubrey Lanston, author, and the son of the late Talbert Lanston, inventor of the Monotype typesetting machine.

Mrs. Lanston sets forth that while they were traveling in Europe with their two children Mr. Lanston fell in love with a Belgian girl and demanded that Mrs. Lanston permit the woman to become his affinity. Mrs. Lanston alleges that her husband defends his course on the ground that "such relationships are deemed free from any moral objection among many European people."

With the petition the wife filed two letters which she said her husband wrote to the Belgian girl.

The Lanstons arrived in New York from Europe last Saturday. Mrs. Lanston asked the court to issue an order restraining her husband from leaving the country and joining his affinity abroad until he had provided for her. Mr. Lanston came to Washington to-night, and the papers in the suit were served on him.

The Lanstons are well to do. In her petition Mrs. Lanston says that Mr. Lanston is the owner of a trust estate of $100,000, and that in addition he has an income of $600 a month from the estate of his father.

Here are the two letters that Mrs. Lanston says were written by her husband to his affinity:

Little One: Your previous letter is in my wife's possession, but I know you have written. I infinitely regret not to be able to invite you to Paris, darling. Be good enough to accept my best thanks for your fondness and do not think that I am ungrateful. Far from it, but at the present moment it is practically impossible.

You tell me, darling, that you have not fine dresses like my wife; but remember I never saw you in any other dress than the one you are wearing now, yet always found you charming. You will understand that I am not a millionaire, but next Winter you will have dresses perhaps not so grand, but of the kind that will suit you very well.

About the first week in October I will deposit a sum to your credit with one of the large Brussels stores. It will not be a large one, of course, but it will be sufficient to begin with; after that you will receive from me every week another remittance, as I told you, without any other gifts. The reason is, that I am almost at the end of this big journey with my family, and that before going to you will have to give them much money, and because again I will have then to cross over to Belgium.

When you write to me do not sign your letter "Margot la Belle," darling. It's true that you are pretty, but it is not so nice to see it said by you about yourself. Nay; do not be annoyed because I tell you that, pray. You see what an old man I am, and that is the reason why I consider myself privileged to give you advice. Your fond letters were most precious to me. I read them and read them again with much love, little one.

Here's the other letter:

Darling: This evening—if you like it—I am taking the nurse's part while the real nurse has gone out with my wife to the Moulin Rouge. The nurse has not yet seen this show—which is not so good as usually at this theatre.

Well, I am watching over my young girl. Do you blame me because of the children, little one? Up to now I have done the most I could in this respect. It is impossible to continue this marital life, even if you did not exist. It is quite an impossibility.

You do not guess how I have your comfort to heart. I have lots of respect for little girls who do work. As a writer I understand the difficulties, aspirations, disappointments of such a life. I really admire the courage of these girls in spite of their being tired and hungry.

I am glad I can help you—give you these little things, and I will be glad if you do use these opportunities to be really the good and gentle little woman which I dare say you yearn to be. I am no reformer, darling, no, no. Life is too short, is it not? But I do hope that in gentle life, freed from wants and angry thoughts, you will forget all ugly things, and think but of nice ones!

I will be very, very happy when I will see in your glance the two things: Love of my own self and the inspiration to frame your destiny to be really gentle and good, and not for money's sake, but for your own character's sake, to command respect and respect yourself.

That is what I mean when I tell you I love you.

ALLAY LONDON BANK FEARS.

Opening of American Branches Not Contemplated, Say Financiers.

Bankers in this city said yesterday that no such radical departure from existing practice was involved in the clause of the Owen-Glass bill authorizing national banks to establish branches abroad as was supposed in London, according to advices from that city.

American bankers already have branches there and on the continent, such as Morgan, Grenfell & Co. in London, Morgan, Harjes & Co. in Paris, and branches of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in London, Paris, and Berlin. Other trust companies also have branches in several European capitals. The same opportunity would simply be extended to national banks.

As to talk of retaliation, they pointed out that many of the principal European banks already have branches in this country.

The opinion was expressed that if the bill was passed the national banks would be more likely to turn to South America than to Europe as a field for branches.

Rochester Gets a Policewoman.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Rochester's first policewoman was appointed this morning in the person of Miss Nellie L. McElroy, who will report for duty on Oct. 1 at a salary of $60 per month. Miss McElroy will wear a blue uniform, a small toque, and a police shield. She will not carry a club nor a gun.

BRYAN EDUCATING SEVERAL YOUNG MEN

Martine, Defending Secretary's Lectures, Says He Supports Missionaries Also.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—During a brief defense of Secretary Bryan's lecture tours to-day, Senator Martine told the Senate that some of Mr. Bryan's "fixed charges" were the education of several young men.

"A few years ago Mr. Bryan was maintaining and educating two boys from Japan," declared Mr. Martine, "and to-day I believe he is educating three or four young men."

No other Senator continued the subject and Mr. Martine's speech did not reveal who were Mr. Bryan's proteges.

"I have not talked with Mr. Bryan," said Senator Martine after his statement on the floor, "but I believe he is now educating and supporting at least four young students. I believe further that out of his own pocket he is supporting a missionary in every independent foreign missionary field."

Considerable comment was aroused here by Senator Martine's statement. Friends of the Secretary said that they knew Mr. Bryan had been devoting part of his earnings to educating young men in whom he was interested, but they did not know who these youths were.

A close associate of the Secretary said that Mr. Bryan had educated and cared for a young Japanese named Yamashita who had taken the name of his benefactor and put it in front of his Japanese cognomen. This man stated that several other boys had been educated by Mr. Bryan.

In a statement printed in The Commoner concerning his Chautauqua lectures Mr. Bryan spoke of certain fixed charges to which he had been put, and it was understood among his friends that these referred to money expended in educating young men in whom he was interested.

EX-CONDUCTOR TESTIFIES.

Tells Arbitrators of Pay and Work on the New Haven.

Charles S. Brigham, a retired passenger conductor and general chairman for the Order of Railway Conductors on the New Haven Road, testified yesterday before the Arbitration Board in the case of the conductors and trainmen against the Eastern railroads that the conductor of a fast train between New York and Boston got $6.24 for the five hours' work involved. Under the proposed scale he would get about $6.93.

Mr. Brigham explained that the conductor was on duty half an hour before the train left, and he got nothing for overtime if it was late, as the scale permitted the company to keep him on duty for ten hours in making the run. He added that the conductor got in only from twenty-one to twenty-four days work a month, and that half the days he was away from home and had to pay for room and meals. Passenger conductors on the New Haven, he said, had a guarantee of $125 a month.

"What would you consider ideal conditions for a passenger conductor?" asked Elisha Lee, representing the railroads.

"The same work as at present with more pay," responded the witness.

The hearings will go on to-day.

FOUR BLOWN TO PIECES.

Du Pont Powder Plant Building at Gibbstown Demolished by Explosion

WOODBURY, N. J., Sept. 22.—Four men who were at work in the gelatine building in the powder plant of the du Pont Company at Gibbstown were blown to pieces this morning when an explosion destroyed the building. What caused the explosion will never be known. Henry Fledman was in the building to oil the machinery. In it with him were Harry Vannen, Elim Banina, and Michael Drussmand, all of Paulsboro. The three latter were what are known as "powder punchers."

Several other buildings, although each was isolated from the one that blew up, were damaged, but there was only one explosion. Many of the workers about the plant were cut and bruised by flying missiles, but none was seriously hurt. Coroner Black took charge and will hold an inquest to-morrow, although it will be a formality, as no one can tell what caused the explosion. The earth was shaken for miles and the detonation was heard over a wide area.

EDITOR STRICKEN, BUT GAME

Legs Paralyzed, He Has a Policeman Carry Him to His Sanctum.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Ill., Sept. 22.—When Eugene McKnight, editor of The Madison Republic, poet and philosopher, got out of bed this morning his legs would not sustain his weight and he fell to the floor. He made several vain attempts to stand, and then he realized that his legs were paralyzed. He called up Police Headquarters, and Capt. William Street, one of the biggest policemen in the country, came to his assistance.

Street took the editor on his back and trudged off with him to his sanctum. There he placed McKnight in his editorial chair and got messengers, who proceeded to gather the day's news.

The Chief of Police came in with the invalid's dinner, and the businessmen of the town, as they heard of the editor's affliction, found time to hurry to the office and express their sympathy for McKnight. He kept open house all day, and between times jotted down some of the philosophical paragraphs and verses that are a delight to the town.

River Boat Hits Swimming Deer.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The steamer B. B. Odell on her up-trip last evening, struck a buck deer with spreading antlers in the Hudson River, off Iona Island. The animal, which was not badly hurt, swam to the shore and disappeared in the woods.

MISS PULITZER WEDS BROTHER'S TUTOR

Married at Lake Tahoe, Cal., to William Gray Elmslie, Son of an English Judge.

FAMILY APPROVES MATCH

Mrs. William S. Moore, Bride's Sister, Only Member of Family Present—May Live in Winnipeg.

A formal wedding notice which reached THE NEW YORK TIMES last night was the first public announcement of the fact that on Saturday Miss Constance Helen Pulitzer, the younger daughter of the late Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, had been married at Lake Tahoe, California, to William Gray Elmslie of London.

Miss Pulitzer met Mr. Elmslie in 1907, when he was at the Pulitzer Summer home in Bar Harbor as tutor to Herbert Pulitzer, the youngest son of the late Mr. Pulitzer, who under his will inherits the largest share of The World property. After completing his service as tutor Mr. Elmslie went into business in Winnipeg, Canada. He is the son of an English Judge.

Miss Constance Pulitzer has been in frail health for some time past, and last Winter she went out to California with her sister, Mrs. William S. Moore, who was Miss Edith Pulitzer. The sisters went to Lake Tahoe for the Summer, and Mrs. Moore was the only member of the Pulitzer family to attend the wedding.

Lake Tahoe is one of the most beautiful lakes in the United States. It lies on the border between California and Nevada, and there are many hotels upon its borders. With the full details of the wedding lacking here last night, it was supposed that the ceremony took place at one of these hotels.

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, the mother of the bride, is at Bar Harbor; Joseph Pulitzer is in St. Louis, and Ralph Pulitzer is at his New York home in East Seventy-third Street. Although none of these members of the family witnessed the wedding of the younger daughter, and although there had been no announcement of the engagement, the marriage was not at all unexpected among friends of the Pulitzers, and the announcement sent out last night was made with the authorization of the family.

No announcement has been made here of the plans of the Elmslies, but it is assumed that they will make their home in Winnipeg. Mrs. Elmslie inherited a life estate of $750,000 under the will of her father.

Miss Pulitzer has been active in the younger set in society since she laid aside mourning for her father, who died on Oct. 29, 1911, aboard his yacht, the Liberty, in Charleston Harbor, S. C. Her mother gave one small entertainment last Winter, a dinner, and a theatre party for her son, Herbert Pulitzer, and her nephew, Worthington Davis. Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer, a daughter-in-law, chaperoned the party, which was for young girls and boys home from school.

Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer was Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Seward Webb, and her marriage to Miss Pulitzer's brother took place in 1905. In 1910 another brother, Joseph Pulitzer, was married to Miss Eleanor Wickham of St. Louis. Her elder sister, Miss Edith Pulitzer, was married in December, 1911, to William S. Moore, a son of Mrs. Clement C. Moore and the late Mr. Moore, and a grandson of Clement Moore who wrote "The Night Before Christmas."

Miss Constance Pulitzer was her sister's only attendant at the wedding, which was solemnized quietly at the Pulitzer town house in East Seventy-third Street, on account of mourning. Mr. and Mrs. Moore spend most of their time in Europe.

Miss Pulitzer's mother was Miss Kate Davis of Washington, D. C. She is a niece of Jefferson Davis, and married Joseph Pulitzer in 1877.

SAYS WIFE POISONED CHILD.

Capt. Merriam, Seeking Divorce, Says She Sought His Life Also.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—"She attempted to poison herself many times and gave poison to our child. There is army medical testimony to support that," declared Capt. Henry C. Merriam of the army to-day, testifying in the divorce suit against his wife. Capt. Merriam had already testified that his wife tried twice to shoot him with his own revolver.

Capt. Merriam said that the women of Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, refused to visit his quarters, and Major Kepphart, the post Commandant, told him of having ordered Mrs. Merriam off the reservation because of her conduct. Her husband's confidence in her was unshaken, and he yielded to her pleading and continued to show a friendly manner toward Major Clarence Murphy, a militia officer, whom he later accused.

MEDAL HERO SAVES 11 LIVES

Capt. Jackson Rescues All Hands from Stranded Schooner Urann.

EDGARTOWN, Mass., Sept. 22.—The five-masted schooner Marcus L. Urann, with coal from Sewall Point, Va., for Boston, ran on the dangerous Skiff's Island Shoal in Muskeget Channel today. For several hours Capt. Benjamin Thomas and his crew of eight, together with the wives of the Captain and the steward, were forced to remain aboard the vessel in a heavy gale until a lift in the dense fog disclosed their presence to those on shore.

Capt. Levi Jackson, holder of a Carnegie medal for life saving exploits, dashed aboard his schooner, Priscilla II., but was unable to bring his little boat alongside the big coaster. Jumping into a dory, he was the first to board the Urann, and, handling the oars himself, helped transfer the women and the sailors, two by two, to the Priscilla without mishap. He thus saved eleven lives.

Skiff's Island has never given up a ship, but the wrecking tug Tasco is expected from New London to-morrow to try to save the Urann.

TAMMANY TO BEGIN WORK.

Headquarters to be Open This Week at Three Places.

Tammany will begin its activity this week in the municipal campaign. It was announced yesterday that the College Men's Organization would open a McCall campaign headquarters in the Forty-second Street Building, at Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue, and that another headquarters, under the auspices of the McCall Association, would be opened at the Hotel Imperial.

The personal headquarters of Mr. McCall, Herman A. Metz, Dr. Thomas H. Darlington, and Joseph A. Goulden will be opened at the same time at the Hotel Martinique, Broadway and Thirty-second Street.

CONVINCED BY DIVINING ROD

Congress of Scientists Decides to Form International Association.

HALLE, Sept. 22.—The congress of scientists which has been meeting here for the purpose of testing the efficacy of the divining rod in discovering underground springs of water and mineral deposits has decided to organize an international association. So many successful experiments were reported to the congress that the Executive Committee was increased by the addition of four members, in the expectation of increased activities in the future.

Tests conducted under the supervision of the congress by divining rod experts resulted in the location of three potash veins, the existence of which was confirmed by mine maps; of coal deposits, and of water courses. One expert found a leak in the city water main.

The congress received authenticated reports that Southwest African farmers are finding water regularly by means of the divining rod.

The congress adjourned to-day.

HIGH COST OF CHILDREN.

Expense of Rearing Child Up 40 Per Cent. in 10 Years.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—That the annual cost of rearing a child has in the last ten years advanced from $101 to $140, or practically 40 per cent., is among the interesting facts presented in a report just issued by the Chicago Nursery and Half-Orphan Asylum, an institution in active operation in this city since 1860.

The asylum has cared for more than 4,500 children, for periods varying from a few weeks to several years, since 1874. According to the report, from 1874 to 1883 the cost of maintaining one child for a year was $79.98, while in the period from 1884 to 1893 it was $88.68. From 1894 to 1903 this cost was about $101.45, while in the period from 1904 up to the present time it has cost approximately $140.60 a child a year.

Except in destitute cases, when the entire expense is borne by the institution, the parents are required to pay a small weekly fee toward the maintenance of each child. In cases of emergency, arising from illness or other causes, the fee is remitted until the parent is able to pay.

CANNON WILL RUN AGAIN.

Ex-Speaker to Announce His Candidacy to Old District To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 22.—Ex-Speaker Joseph G. Cannon will make formal announcement to his former constituency to-morrow that he will be a candidate for Congress, at the next election. He says that a two-years' rest is long enough for any man, and that he has no doubt that his old friends and associates want to see him back in the House of Representatives.

The announcement of Cannon's candidacy is part of the plan of the Republican Congressional Committee, aiming to carry Illinois in the Congressional contest.

The committee thinks there is a good prospect of electing nineteen of the twenty-seven Illinois Representatives.

"Uncle Joe" is to start his campaign to-morrow in an address at the Westfield Horse Show, where he will outline his platform.

REVOLT IN ECUADOR.

Barracks at Riobamba Attacked—Assailants Are Repulsed.

GUAYAQUIL, Sept. 22.—Armed groups attacked the barracks at Riobamba, capital of Chimborazo Province, last night, but were repulsed.

Three persons were killed and five wounded.

PUCCINI'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Motor Boat He Is Steering Collides with One Carrying His Family.

PISA, Sept. 22.—Giacomo Puccini, the composer, had a narrow escape from drowning to-day on Lake Massaciuccoli, on the shore of which he has a villa.

While Signor Puccini was steering his motor boat it collided with another motor boat containing the members of his family.

Both boats were badly damaged and began to fill rapidly. Other boats rushed to their assistance, and Signor Puccini and his family were taken aboard.

ASLEEP IN CRAFT ADRIFT.

Owner Rescued from Houseboat Which Breaks Up on Sound Rocks.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, Sept. 22.—The houseboat Arkadea, owned by Philip Johnston, a Standard Oil salesman, broke her moorings in Long Island Sound off City Island in the high wind about 5 o'clock this morning and was blown a mile to Hunter Island, where she was dashed to pieces on the rocks.

Mrs. Johnston went to New York City yesterday, leaving her husband, who cannot swim, alone. He was asleep while the houseboat drifted. James Beecroft, a salesman, and John Langnitz of Pelham Manor, who were camping on Hunter Island, swam out to the wrecked craft, and Beecroft dived into the cabin to rescue Mr. Johnston. Mrs. Johnston's Airedale terrier was taken from the water nearly drowned, and was resuscitated by artificial respiration.

DIE AFTER VACCINATION.

Two Children Contract Lockjaw When Scabs Are Removed.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Sept. 22.—Lockjaw having resulted from the infection of vaccination wounds, Raymond F. Clee, 5 years old, and Katherine Flynn, 6 years old, both of Morrisville, Penn., are dead in Mercer Hospital here. They succumbed late last night, despite the work of several doctors.

The children submitted to vaccination about Sept. 1, as is required by the State school law. They had about recovered, but the scabs were accidentally torn from their arms. They failed to inform their parents until blood poisoning had developed. They were brought to the local hospital on Saturday.

ADIRONDACK FIRES OUT.

Rain Stops the Spread of Flames—Little Green Timber Destroyed.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—The heavy rains of the past two days have practically extinguished the forest fires in the Adirondacks. The Federal troops, who have been helping civilians to fight the flames, expect to be ordered back to Plattsburg soon.

Little green timber has been destroyed, according to the State Conservation Commission, the fires having been kept practically within an area that had previously been burned over. The State, however, has been put to heavy expense for the services of fire fighters.

Procession Halted Many Times to Secure It—Overflow Service Held in St. Paul's Chapel.

With the simple ritual of the Episcopal Church and with only the members of the family and close friends in public and private life present, the body of William Jay Gaynor was lowered into the grave shortly after 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon on Alpine Hill, one of the highest knolls in Greenwood Cemetery, which stands near the south gate. But before the body arrived at its final resting place it had received the homage of 500,000 persons, who stood for hours to add by their presence to the impressiveness of one of the most imposing funerals ever seen in this city.

A more reverent throng than that which gathered to do honor to the Mayor could not be imagined. Fully 160,000 persons saw the cortège in Manhattan alone, it was estimated, while those who lined the eight miles of the route from this borough to the cemetery made up the balance of the 500,000. An escort a mile long and made up of 12,000 persons, representing all departments of the city's life, accompanied the body to Brooklyn.

The ceremonies of the day began shortly after 10:30 o'clock in the morning when the procession started from the City Hall, where the Mayor's body had been lying in state since Friday evening, for the funeral service in Trinity Church. From Trinity the cortège passed over the Brooklyn Bridge into Brooklyn, the Mayor's home borough, by the Brooklyn Borough Hall, and out to Greenwood Cemetery. The body was borne through the streets in a massive bronze coffin which rested on a high catafalque. The catafalque was drawn by sixteen black horses, heavily draped, and each led by an honor man from the Police and Fire Departments who was known personally by the late Mayor.

Business was suspended throughout the city in the funeral hour in memory of the Mayor, and thousands of school children paid their respects to him in appropriate services.

Crowd Gathers Early.

City Hall Park was surrounded by thousands of persons as early as 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Park Row, Mail Street, Broadway, and Chambers Street were guarded by 500 policemen, stationed a few paces apart, and no one not connected with the funeral ceremony was allowed to pass the lines. Two hours before the time set for the body to be taken to Trinity those invited to accompany it began to assemble in the rooms assigned to them in City Hall. They passed into the Hall through a bower of palms, ferns and flowers, and as they entered they faced the Mayor's bier with the guard of honor around it.

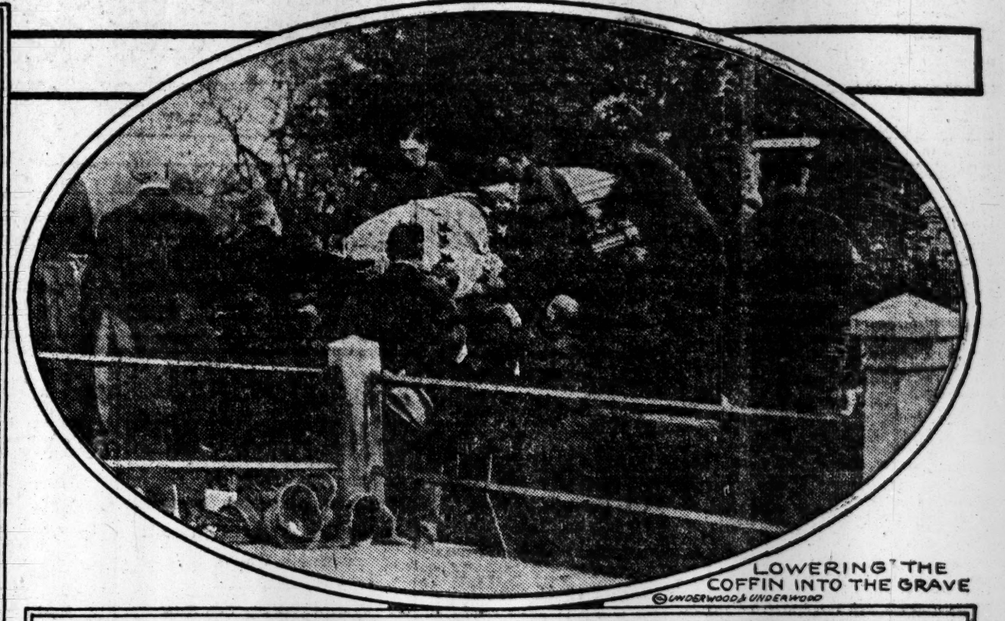

The honorary pallbearers gathered in Mayor Kline's private office. The members of the Board of Estimate, of the Board of Aldermen's committee, the heads of departments, the committee of the Legislature, the members of the Public Service Commission, and the Mayors of other cities assembled in the Mayor's public reception room. All of the Justices of the Appellate Division, Supreme Court, of Special Sessions, and the Judges of General Sessions and the City Magistrates met in the Governor's Room. The 250 members of the citizens' escort awaited the march to the church in the old Council Chamber.

While the ushers were showing the members of the escort to their rooms some 200 boys and girls entered the City Hall. They were headed by Frank R. Rix, a director of music in the public schools, and were pupils from many Brooklyn high schools. They had been permitted to pass through the police lines when they asserted that they were to sing as the body was carried from the City Hall. There was a conference, and then Inspector Titus led the pupils from the Hall and assigned them to places directly in front of the main steps. But there must be no singing, he told their leader. At 10 o'clock the streets bordering the park became so congested that a detachment of reserves was summoned to drive the crowd into the side streets. The lines were pushed beyond Chambers Street, and many persons ran to the platforms of the elevated railroad, hoping to catch a glimpse of the departure of the body. But through it all the crowd was good natured and so silent that the elevator bell in the Arrival of the Catafalque.

A few minutes after 10 o'clock the catafalque, drawn by sixteen jet black horses with tasseled crêpe nets which reached to the ground, arrived in front of the City Hall. The spirited horses were led by eight policemen on the right and eight firemen on the left. The catafalque, which was pyramidal in form and seven feet high, was draped heavily. As it turned into the City Hall Plaza from Park Row the horses made a graceful curve, and at a signal given on a police whistle the funeral car was stopped directly at the foot and in the centre of the main steps to the Hall.

While preparations for the departure of the body from City Hall were being made the greatest display of police ever drafted for a public function assembled in Broadway. At the head of the column was a squadron of mounted men under command of Chief Inspector Schmittberger. Then followed 1,260 infantrymen, all appointed in Mayor Gaynor's administration. They were a fine looking body, the "young blood of the service," as Mayor Gaynor had called them many times. Under the plans drawn up by Police Commissioner Waldo, aided by Capt. Woodward of the regular army, who has had great experience in arranging processions, the entire length of Broadway, from Chambers Street to the Battery, was policed. The policemen were lined up along the curbs so closely that their elbows touched. Every man that could be spared was assigned to duty downtown. It was a tremendous problem that the police had to handle, and they met it well.

The Departure from City Hall.

At 10:33 o'clock Police Lieut. Kennel, the private guard of all of New York City's Mayors since Mayor Strong, and of whom Mayor Gaynor was particularly fond, appeared on the City Hall steps. Close behind him came the bearers, all honor men from the Police and Fire Departments, carrying high the bronze coffin. The shuffling of the feet of the bearers sounded far over the park. Slowly the heavy coffin was borne down the long steps where nineteen days before the Mayor's acceptance of a renomination had been greeted with cheers.

When the bearers got to the sidewalk they stopped while the honorary pallbearers advanced and took places on opposite sides of the coffin and in rows leading to the catafalque. Ex-President William Howard Taft headed the row to the east and Mayor Kline headed the other row. Next to Mr. Taft stood Robert Adamson, secretary to the late Mayor, and then Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, Jacob H. Schiff, Herman Ridder, and James Creelman. Next to Mayor Kline stood Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, and then Corporation Counsel Archibald R. Watson, Justice Keogh, John D. Crimmins, and Edward M. Grout.

The sun came out just as the coffin was put on the top tier of the catafalque, and its rays were reflected in the bronze. The coffin was covered with the Mayor's flag and a wreath of purple orchids and Autumn leaves, sent by Mrs. Gaynor, was hung on the right-hand side of the catafalque. Another wreath of white chrysanthemums and Autumn leaves, the offering of the children of the late Mayor, was hung on the left. The third, a simple wreath of white asters, sent by Lieut. Kennel, was hung on the rear of the car at Mrs. Gaynor's request. Lieut. Kennel showed deep emotion when this wreath was put in place.

Controller Prendergast and Borough President McAneny led the column of members of the Board of Estimate and heads of the different city departments. When they had taken their places behind the catafalque, the sixteen horses were started. The procession departed from the City Hall at 10:38 o'clock exactly. A fractious colt in the second team caused some anxiety when the catafalque had advanced only a few yards. Notwithstanding the urgings of the policeman at its head, the animal sank to its haunches and compelled the horses ahead to pull it along. Then it jumped up suddenly and plunged wildly. Inspector Titus and two aids subdued the animal after a short delay. When the catafalque arrived in Broadway, the escort of police started on the march to Trinity. The mounted squadron had passed the church before all of those who were take part in the procession had fallen into line.

Those in the Procession.

Following the Board of Estimate came this committee representing the Aldermen: J. A. Bolles, Chairman; John Wiemer, Charles W. Dunn, James Hamilton, Max S. Levine, John F. Walsh, and Charles A. Post. They were followed by the heads of departments, thirty-five Commissioners and bureau chiefs, led by Commissioners William H. Edwards of the Street Cleaning Department, Joseph Johnson of the Fire Department, Henry S. Thompson of the Water Department, Arthur J. O'Keeffe of the Bridge Department, and the others who were a part of Mayor Gaynor's administration.

The Justices of the Appellate Division of the First Department came next—George L. Ingraham, Chester B. McLaughlin, Frank C. Laughlin, John Proctor Clarke, Francis M. Scott, Victor J. Dowling, and Henry D. Hotchkiss. From the Second Department there were Almet F. Jenks, Michael H. Hirschberg, Joseph A. Burr, Edward B. Thomas, William J. Carr, Adelbert P. Rich, Luke D. Stapleton, Garret J. Garretson, Frederick E. Crane, and Isaac M. Kapper. Twenty-five Justices of the Supreme Court were next in line—Justices Giegerich, Dugro, Blanchard, Greenbaum, Amend, Davis, Newburger, Goff, Seabury, Platzek, Hendrick, Ford, Brady, Erlanger, Guy, Lehmann, Page, Gavegan, Bijur, Delany, Pendleton, Donnelly, Whitaker, Weeks, and Philbin.

Then followed these Justices of Special Sessions: Chief Justice Russell and Justices Forker, Fleming, Wilkin, Zeller, O'Keefe, Mayo, Ryan, Hoyt, McInerney, Moss, Salmon, Collins, Herrman, and Kernochan.

Twenty Magistrates of the First Division marched next, led by Chief Magistrate William McAdoo, and then came eighteen Magistrates of the Second Division, led by Chief Magistrate Otto Kempner. The Public Service Commission had the next place in line, the Commissioners being Edward E. McCall, Milo R. Maltbie, John E. Eustis, George V. S. Williams, Travis H. Whitney, George S. Coleman, Alfred Craven, and Robert Ridgeway.

The Committee of New York State Mayors, which came next, included F. H. Waldorf of New Rochelle, W. H. Frank of Poughkeepsie, R. M. Coo of Middletown, F. J. Baker of Utica, Otto Pfaff of Oneida, Daniel Sheehan of Elmira, Thomas H. O'Neil of Auburn, Edwin W. Fiske of Mount Vernon, James T. Lennon of Yonkers, and Cornelius F. Burns of Troy. Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston walked with the New York delegation.

Col. Roosevelt, who was one of the citizens' escort, did not attend the funeral. Secretary Adamson had not had time to read his mail, which, he said, probably contained a letter of explanation from the Colonel. Here are the members of the citizens' escort who followed in line behind the delegation of Mayors:

Organizations Represented.

Two hundred firemen chosen under the administration of Mayor Gaynor followed next, with Chief Kenlon at their head. Then out of the side streets and from far above Chambers Street poured the delegations of citizens' organizations which had asked for a place in line. Among the delegations were those from the Broadway Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Association, the United Spanish War Veterans, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Maritime Exchange, the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Produce Exchange, the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange, the Gaynor League, the Sons of Oneida, the Montauk Club of Brooklyn, the Union League Club, the Citizens' League, the Brooklyn Club, New York Newsdealers' Association, Pan-American Society of the United States, Automobile Club of America, Central Mercantile Association, Fifth Avenue Association, Interborough Association of Women Teachers, Independent Order, B'rith Abraham, Grasmere Improvement Association, Manner-Gesangverein Einigkeit, Court House Board, the Brooklyn League, New York Turn-Verein, the Hardware Club.

Broadway Association, Henry Street Settlement, American Museum of Natural History, City Economy League, United Syrian Society, Manufacturers' Association, Latin-American League, Brooklyn Teachers' Association, United Workingman's Party, Marshals' Association of New York City, Federal and State Civil Service Employes, Democratic Organization of Kings Count, Eureka Democratic Club of Bronx County, the Harlem Board of Commerce, North Side Board of Trade, Clermont Heights Property Owners' Association, Staten Island Chamber of Commerce, Sheepshead Bay Board of Trade and Improvement Association, Business Men's Association of Flushing, Italian Societies of Greater New York, Central Federated Union, New York Team Owners' Association, Independent Taxicab Owners' Association, American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, the United Dealers' Association, Equity Congress of Greater New York, Exempt Firemen's Association, Greater New York Live Poultry Dealers' Association, the United Citizen Peddlers' Association of Brooklyn, and the Federation of Citizen Peddlers of Greater New York.

The last of the delegations, the Federation of Citizen Peddlers of New York, was probably the most interesting from a picturesque point of view of any in the cortège. There were over 500 pushcart venders in line. These peddlers were among the first to announce their intention of marching in the funeral. They had asked for 400 seats in Trinity, and when they learned that there were only 660 seats in the church they were much disappointed. But Secretary Adamson did send them five seats, and the rest said they would be glad to march.

Sandwiched in between the citizens' delegations were thousands of civil service employes from the various departments. All the departments had been closed for the day, and the employes had expressed a desire to show respect to their late chief.

Thousands Line Broadway.

Broadway presented a wonderful sight as the procession passed. The sidewalks were packed fifteen to twenty deep. Overhead, to the very roofs, the windows of the skyscrapers were black with spectators. Almost all of the business houses on lower Broadway had suspended business for the funeral hour and the employes sought points of vantage from which to view the cortège. Many risked their lives to get a glimpse of the bronze coffin on the funeral car. Daring youths leaned far from the windows and from the balconies, and some even climbed out on flagpoles which supported flags at half mast all along the way. On the twenty-fifth story of the Woolworth Building a scaffold was suspended, and even from this faces peered.

It was 11:03 o'clock when the catafalque arrived at Trinity. Four minutes later the carriers took the coffin from the car and carried it down the aisle of the church. The sidewalks in front of Trinity and for a block in either direction were cleared and except for the shuffling of the bearers' feet no sound was heard except the funeral knell from the chimes in the spire.

The north gate to the churchyard was reserved for ticket holders, nearly all of whom were in the line of march. As the escort entered the gate the brilliant uniforms of the military men in the cortege relieved the sombreness of the scene. Among those in uniform were Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow and staff, representing the Atlantic Fleet; Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding the Army in the Department of the East; Capt. Albert Gleaves, commanding the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan and staff of the National Guard, and Major Schermerhorn, representing William Sulzer. Six women were in line, all representatives of the Interborough Women Teachers' Association, whose "equal pay" bill was signed by Mayor Gaynor.

While the services were going on inside the church those in the cortège who held no tickets of admission to the church continued to file by. As each delegation passed the church hats were removed in salute. The file passed for nearly half an hour after the church had been filled. When the first delegation got to Battery Park it was reversed and halted, and the same thing was done in the case of those that followed. The mounted patrolmen and the regiment of police infantry passed to the front of the delegation for the march to the cemetery.

Pickpocket Causes a Disturbance.

Fifteen minutes before the service in the church was over a woman's scream was heard directly across from the Trinity Churchyard. Immediately the crowd at that point began shoving and jostling, and a platoon of policemen was brought up. The police pushed the line back. Again the woman's scream was heard in the middle of the crowd. She was suffering from hysteria, it was said.

The trouble was all explained a little later when a policeman dragged out of the crowd a young man who tried to hide his face. At the heels of the policeman came a man who was demonstrating how he had caught the pickpocket. The policeman led the youth to the Old Slip Station, the complainant following. There the prisoner said he was Harry Moss of 298 Sumpter Street, Brooklyn. The complainant was R. W. McEwan of Whippany, N. J. He said that he had felt tugging at his pocket and that he had then raised the cry of "pickpocket." While Mr. McEwan was telling his story Leo Bass of 215 East 106th Street entered the station and said that he had lost his pocketbook in the crowd. This incident was the only one to mar the perfect police arrangements along Broadway. Veterans in the Police Department admitted afterward that they had not hoped for so little trouble.

THE SERVICE IN TRINITY.

Dignity and Simplicity the Keynote of an Impressive Ceremony.

The service in Trinity Church was most impressive, and the simplicity of the decorations and the service itself were thoroughly in harmony with the Spartan character of the late Mayor. Awaiting the arrival of the body in the church were Bishop Greer, Bishop Suffragan Brch, the Rev. Dr. Manning, rector of Trinity; the Rev. Dr. Frank Page of Truro Parish, Fairfax County, Va., who was formerly rector of St. John's Church in Brooklyn, which the Mayor attended, and the twelve curates of Trinity Parish. With the exception of the beautiful floral offerings that were banked in profusion in front of the chancel, the interior of the church was devoid of funeral trappings.

The approach of the funeral procession was announced by a knell rung on the chimes in the spire of the church. As the notes of a bugle proclaimed the arrival of the head of the line at the entrance to the edifice, the great organ pealed forth the opening notes of the Dead March from Saul. Then the choir boys of Trinity filed into the church and took their places, and the Crucifer walked slowly down the aisle, followed by Bishop Greer, Suffragan Bishop Burch, Dr. Manning, and Dr. Page, to meet the body.

The Arrival of the Body.

As soon as the pall bearers, led by ex-President Taft and Mayor Kline, had taken their seats in the front pews on the left centre aisle opposite those reserved for the Gaynor family, the coffin appeared in the doorway, held high on the shoulders of the policemen and firemen who bore it.

Suffragan Bishop Burch preceded the body down the aisle reading the beautiful ritual of the Episcopal Church beginning:

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die."

Police Lieut. Kennel, the late Mayor's body guard, marched at the head of the coffin. He was a striking figure, as with head erect and his uniform cap pressed against his shoulder, he walked slowly to the foot of the aisle and then, facing to the front, stood at attention while the body bearers put the coffin in place at the chancel rail. Mrs. Gaynor, leaning on the arm of her son Rufus, followed the coffin, and then came Norman, the other son, and the late Mayor's daughters, the Misses Ruth, Mabla, and Elinor Gaynor, and Mrs. Harry Vingut and Mrs. H. Seward Webb walking with their husbands. Thomas Gaynor, the Mayor's brother, and other relatives had seats with the immediate family.

When the coffin was in place the body bearers went to the right and left of the chancel. The church was not overcrowded, but no church in this city ever held a greater number of prominent men.

Episcopal Ritual Followed.

The services lasted a little more than an hour. As soon as the coffin had been put in place, the choir chanted the psalm beginning: "Lord, let me know mine end, and the number of my days, that I may be certified how long I have to live." The lesson was from the fifteenth chapter of the First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, and was read by Dr. Manning. After that the choir sang: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death." The first hymn, in which the congregation joined, had been a favorite with Mayor Gaynor. It was Dykes's "Lead, Kindly Light."

At the end of this hymn the choir, led by the crucifer and followed by the clergymen, left the chancel and formed in a circle around the coffin, Bishop Greer standing at the head, with Bishop Suffragan Burch on his right and Dr. Manning on his left. The white-robed choir then chanted:

Man, that is born of a woman, hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery. He cometh up, and is cut down, like a flower; he fleeth as it were a shadow, and never continueth in one stay.

In the midst of life we are in death: of whom may we seek for succor, but of thee, O Lord, who for our sins art justly displeased?

Bishop Greer then offered a prayer, and at its conclusion the choir sang "I Hear a Voice from Heaven Saying Unto Me." The clergymen and the choir then retired and Bishop Greer gave the benediction. The recessional was "Nearer, My God, to Thee," another hymn of which Mayor Gaynor was fond, and this brought the service to a close.

As the coffin was borne from the church it was preceded by the pall bearers, who formed in two lines at the church entrance through which the coffin was carried. They retained their places while the coffin was put upon the catafalque, and then entered carriages for the trip to the cemetery.

After the service the church was thrown open to the public, and thousands took advantage of the opportunity to look at the beautiful floral tributes banked in front of the chancel. After an hour's inspection had been permitted the church was closed and ambulances from the hospitals arrived to take the flowers to their institutions. This distribution was made at Mrs. Gaynor's request.

THE TRIP TO THE CEMETERY.

Escort Alarmed When Coffin Slips on the Catafalque.

Through eight miles of city streets, lined solidly with reverent onlookers, Mayor Gaynor's body was borne to the family plot in Greenwood Cemetery, in South Brooklyn. To the solemn tolling of the bell in Trinity Church the ponderous bronze coffin was carried from the church at 12:40 o'clock in the afternoon and put upon the catafalque. Then the long cortège started upon the march to the grave.

In the carriage directly following the catafalque rode Mrs. Gaynor and her son Rufus. Miss Ruth, the youngest child of the Mayor, also rode with her mother and brother. Miss Marion Gaynor, Norman Gaynor, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vingut rode in one of the coaches which followed, with other carriages, behind the firemen who marched in the rear of Mrs. Gaynor's coach. Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb and the other members of the bereaved family rode in the coach directly behind the three carriages which contained the pallbearers.

To a funeral march played by the Police Band of eighty-five pieces, which followed directly behind the squad of mounted patrolmen at the head of the cortège, the procession passed up Broadway from Trinity Church. Behind the catafalque walked Lieut. Kennel, and on either side of the street were uniformed policemen, holding in check the thousands who crowded the sidewalks.

Marchers Salute the Mayor's Flag.

As the head of the procession arrived at St. Paul's Chapel the bell of the church began to toll and some person in an adjoining skyscraper threw to the breeze the Mayor's flag. Deputy Fire Chief John Binns, who headed the marching firemen, brought his baton to salute. As he did so his men touched the visors of their caps. As in the case of the march to the church, the windows, cornices, and roofs of the office buildings in Broadway were thronged. When the cortège turned into Park Row it was seen that hundreds of persons had clambered upon the floors of a building in course of demolition, and fearing that the structure would collapse the police compelled all save the workmen employed upon it to descend. City Hall Park and Park Row below the entrance to the south roadway to Brooklyn Bridge were packed and from the windows and roofs of City Hall invited guests gazed upon the procession.

When the head of the line turned into the southern roadway of the bridge in the march toward Brooklyn, the police band stopped playing and the marchers broke step by order of Chief Engineer Johnson of the Department of Bridges, who feared that the steady tramp of the marching thousands might weaken the great span. All traffic on the bridge had been stopped at noon and not a wheel turned as the cortege wended slowly across the structure. Even the promenade was kept clear. In North William Street and in the other side streets under the bridge thousands of men, women, and children were congregated to peer up at the funeral car. From the beginning of the southern roadway to the end of the Brooklyn approach to the bridge employes of the Department of Bridges, with crêpe-bound sleeves, to the number of 1,000, stood at intervals of five feet with uncovered heads on either side of the way. Through this lane the cortege passed into the home borough of the late Mayor.

The roofs of the tenements and warehouses under the Brooklyn approach to the bridge were black with spectators, and so were the fire escapes and windows. Five hundred uniformed conductors and motormen of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company stood at atten-

Ask yourself these questions

IS my present system of sales records all it might be?

DOES it give me all the information I should like to have?

DOES it show whether a customer has been neglected or a prospect not followed up?

DOES it show which salesmen are making good? And which are not?

CAN I tell, in five minutes, or in five hours, the lines that are selling best in each sales territory?

If the answers to these questions are No! Not quite! No! Yes! No!!—the sooner you look into the Library Bureau method of sales records, the better. The brightest sales managers in the country are adopting it. One sales manager, through the profit on one sale—the direct result of the L. B. method—paid for the system twice over.

The Well Dressed New Yorker
Edited by Beaunash
THE optimist is smilingly content to go to Heaven. The pessimist scowlingly demands to know "what holds the place up." The Well Dressed New Yorker is an optimist to the flip of his hat and the tip of his "spat." He courts cheery colors and "peppery" patterns. He sees the rainbow through the shower. His creed is, "There may be another and better world, but this one's pretty good."
Our whole shop is aglow with bright things. Our very windows warm you with their rippling sunshine of color. We refuse room to the dull, drab and dismal in Men's Dress.
From our Town-and-Country Suits and Sport-and-Saunter Topcoats to our Neckscarfs, Shirts, Hose, Handkerchiefs and Hats, we, and we alone, twang the gleeful string of Optimism.

HALF A MILLION SEE GAYNOR'S FUNERAL

Coffin Slips On Funeral Car.

As the funeral car turned into Liberty Street in Brooklyn, where there is a slight grade, two of the bolts holding the coffin in place slipped and the coffin began to slide backward slowly. Lieut. Kennel stopped the catafalque at once, and the pallbearers readjusted the coffin. Three blocks further on, at Liberty and Cushing Streets, the same thing occurred, and this time the procession halted for four minutes until everything had been made secure. Through Liberty Street, across Fulton, and into Clinton Street, wound the cortège, when for the third time the coffin slipped from position. This time it threatened to slide endwise over the side of the catafalque. Once again it was replaced, and the procession was resumed.

As the procession passed the Crescent Athletic Club, at Pierrepont and Clinton Streets, the national colors were dipped three times from the flag mast and a crêpe-draped portrait of Mayor Gaynor was unveiled in one of the upper windows.

From Clinton Street the marchers turned into Montague Street, where the jam of spectators rivaled that of lower Broadway in Manhattan. The window sills and copings of the office buildings were all occupied, and scores of spectators had clambered into the branches of trees. When the procession got to Court Street and Borough Hall Park, by far the largest assemblage of the day was seen. Fulton Street and Borough Hall Square were crowded from curb to curb, and the granite steps of the hall were as black as the marble columns pillars which towered above them. Over the portico was exposed a large painting of the late Mayor.

It was at this point in the procession that the uniformed marchers composing the division of civic organizations fell out of line and disbanded. This led to considerable confusion as the marchers broke ranks and mingled with the throngs upon the sidewalks. More than a score of these organizations were in line and constituted the rear division of the cortège.

The confusion, though, did not delay the vanguard of the procession, which continued unhampered in a perfectly policed lane through Court Street to Schermerhorn. As far as the eye could see Schermerhorn Street was lined with spectators, who had been waiting patiently since 10 o'clock in the morning to view the cortége. As the line passed the clubhouse of Brooklyn Lodge No. 1, B. P. O. E., it was observed that the Elk's clock pointed to the hour of 11, which indicates to members of that fraternal organization the period of meditation upon the merits of members who have passed away. It was explained that this had been done as a tribute to the late Mayor, although he was not a member of the order.

Once again on Flatbush Avenue, near Sterling Place the uniformed pallbearers were frightened as the coffin slid slowly backward on its platform. There is a sharp incline at this point on the avenue, and it was several minutes before the bearers could get the heavy coffin once more into place. At this point in the line of march 900 children from Public School 111 were drawn up.

As the cortège turned from Flatbush Avenue into Eighth Avenue, and passed the Gaynor home, a streamer was thrown across the street bearing the words, "He was Our Neighbor and Friend." On the steps of the Montauk Club, Mayor Gaynor's favorite club, which is almost directly across from his house, the Board of Governors stood with uncovered heads.

Children Salute the Body.

At Seventh Street and Eighth Avenue the boys and girls of St. Xavier's School were marshaled, 700 strong, each bearing a flag of the city. The flags were brought to salute and dipped in unison three times as the body of the Mayor went by. At Fourteenth Street and Eighth Avenue, where Public School 107 stands, the pupils were mustered in the yard, and one of the bigger boys stood at the head of the steps, holding a large American flag. Just beyond, at Windsor Place and Eighth Avenue, is the Home for the Aged, conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor. Twelve of the nuns stood on the steps, clad in the mouse-colored habit of their order, silently telling their beads as the cortège passed.

Here again the watchfulness of Lieut. Kennel prevented a mishap. There is a steep down grade on Prospect Avenue, and as the funeral car jolted its way over the rough cobblestones the coffin began to slide forward. At first imperceptibly, and then with visible momentum, the heavy metal coffin slipped from the retaining bolts. Lieut. Kennel stopped the catafalque, and by the combined efforts of the twelve uniformed pall bearers the coffin was pushed back into place.

When the procession turned from Prospect Avenue into Fourth Avenue a stream of persons moving in the direction of Greenwood Cemetery was encountered. At Fourth Avenue and Nineteenth Street the members of Hook and Ladder Company 59 were drawn up at salute, under command of Deputy Fire Chief Langdon. Behind the blue-clad ranks was stationed the fire truck, and as the cortège passed the bell of the truck was tolled.

Arrival at the Cemetery.

Here the muffled clang of the bell in the cemetery chapel apprized the marchers and the occupants of the long line of carriages that the end of the eight-mile trip was at hand. As the procession turned from Fourth Avenue into Twenty-fifth Street the coffin slipped from position for the last time. Lieut. Kennel then ordered the two rear pallbearers, a policeman and fireman, to climb upon the back of the catafalque and hold the coffin in place until it got to the grave.

The cortége entered the cemetery at 4:05 o'clock, but it was 4:31 o'clock before it got to the grave.

One of the interesting features of the march to the cemetery was an old man, clad in a faded G. A. R. uniform, who fell in behind the catafalque in front of Mayor Gaynor's home in Eighth Avenue. One of the policemen was about to order him from the line, when the veteran appealed to Lieut. Kennel in a quavering voice to be permitted to stay. When he showed a personal letter which he had received two years ago from the Mayor, Lieut. Kennel said that he might march. The old man said he was Arthur E. Turple of Sailors' Snug Harbor.

"I walked all the way in from Snug Harbor to pay my tribute to Mayor Gaynor's memory," he explained, "and it would have been dreadful if I had been turned back at the last moment. Mayor Gaynor was very kind to me once. I am not going to tell you what he did for me, but it was something which I shall never forget. They tried to keep me from marching because I was an old man. Bless you, I've marched much further in my day."

THE SERVICE AT THE GRAVE.

Only Relatives and Close Friends Attend Final Ceremony.

The catafalque bearing Mayor Gaynor's body entered the cemetery at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street, and proceeded through Landscape Avenue to Lawn and Locust Avenues, winding around Dale Lake to Summit Avenue, at the base of Alpine Hill. The escort of mounted policemen and patrolmen formed in long lines around the hill in Summit, Alpine and Spruce Avenues and saluted as the catafalque bearing the flag-draped coffin circled the hill to the top.

Before the arrival of the cortège 5,000 persons had gathered on top of Alpine Hill, most of them women and children, who had stood there for hours. They were driven to the foot of the hill. From the entrance gates at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street the walks and roadways along both sides of the route to the grave were lined with onlookers. Inspector O'Brien and Capt. Gray, with several hundred men, had charge of the police arrangements within the cemetery. The large crowds gave them no trouble, but stood in respectful silence as the Mayor's body was borne along.

At the graveside were the Mayor's family, his wife, sons, daughters, and sons-in-law; the honorary pall bearers, headed by ex-President William H. Taft; Mayor Kline, George McAneny, President of the Borough of Manhattan; Controller William A. Prendergast, Fire Commissioner Johnson, Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, and a few friends of the family, and Robert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary.

The services at the grave were conducted by the Rev. Dr. William Holden, pastor of St. James's Episcopal Church at St. James, L. I., where Mayor Gaynor and his family attended services when the Mayor was at his country home. The Rev. Dr. Frank Page, former rector of St. James, now of Truro parish, Fairfax, Va., assisted. Dr. Holder began the episcopal burial service at 4:32 o'clock, and Dr. Page closed it with a prayer and the benediction. Then the bronze coffin, which had been incased in a mahogany box, was lowered into the grave. On the top of the mahogany cover there was a silver plate bearing this inscription:

William J. Gaynor, Sept. 10, 1913.

The mourners stayed until the grave was filled and the temporary sod had been put in place, and the wreaths from Mrs. Gaynor and the Mayor's children had been put on top.

The Mayor's grave is in a circular plot at the apex of the knoll, and comprises four regular lots. It was purchased by Mrs. Gaynor after she had inspected many locations. While it is in the newest part of the cemetery it is nevertheless in one of its most beautiful and picturesque parts. Many costly monuments and mausoleums bearing well-known names are nearby.

In another plot, some distance from the Mayor's resting place and nearer the central part of the cemetery, is the grave of one of his infant children. The body of this child will be put beside the body of the Mayor.

SERVICES IN ST. PAUL'S.

Overflow from Trinity Hears Burial Service Read There.

A special overflow service for Mayor Gaynor was held in St. Paul's Chapel, Broadway and Fulton Street, with the service in Trinity. The Episcopal service for the burial of the dead was read by the Rev. William M. Geer, rector of St. Paul's, assisted by the Rev. S. B. Cox and the Rev. Howard B. Ziegler.

SCRAMBLED FOR SOUVENIRS.

Crowd Invaded City Hall to Pick Up Flowers, Leaves, and Crepe.

When the last of the parade had disappeared over the Brooklyn Bridge at 1:30 P. M. there was a scramble among the thousands around City Hall Park for Subways and elevated trains. A great many, however, made for the City Hall to take one more look at the floral decoration which had been so much admired during the last few days.

A few policemen were on guard in the corridors, but not half enough to handle the crowd which came pouring in through all the doors. A scene of disorder followed. In their desire to obtain souvenirs of the dead Mayor girls and boys and even older persons engaged in a general scramble for every flower and leaf that had not been removed from the rotunda and corridors.

Patrolman William Roche, the custodian, called for help, and Lieut. O'Connor, who was on the second floor, and policemen who were in the basement responded. Additional reserves were called from the outside, and in five minutes the corridors were cleared.

The mourning crêpe on the oil painting of Mayor Gaynor, it was found, had been tampered with. The picture, however, was not damaged.

In accord with a resolution adopted by the Board of Estimate the crape on the City Hall will remain as it is until Oct. 12.

CITY'S WORK HALTED.

Subways and Cars Aid Funeral Plans—Exchanges Are Closed.

To facilitate the progress of the Gaynor funeral, no Subway trains stopped at Wall Street from 9:30 A. M. until nearly 1 P. M. The Brooklyn Bridge station was made the last stop of the local Subway trains. The B. R. T. Company also ordered all surface cars on the south roadway of the Brooklyn Bridge stopped while the funeral procession was passing. The surface cars on the Broadway line did not pass Leonard Street, and on the Third Avenue line no cars were run below Brooklyn Bridge. On the Sixth and Eighth Avenue surface lines the cars were stopped at Battery Place.

The City Departments were closed throughout the day. Federal courts, the Stock Exchange, the Cotton Exchange, and the Coffee Exchange were closed during the morning. The Curb brokers on Broad Street also remained quiet until the afternoon. Many department stores and small shops observed the memorial hour and draped their windows and hung flags at half mast.

MOURNED IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Pupils Sang Hymns While Church Service Was Being Held.

In every public school throughout the city the regular exercises were suspended at 11 o'clock sharp yesterday morning, and special services in honor of Mayor Gaynor were held. These lasted for one hour, and were coincident with the funeral service in Trinity Church.

The programme of the exercises, which had been sent to the teachers by Supt. William H. Maxwell, was faithfully carried out in each school. A reading of Scriptures, in most cases Proverbs IV., first to eighteenth verse, was followed by the singing of the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," or "Abide With Me." Then came readings and recitations illustrative of municipal virtue, the exercises ending with a short address by the Principal on Mayor Gaynor's life and character.

A feature of the memorial service held at Public School 10 in the Bronx, at Eagle Avenue and 163d Street, consisted of a display of original pen and ink portraits of Mayor Gaynor, which had appeared in issues of THE NEW YORK TIMES and which, at the request of Principal Hugo Newman, were placed at the disposal of the school by this newspaper. After an address by James Gill, THE TIMES portraits of Mayor Gaynor, draped in purple and asters, were unveiled and studied by ten classes of 8A and 8B pupils, all that the big assembly room would hold.

"The scholars, already familiar with the reproductions in the daily and Sunday issues of THE TIMES, were pleased with the aesthetic charm of the pen and ink originals by Marcus," Principal Newman said after the services. "The snapshots of Mayor Gaynor at his desk, on his farm, and with his family were much admired. Our scholars' notebooks of current events are based largely upon THE TIMES reports, which we found most accurate of all."

Another feature of the service was the reading of Mayor Gaynor's letter to the five boy baseball players, as well as his letter to the "happy little girl" who wanted the Mayor to watch her play. The address dwelt particularly upon "Gaynor, the Farm Boy," and dealt also with his study of the Bible and his remarkable letters. His kindness to many, his hopes for public schools, his faith in and his many visits to them, and, above all, his safe and sane Fourth of July propaganda were commended as his greatest service to the children of New York City.

OTHER MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Fifteen Hundred at Harlem Meeting, 4,000 in Hamilton Fish Park.

Memorial services in honor of William J. Gaynor were held last evening in the Pabst Coliseum, at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, under the auspices of the Rev. Drs. Felshin, Brenner, and Rutman. The services lasted for two hours and were attended by 1,500 persons.

Another memorial service was held in Hamilton Fish Park. Three or four thousand persons attended. The entire park was filled with residents of the east side, who listened to addresses on what Mr. Gaynor, as Mayor, had done for them and their neighbors. The speakers were Henry H. Schlacht of the East Side Protective Association and Samuel Prince. One thousand boys who had been appointed Inspectors by the Protective Association were drawn up in two long lines before the speakers' stand, as many children as there were years in Mr. Gaynor's life, each bearing a lighted candle, were also ranged nearby. During the meeting music was rendered by the drum and fife corps of the Protective Association, among the numbers played being "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Onward Christian Soldiers," and a special Gaynor march written for the occasion.

About 1,500 east side residents attended a memorial meeting to the late Mayor at the National Theatre, Second Avenue and Houston Street, last night. As many more crowded about outside the doors of the theatre unable to gain admission.

The meeting was presided over by Joseph Barondess, member of the Board of Education, and was arranged by a committee of residents of the east side.

Mayor Kline was present and made a brief speech. He was accompanied by Robert Adamson and Police Commissioner Waldo. Both Mr. Adamson and Commissioner Waldo spoke briefly.

GAYNOR TRIBUTE TO EDWARDS

"You Saved My Life by Risking Your Own," Mayor Wrote.

When James J. Gallagher, the discharged employe of the Dock Department, leveled a pistol at Mayor Gaynor on the promenade deck of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on the morning of Aug. 9, 1910, William H. Edwards, Street Cleaning Commissioner, was scarcely two feet away, conversing with the Mayor. Gallagher fired the shot before any one could intervene, but the bullet had scarcely struck the Mayor when "Big Bill" Edwards was upon him.

Gallagher had time to fire again, this time at Robert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary. The bullet went wild, and then Mr. Edwards planted his fist squarely between Gallagher's eyes. Gallagher went to the deck of the steamship, with "Big Bill" on top of him, but the enraged assailant managed to fire twice more. One bullet went wild, but the other plowed through the fleshy part of Mr. Edwards's left arm. If Commissioner Edwards had not struck Gallagher when he did, there is little doubt that another bullet would have hit the Mayor, for his mission was to kill, and the other bullets found other targets only because Commissioner Edwards had realized the situation as quickly as he did.

Ever since the occurrence one of Commissioner Edwards's most prized possessions is a coat with a bullet hole through the left sleeve. Powder marks on the coat are mute evidence of how close the big Commissioner was to his assailant when the shot was fired. Another prized possession is the following letter, which the Commissioner was surprised to receive from the Mayor on Jan. 5, 1911, after Gallagher was convicted, and which Commissioner Edwards made public yesterday for the first time:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor.
January 5, 1911.

Dear Mr. Edwards:

I am glad to see that Gallagher was convicted for the assault which he made on you. I have never trusted myself to say anything to you about the occurrence, but I assure you that I have always realized that you saved my life by risking your own. Without calculating the danger and consequences to yourself, you rushed in and prevented him from shooting me the second time, or oftener. My brother could not have done more than that. Now that you have given your testimony in court and Gallagher has been convicted, I feel that I should put this testimony in writing for you.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) W. J. GAYNOR.

William H. Edwards, Esq.

Mayor Gaynor always appreciated the part that Commissioner Edwards played in the shooting, and he told many persons that his Commissioner had saved his life.

JUSTICE MILLS'S TRIBUTE.

No One on New York Bench Did More Work Than Gaynor, He Says.

At the time of the funeral of Mayor Gaynor, Supreme Court Justice Isaac N. Mills of the Ninth Judicial District, a personal friend, spoke feelingly of the Mayor in Part I. of the court at White Plains. He said:

"It is safe to say that in all the history of the Supreme Court, which has existed in unbroken succession in this State or province from the earliest English Colonial times, no Justice of the court has ever surpassed William J. Gaynor in the volume of judicial work performed in an equal period of time. It may well be doubted whether any has ever equaled him in that respect. He was absolutely impartial, never failing to declare his true judgment, heedless of all consequences personal to himself. He had no use for and exceedingly little patience with the fool, the knave or the sluggard, or any one whom he considered to be either."

SCHULZ PAYS TRIBUTE.

Magistrate, the Last Appointed by Gaynor, Adjourns the Court.

Just before adjourning the Yorkville Court yesterday morning Magistrate Schulz, the last of the City Magistrates to be appointed by Mayor Gaynor, paid a tribute to the memory of Mr. Gaynor. He said:

"You all know that this day the city is in deep gloom because of the death of Mayor Gaynor. The man as a lawyer was distinguished for his great ability and for his battles for the right, and as a Judge he was known for his profound learning, with his consciousness and his courage I think I can say that as a Mayor he has done more constructive work than any other public official within our time.

"This day has been set aside as the occasion for his funeral, as our citizens have already read in the public press. Regardless of their politics or station in life, they have got together to pay him the tribute that is his due—due to one who has been loyal to the interests of the city. It is fitting and proper that the Magistrates of the courts of this city, to which he gave so much time and attention, should give some public expression of feeling and regard in which the Judges and court attaches held for the Mayor, and accordingly it becomes my duty to declare a recess in tribute to his memory and the high esteem in which we all held him and as well as the sorrow at his death."

ART COLLECTION MISSING.

Chicago Firm's Creditors Seek Paintings Senator Clark Once Had.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Who ordered the removal of fourteen paintings by Hogarth from the art gallery of the New York residence of former Senator W. A. Clark of Montana was the question propounded to-day by Attorney Michael Gesas, counsel for the creditors of the alleged bankrupt de luxe art and book concern of Tomlinson-Humes, Incorporated, before Referee in Bankruptcy Wean. The pictures, which were bought for $35,000, sold to E. P. Clark of Los Angeles for $125,000 by the art firm, and which had been sent to the former Senator in New York, subject to his approval and purchase for $480,000, had been removed from the Clark residence before Attorney Michael Gesas, who made a special trip to New York, arrived there.

William Young Conn Humes, a member of the de luxe concern, declared that the disappearance of the paintings was a mystery to him and that he had nothing whatever to do with their removal. Attorney Gesas said that he had learned that the pictures had been shipped back to Mr. Clark in Los Angeles.

"This is all a surprise to me. In fact, it is rather amusing," replied Humes.

"Amusing?" queried Attorney Gesas.

"Why, yes. You see, I had read in the papers that you had gone East to get the pictures, and I supposed you had accomplished your mission," answered Humes.

Mr. Humes was then asked if the pictures had not been ordered taken from the Clark home as the result of connivance between himself and Seymour J. Thurber, an art critic, and E. C. Bennett of Chicago, a nephew of E. P. Clark. This the witness also denied.

"The three of us may have discussed the possibility of getting the pictures out of the Clark home and back into the hands of Mr. Clark of Los Angeles," said Mr. Humes, "but we certainly did not take any action in regard to the matter. In fact, I think we had the advice of Mr. Thurber's lawyer that we could not legally take the pictures from the Clark residence."

The Trustees also made an unsuccessful effort to learn the whereabouts of the so-called Packenham edition of Shakespeare, a valuable edition that had been offered to numerous prospective purchasers.

50 ARE BLOWN UP IN MEXICAN TRAIN

Rebels Plant Dynamite Mines Under the Tracks South of Saltillo.

FORTY VICTIMS SOLDIERS

Only American Passenger Escapes Hurt, but Is Robbed with Others Who Are Uninjured.

LAREDO, Texas, Sept. 22.—Fifty persons were killed when rebels dynamited a passenger train on the Mexican National Railway, 60 miles south of Saltillo, Mexico, Friday afternoon, according to official reports to Federal headquarters in Nuevo Laredo to-day. The train was then looted and the surviving passengers robbed, it is said.

Forty Federal soldiers and ten second-class passengers comprise the official death list. The number of injured is not given.

W. W. Mervain of San Francisco, the only American on the train, is said to have escaped injury, but was robbed.

Two dynamite mines were set off by electricity, it is said. The first-class coach was only derailed, but the baggage, express, and two second-class coaches were blown to pieces.

BROWN RETURNS TO MEXICO.

Railway President Silent on Possible Action on His Resignation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Sept. 22.—Edward N. Brown, who recently resigned as President of the National Railways of Mexico, arrived on the Ipiranga from Havana to-day, taking a special train for Mexico this evening. He came unaccompanied by his family. In an interview he said he could not state definitely plans regarding his position with the railroad until after the meeting of the Directors, called to act on his resignation.

Mr. Lind denied to-day that any overtures were being made by the Mexican Government with the Wilson Administration, either directly or indirectly.

GETTING OUT OF MEXICO.

First Go at Once—Then Don't Hurry —How It Worked Down There.

The following letter from a well-known New York merchant reached THE TIMES last night:

New York, Sept. 22, 1913.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In order to show how ridiculously the President's order for all Americans to leave Mexico forthwith was carried out, I beg to hand you copy of a letter just received from a relative of mine, who occupies an important position in an American company doing business in a Mexican State on the Pacific Coast. I may add that all the American employes of that company decided to leave when the President's peremptory order was first made known to them, except my relative, who thus was chosen to become Superintendent pro tem.

I think that the publication of this will help to calm many excited people north of the Rio Grande.

[Copy.]

Sept. 12, 1913.

Just a line in order to tell you that strange things have happened here in the last forty-eight hours. Wednesday night everything here was a bustle and bustle, as all the American employes of the company were preparing to leave for the United States the next morning, packing their trunks and bidding farewell to all their friends and acquaintances. The Mexico City train was delayed somewhat, due to some washouts, and the Mexico City newspapers naturally were delayed, but at 10 P. M. they arrived, and, to the surprise of all, we saw the latest message from Acting Secretary of State Osborne, telling Americans not to be in a hurry, and that no accommodations except for a few, had been arranged up to that time, and, moreover, said that all those who were able, or considered so by the Consuls, would have to pay their own fare or sign a note for the money advanced for transporation. Upon reading this every one decided to remain here, but no one as yet has got over the ridiculous manner in which the American Government has treated their nationals here, as we all were made the laughing stock of the world at large. Think of telling every one to get out of Mexico, and at once, and then after ten days saying there was no use, as the United States was not prepared. So we all have stayed, and I was only manager of this company for about one-half day.

DENY COTTON BREAK WAS DUE TO WILSON

Simmons and Smith Say He Did Not Make a Stand for Tax on Futures.

COMPROMISE PLAN LIKELY

As Proposed by Lever and Hoke Smith—Otherwise Clause May Be Dropped from Tariff Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The break in the cotton market in New York today, following a reputed statement from Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, after visiting the White House this morning, to the effect that President Wilson would never consent to the modification or abandonment by the Tariff Conference Committee of the Clarke cotton futures tax amendment, caused great interest among Southern members of Congress.

If this was the cause, the slump was the result of misinformation. Both Senator Smith and Senator Simmons of North Carolina, the latter of whom is Chairman of the Finance Committee and chief of the tariff conference for the Senate, denied emphatically and unequivocally the story that President Wilson had many any such statement to them.

"The Clarke cotton tax amendment was not even discussed during our visit to the White House this morning," said Senator Simmons. Senator Smith's denial was to the same effect.

"I am in favor of the modification of the Clarke substitute along the lines of the so-called Lever-Smith compromise," said the latter. "The facts of my visit this morning to the White House are that I went there with Senator Simmons for a conference at 9:30 o'clock with the President about prospects of a general agreement on the tariff in the Conference Committee now having the bill in charge. The Clarke amendment, or the question of cotton futures, was not even mentioned, and the President has, furthermore, never said anything to me on that subject."

A careful canvass of the situation was made to-day, with a view to ascertaining the exact status of the matter before the Tariff Conference Committee and the probable attitude of the conference managers toward the question. Members of the Conference Committee, both Senate and House, and the Southern men who have been most intimately connected with the consideration of the question, as well as those who participated in the drafting of the Lever-Smith substitute, were asked about it. The situation may be summarized as follows:

First—The House conferees are strongly opposed to the Clarke amendment unless it is modified, either along the lines of the Smith-Lever substitute or through the adoption of the latter substitute.

Second, there are champions and opponents of the Clarke amendment, unmodified, though when the matter is reached in the Senate conferees, who at heart are opposed to the Clarke amendment unless modified, will have to go through the form at first of urging the House conferees to accept it.

Third—The indications appear to be that the Conference Committee will ultimately reach an agreement on the basis of the Smith-Lever substitute amendment, so modifying the Clark amendment as not to involve the heavy taxation of all contracts in cotton, but to place a nominal tax, probably 50 cents per 100 bales, on contracts for the delivery of the specific grades of cotton within Government standards, as outlined in the Smith-Lever substitute, and only to apply the proposed tax of $50 per hundred bales, provided by the Clark amendment, if the requirements as to contracts and grades provided for in the Smith-Lever substitute are not met.

Fourth—Unless the conferees are able to reach an agreement for a modification generally along the lines of the principles laid down in the Smith-Lever substitute, or some similar modification, the question, which is rather intricate, may be settled by dropping the whole proposal out of the bill, but the conferees appear to be sanguine that they will be able to reach an agreement.

Fifth—Senator Smith of Georgia and Representative Lever of South Carolina, who drafted the proposed compromise, are now in complete agreement, and have united on the form of the proposed compromise amendment, which is the only outside proposal dealing with cotton futures that has been laid before the conferees as a substitute for the Clark amendment.

Sixth — The Smith-Lever substitute was prepared after conferences between them and two members of President Wilson's Cabinet, Postmaster General Burleson, and Secretary of Agriculture Houston, who are understood to be in favor of the principles laid down in the Smith-Lever substitute; and others regarded as qualified to participate in the framing of such a substitute, including Senators, Representatives and experts of the Department of Agriculture.

Seventh—The Clarke amendment and the proposed substitute will be considered by the Conference Committee until Wednesday. There is every indication to-night that the amendment will be eliminated and the cotton tax question dropped entirely unless modified along the lines of the proposed substitute; but men qualified to express an opinion express the belief to-night that the Smith-Lever substitute will be adopted, although its language may be redrafted by the conferees. The objection urged against the Clarke amendment by leaders who are opposed to it, though in favor of some regulatory legislation dealing with cotton contracts, is that the Clarke amendment, unless modified, would tax all contracts, so that, no matter who sells a contract, if for any reason he cannot fulfill the contract, he would have to pay the tax under the Clarke amendment. The advocates of the proposed compromise will insist upon the elimination of what they describe as "bad" contracts from the "good" by providing that if there is no conformity to a Government grade in the contract the heavy penalty proposed by the Clarke amendment shall be paid.

It was learned to-night that when Senator Smith learned that such strong support could be mustered in Senate and House for delivery within any one of the nine Government grades, instead of confining the delivery within three, as he proposed, he decided to accept the provisions of the Lever substitute, which were explained in THE TIMES this morning.

A prominent member of Congress said to-night that the Clarke amendment, if adopted without modification, would paralyze the buying power of stock cotton as it goes into the market in the various towns of the South, and would cost the South $50,000,000 loss on this season's crop alone. He said that the day following the adoption of the Clarke amendment by the Senate the price of cotton went off $3 a bale in Georgia alone. He explained that the great body of cotton buyers in the South were in the habit of covering their purchases, because they could not otherwise carry the risk of rise and fall of the market prices and utilize the Cotton Exchange as a clearing house "to cover themselves both ways."

Southern men here who favor the compromise proposal assert that the "real objection" to the present situation grew out of the fact "that the New York Exchange had certain fictitious standards of cotton, arbitrarily fixed; that the New York Exchange fixes arbitrarily the difference of value between the cotton sold and the cotton delivered, and forced practically all of the cotton into a speculative market. This, they say, is what has aroused an intensity of feeling that resulted in the extreme legislation proposed by the advocates of the Clarke amendment, which they want modified.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI MEN DINE.

Our Women Coming Into Their Own, A. D. White Tells Fraternity.

The delegates and members of the seventh National convention of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity held a dinner last night at the Hotel Cumberland, where the business sessions are being held. About 100 members from all parts of the country attended. Wayne Montgomery Musgrave was the toastmaster. The list of speakers included Andrew D. White, former President of Cornell University and former Ambassador to Germany; Oscar R. Hundley, former United States Judge of the Circuit Court; former Congressman Alfred Dewey Follett, and Col. Homer Baxter Sprague, LL. D., Yale '52, who is 84 years old, the oldest member of the fraternity, and the Grand Senior President.

Mr. White, the first speaker, said in part:

"We ought to have more business men in public offices. Honest business men nowadays do not know what moment the works of some politician will injure them, in spite of their personal integrity in business. I believe a man in public office should maintain his integrity of character and honesty, in order to protect his State from possible shame.

"The American woman is coming into her own. She is marching shoulder to shoulder with man. She is helping to make the material wealth of the country. We must concede to her her rights.

LOVER KEPT FROM PRINCESS'S FUNERAL

Baron Hans von Bleichroeder Expressly Forbidden to Attend the Ceremony.

GIRL'S FATHER IS BITTER

Says Not All the Money in the World Could Bridge Gulf Between Princess and Banker.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 23.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Heidelberg says he has been personally requested by Prince William of Saxe-Weimar to publish the following statement concerning the Prince's daughter, Princess Sophia, who was found shot dead on Thursday and whose suicide has been attributed to the fact that she was not allowed to marry the young banker von Bleichroeder:

"Baron Hans von Bleichroeder, like all acquaintances of the House of Saxe-Weimar, had a farewell view of the departed, but he was expressly forbidden to take part in the funeral or to attend the cremation.

"As for the stories set in circulation in regard to a marriage between Princess Sophia and Baron von Bleichroeder, there only needs to be repeated the oft-spoken statement of her father, that all the money in the world would never have sufficed to bridge over the gulf between a Princess of Saxe-Weimar and Baron von Bleichroeder."

ANTI-ALCOHOL CONGRESS.

Opened at Milan—Address by Dr. Marchiafava Much Applauded.

MILAN, Sept. 22.—The fourteenth International Congress on Alcoholism was inaugurated here to-day under the Presidency of Dr. Angelo Filippetti of Rome, who greeted the delegates in the name of the Italian temperance organizations.

Thirty temperance societies of various countries are represented, among them the American Temperance Society, the American Good Templars, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Delegates from forty nations were present at the inauguration, which took place in the splendid Hall of Statues.

Premier Giolitti was represented by Alfredo Falconi, Under Secretary of State of the Interior, who expressed the greetings of the Italian Government to the delegates.

The work of the congress began with a discussion of the moral decadence caused by alcoholism.

Prof. Ettore Marchiafava, consulting physician to Pope Pius, delivered an address on the pathology of alcoholism, in which he dealt with his studies, researches, and observations over a period of fifty years of professional work. He was enthusiastically applauded.

In his address on behalf of the Premier, Signor Falconi likened the members of the congress to "disciplined soldiers of a noble and holy cause, having as their supreme object the redemption of humanity from a corrupting vice which is destroying all ideality of personal and social welfare." He spoke of the connection between alcoholism and disease, especially tuberculosis, and alcoholism in its relation to crime. Italy, he said, although a great producer of wine, would not lose by the checking of alcoholism, owing to the increasing production of anti-alcoholic beverages from grapes.

The American delegates had a place of honor on the platform. The Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie of Washington emphasized his remarks by the announcement that both President Wilson and Vice President Marshall were total abstainers. He referred to the great progress American legislation was making toward the suppression of alcoholism.

Divine service was held in four languages.

SCOTLAND YARD INDIGNANT.

Denies Necklace Was Dropped in Gutter "by Arrangement."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Scotland Yard emphatically denies that there is any truth in an alleged "revelation" in the Paris Matin regarding the finding of the famous $650,000 pearl necklace.

Quadratstein, one of the informers, whose story led to the arrest of the five men now in custody, declared, according to the Matin, that "the dropping of the necklace in the gutter took place as the result of an agreement between the authorities at Scotland Yard and the person in whose possession the necklace was, the latter receiving his liberty on condition that he went abroad. The necklace was to be picked up by a detective, but as its possessor came a quarter of an hour sooner than the time agreed upon, the packet was picked up by Horne."

A Scotland Yard official says the whole statement is a fabrication. Such an arrangement would have been compounding a felony, and the English police do not conduct cases in that fashion.

BOGUS TRAVELERS' CHECKS.

Large Number of Forgeries Have Been Placed on the Continent.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Forged travelers' checks amounting to nearly $10,000, imitations of those of the United States Express Company, are being investigated by Scotland Yard, which believes that a gang of international forgers now operating on the Continent has headquarters in London.

The checks have been cashed at Vienna, Carlsbad, Lugano, and Nice. They bear the signatures "Robert McDonald" and "William Riley."

Officials of the United States Express Company in London state that they have had trouble of this sort for several months. The forgeries are perfect except for the watermark. They are believed to be the work of the gang which some years ago issued bogus checks of the Canadian-American Express Company.

Clarence D. Martin, Treasurer of the United States Express Company, said over the telephone at his home in Montclair, N. J., last night that THE NEW YORK TIMES's dispatch, which was read to him, contained practically all the information regarding the forged checks of which the New York officials of the company were as yet in possession.

Forgeries were discovered at the New York office on Saturday while canceled travelers' checks were being checked up, and a cablegram was at once sent to the London office.

AMERICANS FEAR CHINESE.

Gen. Hwang-Liang's Attitude Toward Our Missionaries Threatening.

PEKING, Sept. 22.—Although the British and French missionaries who had taken refuge in Fu-Chow have returned to their mission homes in Hingh-Wa and Sien-Yu, in the Province of Fo-Kien, the American missionaries remain there because the Chinese authorities declare that they cannot guarantee to protect their lives.

Americans are especially disliked by Gen. Hwang-Liang, who during the anti-Manchu revolt proclaimed himself the sixteenth Ming Emperor. Hwang-Liang had encouraged the replanting of the poppy in the province. The American missionaries informed the Government of this and urged military action, but after the poppies had been uprooted Hwang-Liang's followers regained control of several districts, where they persecuted or assassinated a number of Christian converts. When the town of Hingh-Wa was attacked by Hwang-Liang the missionaries took refuge in Fu-Chow.

The Government is now offering Hwang-Liang an official position elsewhere, but he stipulates for the retention of his post in the Province of Fo-Kien.

The American Legation has vainly urged the Government to protect American citizens in China with the aid of the military. At the legation it is considered that the Chinese officials take advantage of American friendship in various pending cases in which the legation cannot obtain satisfaction.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS SEIZED BY GREEKS

Mission Institutions at Koritsa, Albania, Have Been in Trouble Since War Began.

PRINCIPAL WAS IMPRISONED

Dr. Erickson, Expelled by Cervians, Returned and Was Arrested by Greeks—British Consul Protests.

VIENNA, Sept. 22.—The Greek authorities at Koritsa, Albania, to-day seized the American mission schools there, where instruction is given to nearly 100 Albanian girls, according to a telegram received here from Aviona, the principal seaport of Albania.

The telegram further states that the Greeks have arrested and persecuted a large number of Albanians who recently returned to Koritsa from America and other foreign countries, releasing them only when the Albanians had promised to aid the agitation for the incorporation of the district with Greece.

The British Consul at Monastir has sent a vigorous protest to the Greek Government on behalf of the Americans.

The whole affair forms part of the Greek terrorization of the Albanian population with the object of compelling them to agree to the inclusion of the whole of Southern Albania in the Kingdom of Greece.

Last week Greek officials at Koritsa endeavored to take forcible possession of the American Mission School building, but the housekeeper in charge refused to hand over the keys, upon which the Greek soldiers beat her mercilessly and then carried her off to prison.

The mission is in charge of Phineas B. Kennedy, a native of New Jersey, who was educated at Princeton. In the educational work he is assisted by Mrs. Violet B. Kennedy, who also conducts the Ladies' Literary Society, the object of which is to give the elements of education to the women of Albania.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—State Department officials said to-day that the reported seizure of the American mission schools at Koritsa would raise an important diplomatic question, as the status of American institutions in Albania had not been determined under the new territorial delimitation growing out of the Balkan wars.

Under the convention with Turkey, made when that nation exercised sovereignty over Albania, Americans, in addition to their rights under treaties of commerce and travel, had extra territorial rights which protected educational institutions.

No official report of the seizure of the schools has so far been received, but the State Department is prepared to protest to the Greek Government vigorously if the press dispatch should be confirmed.

The American mission school in Koritsa is under the supervision of the Congregational Church and is controlled by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Dr. Edward L. Smith, Secretary of that organization in New York, said yesterday that the American missionaries had encountered great opposition from the Turkish authorities, but since the close of the Balkan war the board had received assurances through the American Department of State that the Greek Government would put no further obstacles in the way of the work.

Dr. C. T. Erickson, who was in charge at Koritsa, returned to this country a few days ago on leave, and is now in Boston. He and his wife were expelled from Albania by the Servians at the beginning of the war. Later they returned, only to be arrested by the Greeks and imprisoned at Salonika. Phineas B. Kennedy and his wife are in charge of the school during Dr. Erickson's absence.

Dr. Smith said that a girls' school existed at Koritsa for several years under native Christian auspices. About five years ago the institution was taken over by the Congregational Mission Board. "We realized at the time," said Dr. Smith, "that the task would be a severe one, but the school has prospered, and now efforts are being made to enlarge it into a girls' college. Charles R. Crane of Chicago is particularly interested in this project, and has contributed liberally to the support of the school."

TURKISH-BULGAR ALLIANCE?

Next Shake of Kaleidoscope May Show Anti-Greek Combination.

COLOGNE, Sept. 22.—The correspondent of The Cologne Gazette at Constantinople telegraphs that he has gained the impression in conversations with several foreign Ambassadors to Turkey that they believe it quite possible for the Turkish and Bulgarian Armies to come to an agreement to operate jointly against Greece if that nation refuses the conditions of peace proposed by Turkey.

The responsible Turkish Government newspaper, Terjiman-i-Hakikat, advances the same idea.

Gen. Michael Savoff, Commander in Chief of the Bulgarian Army, who is in Constantinople, declined to discuss the matter for the present.

HUNCHBACK IS RESENTFUL.

Woman Strokes Him "for Luck" and He Throws Her in a Pond.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—A Parisienne named Adele Betouille is superstitious enough to believe that stroking the hump of a hunchback insures good luck. Therefore, observing a hunchback strolling in the Tuileries Garden to-day, she discreetly approached and passed her hand carefully over the hump.

The hunchback felt her touch. Turning round, he attacked her with his walking stick, and then threw her into a shallow pond.

The incident will come before a Magistrate.

TWO BOYS KILLED IN STREET

Runaway Truck Hits One Victim—Driver Flees After Striking Other.

A department store automobile truck came to a halt late yesterday afternoon at the curb in front of 1,038 Lowell Street, the Bronx, and the chauffeur left it while he went inside to make a delivery. The big motor attracted the attention of some of the boys playing in the street, and two of them climbed to the driver's seat and examined the levers. They were tugging at these when the machine started. With a shout they tumbled out, and raised a cry of warning as the truck started lumberingly down the hill, gathering speed as it went.

Children of all ages escaped from its path, but one of them, 3-year-old Herbert Feinberg of 1,050 Lowell Street, was not swift enough. The big wheels ran over him and broke his neck. He was dead as the machine finaly crashed into the embankment at Edgewater Road, which saved it a plunge into the Bronx River. Coroner Shongut has the names of several boys who were fooling about the truck, and has told their fathers to have them before him to-day.

When 17-year-old Louis Chieas of 55 Carmine Street was run over and killed in East Ninth Street by an express wagon yesterday afternoon, the driver, whether he realized what he had done or not, whipped up his horses and disappeared, but not before the name on the wagon had been noted down by a policeman.

With this name as their guide, the police scoured the lower part of town, and finally, at Washington and Grand Streets, arrested Martin Johnson of 481 West Fifty-third Street. Coroner Winterbottom paroled him pending the inquest.

PRINCES'TRUST HEAD HAS TO FLOAT LOAN

Prince Fuerstenberg Will Mortgage Most of His Great Properties in Baden.

$5,500,000 TO BE BORROWED

Berlin Paper Says "Royal Merchant" Has Proved Failure — Fuerstenberg Intimate Friend of Kaiser.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—A bombshell fell in the German financial world today in the form of an official announcement that Prince Max Egon zu Fürstenberg, one of the Kaiser's most intimate friends, and head of the so-called "Princes' Trust," had found it necessary to float a public loan of $5,500,000, and to mortgage the bulk of his great properties in the Grand Duchy of Baden as security.

The loan will consist of 4½ per cent. "proprietor's obligations," and will be offered for subscription on the boerses of South Germany under the special sanction of the Baden Government.

The Prince's properties in Baden include the famous estate of Donaueschingen, where the Kaiser is an annual guest, and the great brewery establishment which enjoys the privilege of advertising its beer as the "special table beverage of the German Emperor and King of Prussia."

Prince Fürstenberg's partner in the Princes' Trust is a kinsman of the Kaiser, Prince Christian Keraft zu Hohenlohe. Although both are possessed of vast properties, they have long been reputed to be short of the cash necessary to finance their enormous and multifarious interests. These interests were pooled six or seven years ago on the American "community of interests" plan, but the Princes' Trust has been pursued by misfortune, and only recently was compelled to enter into an alliance with the Deutsche Bank, by which the latter obtained supremacy over many of the Trust's enterprises.

To-night's newspapers describe Prince Fürstenberg's appeal to the public for funds as the latest step in the "liquidation" of the Trust, to which the Lokal Anzeiger refers as a "stranded ship." Commenting on the situation further, the Lokal Anzeiger says:

"The royal merchant has not proved a success. The capacities of two men who by birth were predestined to occupy positions far removed from the commercial sphere were insufficient to cope with situations which could be handled only by a staff of expert, practical business men."

LONDON BUS MEN WIN.

They Agree, However, Not to Engage in Sympathetic Strikes.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The strike of London omnibus men was settled at today's conference at the Board of Trade.

Under the terms of the settlement the men gain the chief points for which they contended—recognition of their union and representation by union officials in disputes between the companies and the drivers and conductors.

The settlement also provides that the men shall be allowed to wear the union badge on their uniform and that the strikers are to be reinstated without penalization.

The men, however, agree not to engage in sympathetic strikes.

SENATOR HEFFERNAN WEDS.

Sulzer Trial Hastens His Marriage to Miss Agnes Lynch.

Senator William J. Heffernan of the Fifth (South Brooklyn) Senatorial District was married yesterday to Miss Agnes Lynch, daughter of Mrs. Anna D. Lynch of 795 President Street, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Father David F. Hickey, pastor of St. Francis's Church. The Senator is a member of the High Court of Impeachment, now sitting in Albany. The Sulzer trial was responsible for the private wedding, as a date for a large wedding had been decided upon when it was announced that the impeached Governor would be tried beginning on Sept. 18.

Only the relatives and intimate friends were at the wedding, which was at the home of the bride's mother. After the ceremony the couple left for Washington, D. C., and Old Point Comfort on their honeymoon. Senator Heffernan expects to return to the trial soon. He and his bride will live at 598 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn.

TO PASS ON HOME RULE.

British Electors, It Is Declared, Will Be Asked to Decide on It.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—If the information of the special Parliamentary correspondent of The Liverpool Courier, a Unionist organ, is correct the Government has recognized the advisability of obtaining the judgment of the electors on the Irish home rule question.

The correspondent is unable to say what form the appeal to the electors will take, a general election or a referendum, but he asserts that it is now absolutely assured that the country will be consulted before home rule receives the royal assent.

This announcement is said to be on the "first-hand personal authority of a very eminent politician, who has full and intimate knowledge of all the facts."

This important decision, it is stated, was brought about by the pressure of outside events, strongly reinforced by very high and powerful influences, backed by the overwhelming sense of public opinion.

According to the correspondent, it is quite certain that there will be no formal conference of the kind that is now being discussed, but a referendum has now become a necessity to the country in all constitutional, if not in all legislative measures. "A general referendum there must be," he declares, "and a general referendum there will be."

7 Passengers in an "Aerobus."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The airman Noel, on a Grahame-White "aerobus," broke the world's record at Hendon this evening, carrying seven passengers for 17 minutes. The weight of the pilot and passengers was 1,134 pounds.

NEW YORK FIRMS HIT BY MENOCAL DECREE

Plants Worth $2,000,000 Made Idle by Revocation of the Ports Concession.

BRYAN TAKES MATTER UP

Willing to Help American Sub-Contractors, but Won't Intervene for Bondholders.

Some of the biggest engineering and contracting firms in this city stand to lose large sums of money through President Menocal's revocation of the concession granted to the Cuban Ports Company, should it be sustained by the Supreme Court at Havana, before which the question of its constitutionality now being argued. To this extent their interests are identical with those of the English investors, who bought $6,000,000 of the company's bonds secured only by the concession, with the revenues to be derived under it, and whose investment, as matters stand, has been entirely wiped out.

These contractors are co-operating with the bondholders and the Cuban Ports Company in contesting President Menocal's action and are in negotiation with the American State Department with a view to having their interests protected. They have pointed out to Secretary Bryan that whatever may be the merits of the controversy between th company and President Menocal, they are in the position of innocent third parties and have no direct interest in the concession or its terms.

The concession, which was granted under the Gomez Administration, provided for the dredging of harbors and construction of docks at the principal Cuban ports, at an estimated cost of $14,000,000, in consideration of which the Cuban Ports Company was to receive, and for more than two years did receive, port duties levied on the importation of coal and merchandise. It was to complete the work in six years and to receive the duties, which have averaged nearly $1,500,000 a year, for thirty years.

After capitalizing the concession, without the investment of any cash, at $10,000,000 in stock and an authorized issue of $10,000,000 in bonds, the promoters, who were T. L. Huston of this city and associates, contracted to have the work done by the T. L. Huston Contracting Company, owned by Mr. Huston and Norman H. Davis, Vice President of the Trust Company of Cuba, which was the trustee under the mortgage for the bonds.

American Contractors Suffer.

The Huston Contracting Company, which has many other large improvements under way in Cuba, is not a dredging concern, and it engaged Howard Trumbo, a dredging expert, to arrange for subletting the various portions of the work. This is where the New York contracting firms came into the matter.

They included MacArthur Brothers of 11 Pine Street, who, in association with Walker, Sons & Co. of London, formed the MacArthur-Perks Company, Limited, which undertook a large part of the work. Another portion was given to Michael J. Dady, the old-time Brooklyn politician and contractor. A third portion went to the Snare & Triest Company, in the Woolworth Building.

Still another part went to the Bowers Southern Dredging Company of Galveston, one of the biggest concerns of its kind in the world, which is digging the Cape Cod Canal, and is said to do more work of this kind every year in various parts of the world than the digging of the Panama Canal.

The sub-contractors proceeded to move into the Cuban harbors extensive plants for dredging, including steam shovels, the most improved dredges, &c. The value of these plants is put by them at $2,000,000. Under the Cuban laws 75 per cent. of the men employed must be citizens of the island, but the skilled workmen were nearly all Americans, and they numbered between 2,000 and 3,000.

Representatives of the Cuban Ports Company say that it has already expended $5,000,000 in this work, as against about $3,000,000 received by it from the collection of port dues, the difference being taken prom the proceeds of the sale of $6,000,000 bonds in London and $1,000,000 in Havana.

Appeal to State Department.

The sub-contractors had a conference with Secretary Bryan in Washington a few days ago and received assurances from him that the State Department would do all in its power to protect their interests, and a basis is now being sought on which it may intervene in their behalf.

In their talk with Mr. Bryan the sub-contractors took the view that the United States Government, through the adoption of the Platt amendment, had put itself in a different relation toward Cuba than it bears to any other of the Spanish-American republics. That relation, they argued, involved an obligation on the part of the United States to safeguard the property rights of all foreigners, which in this case would include the English bondholders and the American contractors, to say nothing of the original concessionaries.

Those who called on Mr. Bryan were John R. MacArthur of MacArthur Brothers, R. P. Clark, President of the Bowers Southern Dredging Company; Michael J. Dady, Frederick Snare of Snare & Triest, and Mr. Trumbo. The presentation of the matter by Mr. Trumbo was substantially as follows:

The Contractors' Side of It.

"These contractors first examined into the financial status of the T. L. Huston Contracting Company and the Cuban Ports Company before making their contracts, and they secured ample assurances that the financial part of the contracts was safe before any plant was moved into Cuba to carry on the work. They had been informed that the work was governed by a concession granted by the Cuban Government to the Ports Company. This concession covered a period of thirty years and authorized the collection of an import tax on all the imports into the island during this period.

"Upon taking legal advice on the subject they were informed that this concession was legal, that it had been granted by a Cuban Congress and signed by the President of the republic, and that it would undoubtedly be declared constitutional by the Supreme Court. This advice was sound, as we are informed that already eight decisions have been made by the Supreme Court of Cuba upholding the constitutionality of the law which granted this concession to the Cuban Ports Company.

"The contractors installed a plant upon the work, which was probably as highly an efficient dredging plant and construction plant for bulkheads as could be purchased in the market. The value of this plant is approximately $2,000,000, and the cost of installing it in the various ports of Cuba for carrying on this work meant the expenditure of not less than $200,000.

"The work was being pushed forward with the greatest dispatch, and in three instances the contractors were ahead of the time in which they were to make completion, if continuing at the same pace. No complaint had ever been lodged against them that their work was unsatisfactory. On the contrary, the authorities dealing with them were highly pleased with the manner in which the work was being carried on. The estimates were paid monthly by the Cuban Ports Company, under the direction of inspecting engineers.

"On Aug. 4 a decree was issued by President Menocal, claiming that the Cuban Ports Company had not been organized properly, and in consequence was not entitled to the concession. An order was issued by the President to stop all the work, and the contractors on Aug. 9 received notice of this stoppage, and at the same time a notice that, due to force majeure on the part of the Cuban Government, the Ports Company was not able to proceed and disclaimed responsibility for any damages which the contractors might suf-

"These contractors were left in this predicament with hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of floating equipment in Havana, Santiago de Cuba, and Cienfuegos. They were left to care for this plant at a time of the year when it was dangerous to move it on account of the hurricane season, and with no immediate prospect of contracts in the States to employ it, and with no immediate prospects of the work proceeding under their contracts in Cuba until after the courts had passed decision on this Presidential decree.

"We maintain that our property rights have not been protected. We maintain that we have been stripped of our contracts by an action which is obviously without warrant of law and unconstitutional. We are American citizens who entered into Cuba with the idea that we were safe, on account of the stability of the Cuban Government being guaranteed by the United States.

"We feel certain that if your department will come to our rescue and will maintain our claims for damages against the Cuban Republic, on the ground that the Government has not afforded the protection to property and that citizens of the United States have been damaged by the lack of good faith on Cuba's part, that we will be able to secure justice and equity in this matter and that we will not secure such justice and equity until you have lent us this aid."

FIGHTING MENOCAL'S DECREE.

Ports Company Argues Petition to Set It Aside.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Sept. 22.—The appeal of the Cuban Ports Company to the Supreme Court against the constitutionality of President Menocal's recent decree annulling its concession was heard this afternoon. Nine Justices sat to hear the argument of the company's attorney.

Dr. Gonzales Mendoza, representing the Ports Company, argued that the President's decree was not only unconsittutional, but openly violated existing laws. Then he took up the President's allegation that the company was not incorporated in accordance with the laws of the country, quoting the Commercial Code to show that it was organized in compliance with it.

The question of watered stock, which President Menocal mentioned in his decree, was then discussed, Dr. Mendoza showing that such a practice was common with nearly all the companies doing business in Cuba, including the Havana Gas Company and the Alquizar waterworks, in which members of the Menocal Cabinet are interested, and finally mentioning the Chaparra Sugar Company, in which President Menocal himself is heavily interested.

He next sought to show that the company in the various phases of its existence, had acted in thorough accord with the Government, the latter's representative being present and expressing approval in various documents authorized before Notaries Public.

Dr. Mendoza based his argument chiefly on the contention that the Government could not reject to-day what it had accepted yesterday; that the Menocal Government is simply the successor of the previous one, and is therefore bound to carry out its predecessor's contracts.

He closed by citing several sections of the Constitution, which he asserted hod been violated by President Menocal, and expressing confidence that there still existed in Cuba upright Judges who had the courage to decide the question according to law and equity and unbiased by Governmental pressure.

At the request of the Government counsel, the hearing was continued till to-morrow for his answer.

NOT TO HELP BONDHOLDERS.

But State Department May Act for the Sub-Contractors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Secretary Bryan gave assurances to the Cuban Government to-day that the United States had no desire to intervene in behalf of the Cuban Ports Company, most of whom are British citizens.

His action was inspired by representations that agents of the company were circulating reports in Cuba that the United States Government intended to intervene. These reports are thought to be intended to influence the Cuban Government to modify its position in a manner to benefit the bondholders.

It was said at the State Department that none of the British investors, who bought $6,000,000 of the bonds, did so without knowledge of the circumstances under which the concession was obtained. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan are convinced that the concession was a case of graft, and that the Cuban Court is the proper place for the determination of the merits of the matter.

SCHMIDT PURPOSED TO KILL FOR MONEY

Approached a Physician with His Plan to Get Insurance, Faurot Discovers.

STATE TO USE ALIENISTS

Agrees to Examination at Counsel's Request—Priest's Boyhood Friend Finds Him Greatly Changed.

Hans Schmidt, the suspended Catholic priest who murdered Anna Aumuller and attempted to make counterfeit money, intended to commit a series of murders for the purpose of defrauding life insurance companies, according to Inspector Faurot.

A prominent physician told Inspector Faurot yesterday that Schmidt had approached him with this plan. The Inspector refused yesterday to give the name of the physician or to tell in what terms the proposition had been made to him.

Inspector Faurot has been skeptical since the discovery of blank death certificates in Schmidt's trunk of the statement by the priest that he had intended to murder a number of the aged and infirm among his parishioners and to account for them with forged death certificates.

Instead of having an insane plan for putting a few sufferers out of their misery, the priest, according to Inspector Faurot, was following in the footsteps of Johann Hoch, who was hanged in Chicago after committing murders and collecting the insurance on the lives of his victims.

Inspector Faurot refused to say yesterday whether Schmidt had attempted to use Muret, who is in the Tombs as his confederate in counterfeiting, in his alleged plans for murder and insurance frauds.

Assistant District Attorney James A. Delehanty agreed yesterday to the suggestion of Alphonse G. Koelble, Schmidt's lawyer, that the priest should be examined by alienists for the prosecution. This examination will take place to-morrow in a room in the District Attorney's office.

The priest may be taken to the Bellevue Morgue to identify the remains of the young woman whose body he murdered and dismembered. Schmidt has agreed to do this if the prosecution wishes, and alienists will probably be present to observe his demeanor at the Morgue. It is believed that the effort to identify the body will prove a critical test of the priest's mental condition.

Insane, Says Dr. Scholer.

Dr. Gustav Scholer of 10 Jumel Terrace, who examined Schmidt for the defense on Sunday, has decided that the priest is beyond doubt insane, but that it will take further observation to determine the exact form of insanity.

"And you must remember," said Dr. Scholer, "that the question which will be raised at the trial will be not 'Is Schmidt Insane?' but 'Was he insane when he killed the girl?'"

An official statement on the Schmidt case was prepared by Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney to be read last Sunday from the pulpits of all Catholic Churches in this city, but after a conference between Mgr. Mooney and Mgr. M. J. Lavelle, it was decided that the best plan would be to make no mention of the affair.

It was asked yesterday at the office of Mgr. Mooney if a stricter plan had been adopted for examining the credentials of priests from foreign countries, since the discovery that Schmidt had been able to impose on the ecclesiastical authorities with forged credentials. No new order had as yet been made in this regard, it was learned yesterday. Schmidt's case, it was said, was the first one on record in this country of a suspended priest's obtaining a charge with fraudulent recommendations.

In consequence of the report of Dr. Scholer that Schmidt's mental state made it likely that he would attempt suicide, Warden Fallon ordered yesterday that a guard should remain constantly watching him.

Coroner Feinberg said yesterday that he wanted men of the type of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Theodore F. Shonts, and Otto H. Kahn on the jury at the inquest over the remains of Anna Aumuller. When asked if any of the men named would actually be on the jury, the Coroner said that they would probably offer valid excuses to get off, since their names had been published.

Plans for the Inquest.

Coroner Feinberg explained that he considered that matters of such weight would be involved at the inquest that it would take men of large affairs to figure them out properly. On the other hand, Assistant District Attorney James A. Delehanty said that the Coroner's inquest was of no consequence to the District Attorney's office. A Coroner's jury in Jersey City has already found that the woman came to her death at the hands of Schmidt and recommended that the authorities of New York City take action. According to District Attorney Whitman the case will probably be placed before the Grand Jury early in October. Coroner Feinberg's inquest will probably begin the latter part of this week.

The fact that the prisoner in the Tombs charged with the murder of Anna Aumuller is Hans Schmidt, a Bavarian priest, was certainly established yesterday when Father Francis Markert, an old classmate of Schmidt, visited him in the Tombs. The Rev. Francis Markert is a professor in a college at Techny, Ill., and was starting on a visit to Germany, when he was taken to see Schmidt yesterday by Father Evers, chaplain of the Tombs. Father Markert knew Schmidt at 12 years old, and was a classmate of his in the classical college at Mainz, Germany. When Markert saw Schmidt, he said: "Hello, Hans. How are you?"

"I am fine," replied Schmidt.

"Do you know me?"

"Oh, yes, I know you well," said Schmidt, "you are Francis."

Schmidt took little interest in his visitor, however, and was not disposed to talk. When Father Markert said he was going back to Germany, and asked if there was any message for Schmidt's parents in Aschaffenburg, Schmidt said: "Just give them my love."

Friend Finds Great Change.

In 1893, when Schmidt was 12 years old, and Father Markert about the same age, they lived a short distance from each other in the country, seven miles from Mainz. They were great friends in their boyhood days, according to Father Markert, and were chums when they attended the classical high school together.

"Hans was a good boy until he was about 20 years old," said Father Markert. "In his school days he was very studious and pious. He had a brilliant intellect. The professors pointed him out as an example to the other boys. When he was about 20 the change came over him, and he grew very wild.

"He was 18 years old when he entered the Theological Seminary at Mainz in 1899. He was there two years when he got the permission of the Bishop to study in Munich. He was ordained on Christmas Day, either in 1906 or 1907. The last time that I saw him was when he was assistant priest in a small parish near Aschaffenburg.

"A few weeks after I last saw him he disappeared. The next I heard of him was when a rumor came to me that he had got into some kind of trouble and was charged with forgery. I could not believe this, so I wrote to Schmidt's brother, telling him of the rumor and suggesting that some steps be taken to stop it. But I got the reply that there was some truth in the rumor, that Schmidt's reason had become disordered, and that he was then in a sanitarium.

"The following year, just before I came over to this country, I visited Schmidt's parents. They had not heard from him in a year and a half.

"I learned, however, that he was attached to a church in Trenton, N. J., and I sent a postal card to him there, asking him to meet me on the arrival of my steamer. He did not meet me, however.

"When I arrived in Illinois, I wrote to him. He answered from Trenton, saying that he was going West and asking me to not keep any further track of him.

"I knew one cousin of his named Otto Schmidt, who committed suicide at Frankfort at the age of 17 years by shooting himself.

"I am convinced, by the change that I saw in Hans Schmidt when I visited him to-day that he is insane. Schmidt, when I knew him, was scholarly, pious and good-natured. Only the loss of his reason could make such a complete change in him."

Father Markert wrote to the editors of Chicago newspapers about Schmidt's career at the time of the priest's arrest. He is an officer in the Holy Name Society in Illinois.

CHASES THIEF IN NIGHTGOWN

Bayonne Girl Fires Gun as She Runs in Street—He Escapes.

Residents along Broadway, Bayonne, were awakened on Sunday night by the sound of several pistol shots. Hurrying to the windows they were astonished to see a young woman in her nightgown, her hair streaming over her shoulders, running after a man.

The young woman was Miss Margaret Nugent of 9 East Fifteenth Street, and in her right hand she carried a revolver which she fired at intervals until all the shots were exhausted. None of the bullets hit the man and he soon disappeared.

Later it was learned that the man was a thief and had been trying to break into the National Grocery Store at Fifteenth Street and Broadway when seen by Miss Nugent from her bedroom window.

SECRET INDICTMENT IS THAW'S FEAR NOW

Silence of Jerome and Dutchess County Jury Worries Lawyers on Eve of Fight.

HIS MOTHER WITH HIM

Governor to Open Hearing This Morning and Says There Should Be No Delay in Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 22.—Counsel for Harry K. Thaw held long conferences to-day preparing for some new move on the part of William Travers Jerome. The lawyers are convinced that Mr. Jerome has some sensation in reserve and his silence is worrying them. They have been informed that the Dutchess County Grand Jury refused to indict Thaw on a conspiracy charge, but they fear that a secret indictment has been found on some other charge. Indeed, they still have some apprehension that when Mr. Jerome appears he will produce a conspiracy indictment secretly returned by the Dutchess County Grand Jury.

If Mr. Jerome presses the charge of conspiracy there should be no reason for delay in the extradition hearing to-morrow morning. If he seeks to extradite on another charge new papers must be filed and a date must be set for another hearing. Thaw's lawyers frankly admitted to-night that Mr. Jerome had them guessing.

Gov. Felker arrived in Concord at noon to-day and announced that the hearing would begin at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. He said as a usual thing extradition was a simple matter. He asked about the stories that Thaw had not been indicted by the Dutchess County Grand Jury and said that if the lawyers raised such a point it would cause complicationh and it would be necessary for him to consult Attorney General Tuttle. "I don't know whether it will be necessary to delay my decision for any length of time," he said. "That will depend upon the questions raised at the hearing."

Crowd To Be Excluded.

Gov. Felker ordered that only lawyers and correspondents be admitted to the hearing, saying it would be dangerous to open the State House to the throng only curious to see the fugitive.

"I consider that it would be the better and safer plan to shut them all out," he said. Thaw will not have to appear unless he wishes to do so."

The Governor made an investigation of the papers in the case this afternoon. The impression here is that he will order Thaw extradited if he can see his way clear to do so. He denied, however, that he had made any statement to that effect.

Thaw and his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, met to-night for the first time since the fugitive escaped from Matteawan. Mrs. Thaw arrived at Concord at 7:30 o'clock, making the last fifty miles of the trip from Montreal by a slow accommodation train in order to escape a crowd at the railroad station here.

She drove to the hotel in a closed automobile with her other son, Josiah Thaw. Some of the correspondents recognized the little woman in black as she slipped from the automobile and hurried into the hotel. A bell boy led her to the "throne" room, where Thaw was talking with one of his attorneys. Thaw himself opened the door.

Greets His Mother.

Thaw had expected his mother to-night, but he did not know that she had arrived in the city until she reached here. He stepped into the hallway to greet her and, placing his hand on her shoulders, kissed his mother on the cheek.

"Hello, Harry, you look well," she said in a low voice.

"Yes, mother," he replied, "I never felt better in my life."

Thaw and his mother then walked slowly down the hallway toward the rooms which had been reserved for her. Josiah Thaw, who had stopped for a minute at the desk in the hotel lobby, walked down the hallway and shook hands with his brother, then called out to Harry that he would see him after dinner and hurried away to the dining room. Thaw stalked back to the "throne" room. Marshall Nute and Thaw's other attendants withdrew to an adjoining parlor during the family reunion.

Thaw and his mother talked about the case until nearly 11 o'clock to-night. Mrs. Thaw said that she did not believe the application for extradition would be granted. She expects to be present at the hearing before Gov. Felker to-morrow.

Mrs. Thaw began to take an active part in the case soon after her arrival, and went over a statement prepared by her son, cutting out one sentence before it was made public. In the first statement Thaw denied a report that he intended to make his home at Manchester, N. H., if freed.

The statement read in part:

What our friends in New Hampshire want is the defeat of this dishonest attempt to extradite me to New York. They know that if the charge of conspiracy was honest, Judge Chase would not oppose it, and I would not oppose it, but would hurry into New York and get a trial by a New York jury. However, every one knows that this criminal charge is only made as a subterfuge to be used in New Hampshire and dropped as soon as I reach New York.

The New York officials themselves admit that they cannot extradite any one as a lunatic, so all our friends know that the charge of conspiracy is only a pretense. It is only a fraud they wish to use here.

The Grand Jury of Dutchess County, New York, also know it is a fraud and have already voted and refused to indict. As the Grand Jury will not indict, the requisition is too flimsy, and my mother and I hope at last to go home in peace. While any one would be proud to be a citizen of New Hampshire, I feel that as I am not one, my place is in Pennsylvania, where I belong, and where my mother, who has undergone so much strain, lives. My desire is to see her again in peace and comfort such as she enjoyed before we became the target for the attacks of a few rich and influential gentlemen in New York.

We hope people in New Hampshire will help us on our way home.

Big Array of Lawyers.

Thaw will be represented by six attorneys, ex-Justice William Chase, Nathaniel E. Martin, George F. Morris, Merrill Shurtless, Joseph A. Donigan, and ex-Gov. William A. Stone of Pennsylvania.

According to the plan arranged at a conference to-night, Mr. Chase will make the opening argument, and will be followed by Mr. Stone. Unless some unexpected evidence is produced by Mr. Jerome, this will conclude the case for Thaw. The New Hampshire lawyers retained in Thaw's interests are considered the pick of the State.

New York State will be represented by Mr. Jerome, Deputy Attorney General Kennedy, and Bernard Jacobs of Lancaster, N. H. The arrival of Messrs. Jerome and Kennedy was being awaited with much anxiety by the Thaw lawyers to-night.

After the family consultation Mrs. Thaw called the correspondents. She was smiling, and said that all the good news she had heard had driven away the effects of her recent illness. Then she gave out this statement:

I break my rule not to speak to newspaper reporters only so far as to say that I hope Judge Chase will thoroughly convince the New Hampshire authorities that my son has been unjustly persecuted by these New York officials, and force them to explain the animus of their pursuit. I believe the sympathy of New Hampshire is with us in our desire to secure justice and at the same time compel an explanation.

A great crowd is expected about the State House to-morrow, and special police arrangements have been made to prevent disorder.

DENVER, Sept. 22.—"Every decent man and woman in the United States should be heartily with you in this struggle," says Col. Roosevelt in a letter to Judge Ben B. Lindsey, answering one from Lindsey thanking Roosevelt for promised support. The Colonel says in part:

"I have been reading with keen interest, and with even keener indignation, of the assault which is now being made upon you and those under and with you in Denver. It is much more than a matter of mere local interest. You are one of the men who has done most for the moral awakening of our people.

ation, if the members want it, in stating or expressing his opinion, as he has no wish to evade any responsibility."

Presiding Judge Cullen told the members of the court that they had power to declare an executive session. Judge Collin then moved that the Senate Chamber be cleared. This motion was seconded by Senator Christopher D. Sullivan, and was carried unanimously. It took some little time for the Sergeants-at-Arms and the doorkeepers to get the spectators out of the galleries.

D Cady Herrick, chief counsel for Mr. Sulzer, asked Judge Cullen if counsel were to be excused, too. Judge Cullen told Mr. Herrick that he might leave the Senate Chamber, and directed the court crier to excuse the witnesses until to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

"All the journalists and counsel will leave the room. All except the members of the court and the officers will leave," said Judge Cullen.

Senator John F. Murtaugh of Chemung moved that the Senate lobbies be cleared, too. The presiding Judge sustained this order. Not for six years has such absolute privacy been insured in the onyx chamber where the High Court of Impeachment sits.

Judge Werner was the first to speak at the executive session.

"I move that we proceed to the roll call, which probably will bring on any discussion there may be," said the Judge.

Senator Sullivan again seconded the motion. Senator Thompson of Niagara then made a formal motion that the objection raised by Mr. Sulzer's counsel be overruled. Presiding Judge Cullen directed that the question be put in that form.

The Voting Begins.

"The question is," said Judge Cullen, "shall the objection to the jurisdiction of the court to proceed on the articles of impeachment presented to it be sustained because the Assembly was in extraordinary session and the Governor had not recomended any action on the subject matter? Shall that objection be sustained or not?"

Senator Argetsinger, whose name appeared first on the rollcall, was recorded in the negative. Judge Bartlett, called next, expressed a desire to give his reasons for voting in the negative. Presiding Judge Cullen informed him that he might do so. Judge Bartlett, however, refrained from any explanation, and merely asked to be recorded in the negative. When Emory A. Chase, one of the Judges serving on the Court of Appeals by designation, was reached, he said:

"I vote No. I do not care to go into detail in expressing my opinion for the moment. But when the roll call is completed, if I am not satisfied with what has been said already, and want to add something, I wish to reserve that privilege."

Judge Collin reserved the same privilege. When Judge Cullen was reached he said:

"I vote No, and I might as well take this opportunity of expressing the reasons for my vote."

Judge Cullen first dissented from the opinion expressed by Alton B. Parker and Edgar T. Brackett of counsel for the Board of Managers that the Assembly had inherent power to convene itself. He said that such a rule would cause no end of confusion. On the principal question before the High Court of Impeachment, the Presiding Judge said:

Judge Cullen's Opinion.

It is urged by the learned counsel for the Managers that the Assembly has the inherent right to meet at any time and present articles of impeachment. From that doctrine I dissent in toto. It is true that it is the Assembly that has the right given it by the Constitution to impeach, but the Assembly does not consist of the individual members of its body except when they are duly assembled. That is plain elementary parliamentary law. It is also the common law applying to all bodies.

The individual action even of a majority does not constitute the action of the body, whatever it may be, unless all parties have had an opportunity to attend and be heard. Any other rule, it seems to me, would cause, or might cause, inextricable confusion in the management of public affairs.

If we assume that any member of the Assembly may convene that body or the Speaker for the purpose of impeachment, the body so meeting would have no power to protect itself. It would be a scene of disorder, and, if so, before there had been any election of a Speaker one member might convene it at one spot and one at another. It would lead to anarchy.

The extreme that has been suggested, that a Governor might commit treason, while it is theoretically possible to imagine it is quite improbable and I think little weight should be given to it. Anyway, extreme cases do not control the construction of statues or constitutions.

The Constitution gives the Assembly power to impeach. It was in regular session. I use regular session in the sense that it was regularly convened, in response to a call by the Governor. Now, having the power of impeachment, it could exercise that at any time unless we find another provision in the Constitution which restricts it or forbids it. That provision is claimed to be found in the fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution, in which it is said: 'At extraordinary sessions no subject shall be acted upon except such as the Governor may recommend for consideration.'

Does that apply to this power of impeachment? It is urged, of course, that this is not an ordinary legislative power except in the sense that anything that is done by the Legislature is legislative. The counsel for the respondent contend that this includes all business that may be transacted by either House of any character. Now, there would be force in that argument if there were not other facts that really abrogate the force of the argument and tend to establish a contrary proposition.

After giving his interpretation of the meaning the framers of the Constitution intended to convey, Judge Cullen concluded:

I think that when it was said that the Governor shall submit business for consideration to the Legislature, it was the Governor's business that was meant, not that of the Legislature, not of the Senate. But it gave the Assembly the right to impeach.

I therefore am of the opinion that this does not come within the limitation of the Constitution. We must give a reasonable construction of it, and, so construed, these subjects all relate to hat the Legislature as a body can do and not to the power vested in one branch of the Legislature. I vote no.

Wende Explains His Vote.

After the Presiding Judge had given his opinion none of his colleagues, whether Judge or Senator, showed any desire to explain his vote, excepting Senator Wende, who said:

"As I read the Constitution, the Assembly had an absolute right of framing these articles of impeachment up to the time that it took an adjournment sine die. When it adopted the resolution adjourning sine die it foreclosed its right to any question of impeachment or to act upon anything else. I therefore voted aye."

When the roll call was completed Judge Bartlett moved that it stand as the vote of the court. Senator Wende seconded the motion. Presiding Judge Cullen, however, decided that the roll should be called again. This was done without changing the result.

"And now, gentlemen," said Judge Cullen, "it seems to the presiding officer that it would be wiser to announce now to the public this decision rather than to have it held until to-morrow, and then in the meantime have people speculating as to what this court has decided one way or the other."

It was promptly at 2 o'clock, the hour named for reassembling, that Presiding Judge Cullen called the High Court of Impeachment to order. The roll call revealed that Judges Hiscock and Hogan and Senators Boylan, Brown, Carroll, Emerson, Fitzgerald, Frawley, Heacock, Heffernan, Hewitt, McClelland, Malone, Peckham, Pollock, Sannar, Thomas, Walters, Wheeler, and Wilson were absent. While the session was in progress a majority of the absentees came in and took their seats.

Louis Marshall, who, when the court adjourned last Friday, was in the midst of a lengthy and elaborate argument to show that the impeachment was illegal because at the time the Legislature was convened in extraordinary session and powerless to consider any subject except by recommendation from the Governor, resumed his plea.

When Mr. Marshall was interrupted last Friday he was discussing the action of the men who framed the Constitution of Mississippi when they provided that the law-making body of that State in extraordinary session assembled should have no power to act upon any matter other than that designated by the Governor in his proclamation calling the session, but created an exception for impeachments and examination into the accounts of State officials.

Lesson from Mississippi.

Mr. Marshall at that time declared that the action of the Mississippi Constitution builders, who beyond doubt had modeled their organic law after that of this State in all other respects, showed that they considered the New York State Constitution to prohibit the Assembly at an extraordinary session from considering impeachments unless such action had been recommended by the Governor.

Mr. Marshall said that the sweeping nature of the prohibition in the Constitution of this State and the intent of the Constitutional Convention in 1872 which drafted it would be obvious if it were borne in mind that the New York Constitution makers of that year had before them the record of certain happenings in Florida, where Gov. Harrison Reed was impeached at an extraordinary session of the Legislature in 1868, with the result that the Supreme Court of that State—a tribunal corresponding to our Court of Appeals—unanimously decided that the Governor had been illegally impeached.

In the Florida Constitution the prohibition is directed against the transaction of any "legislative" business except such as the Governor may recommend. The contention of the Board of Impeachment managers in the present case is that impeachment is a judicial and not a legislative function. In citing the decision of the Supreme Court of Florida on the impeachment of Gov. Reed, Mr. Marshall aimed to show that this tribunal regarded it as legislative business.

"The court was unanimously of the opinion that inasmuch as no quorum of the Senate was in attendance the extraordinary session of the Legislature had not been constitutionally organized, and that it could not therefore act on any subject," said Mr. Marshall. He contended that the framers of the Constitution could not possibly have used any broader language than when they provided that the Legislature in extraordinary session could consider "no subject" except by recommendation of the Governor. He said further in part:

Not a Judicial Act.

There is not to be found in the history of any of the States a single instance of the institution of impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session of the Legislature.

But it is argued that, when the Assembly exercises the power of impeachment, it acts judicially. While in one sense it may be said that, by voting an impeachment, it is setting the judicial machinery in motion, in that articles of impeachment must precede the trial of an impeachment, yet an impeachment is merely the equivalent of an indictment, and the Assembly, when it makes its accusation in the form of an impeachment, is performing no other or different function than those exercised by a Grand Jury when it finds an indictment. When a Grand Jury finds an indictment, it does not act judicially, any more than, in those jurisdictions where informations have taken the place of indictments, the filing of an information by a District or State Attorney can be said to be a judicial act.

The Assembly, with respect to an impeachment, and the Grand Jury, with respect to an indictment, perform the function of accusers, and their act is administrative and not judicial. It does not constitute a judgment. It does not require the accused to be heard. It can proceed without notice to the accused. It is only a step in the process of conferring upon the tribunal which is to try the indictment or the impeachment jurisdiction of the subject matter.

Limitation of Powers.

The finding of an indictment or the voting of an impeachment, viewed in the light of these authorities, does not, therefore, constitute a judicial act, in any sense of the term.

But even if, by a stretch of the imagination, an indictment or an impeachment could be said to be a judicial act, it is difficult to appreciate the materiality of such a conclusion to the interpretation of the constitutional provision now under consideration. It does not create any exception to the limitation which the Constitution imposes upon the Legislature or on the Assembly. It does not limit the restriction imposed upon them, with respect to action on subjects proper to be considered by them. It does not permit them to exercise judicial powers.

The limitation upon the exercise of power at extraordinary sessions of either the Legislature or the Senate is not confined to the exercise of legislative power alone, for the Senate can under no circumstances exercise legislative power at an extraordinary session when it sits alone, by itself, without the Assembly. It, therefore, the limitation on the power to act as applied to the Senate is not confined to legislation, how can it be so confined when it is convened together with the Senate at an extraordinary session of the Legislature?

It clearly follows that the contention of the Impeachment Managers, that the limitation on the power of extraordinary sessions is a limitation upon action "along legislative lines," is fallacious.

Can't Sit Without Senate.

As a Grand Jury cannot sit except in connection with the court, so the Assembly cannot sit to discharge like duties, except in connection with the Senate, and when both are in session at the same time as branches of the Legislature. If the Assembly should meet spontaneously and find articles of impeachment, what could it do with them unless the Senate were in session?

The theory of the Constitution is that the Assembly can be in session only when the Senate is, and only as a part of the Legislature. The Senate is expressly authorized to sit alone, and at a time when the Assembly is not in session, but, as we have shown, only when called in extraordinary session by the Governor. The fact that the like power was not conferred upon the Assembly is irrefragible evidence that it was not intended that the Assembly should possess such power for any purpose.

It will doubtless be argued that, under our interpretation, the Governor could not be impeached except at a regular session of the Legislature, since it would be unnatural for him to recommend to the Legislature, at an extraordinary session, the consideration of the subject of his impeachment. This, it is claimed, constitutes a reductio ad absurdum of our contention.

That, however, is a complete begging of the question. The mere fact that the framers of the Constitution have not provided for the contingency of the impeachment of the Governor at an extraordinary session does not deprive the clearly conceived limitations upon the powers of an extraordinary session of their undoubted significance, or render them ineffectual in whole or in part.

Constitutional Objections.

It will be asserted by the Impeachment Managers that this objection is technical in its nature; that the accused should not be permitted to avoid a hearing upon the charges that have been made against him, that he should meet those charges by evidence, and not resort to constitutional or legal objections.

That would be a sad day in our juridical history, when reliance upon the Constitution and the law of the land were to be regarded as technical, or were to be contemned and deemed unworthy. So long as our people may proudly boast that this is a Government of laws and not of men, so long will its liberties be preserved and its institutions perpetuated. But whenever the time shall come when the ignorance of the mob, its passions and its prejudices, or when considerations of mere political expediency, may prevail against the word of the organic law, when the time-honored concepts of "due process of law" and "the law of the land," shall be treated as mere jests, and become the objects of derision and contempt, when the usurpation by one branch of the Government of the powers which belong to another, may be regarded with equanimity, then the hour of disintegration will be at hand, and it will only require one endowed with the necessary audacity to ride rough-shod over the ruins of the Constitution, and that system of Government which was made us a people happy, law-abiding and free, will give way to the hysterical caprices of tyranny and despotism.

We are confident that this tribunal will not shrink from the duty of applying the Constitution, regardless of the outcries of those who, for ulterior reasons, are prepared to strike it down if it stands in the way of the accomplishment of their selfish purposes. It is one of the glories of our Court of Appeals, that it has steadfastly closed its ears to the discordant ravings of those who have from time to time demanded that it do violence to the Constitution and the law, in order that the victim whom they have sought to immolate might not escape their vengeance. It has never been terrorized or coerced by threats or cajoled by flattery or influenced by ridicule, or by the fear of unpopularity, into doing an act of positive injustice, and the sneer which regards the taking of shelter under the Constitution, as a technicality, has never led it to withdraw its protection from him who sought it.

With all solemnity we express the confidence that this tribunal will not be swayed from a proper and due regard for the mandate of the Constitution, by the unworthy suggestion that to do so is to permit a technicality to triumph. To dismiss the articles of impeachment which have been presented to this tribunal for lack of jurisdiction, would not be a triumph of technicality. It would be the victory of the Constitution and of the law. It would be a vindication of that sacred instrument to which we all owe fealty.

Judge Cullen Interrupts.

At one point in his argument Mr. Marshall was interrupted by Presiding Judge Cullen.

"If I recollect correctly," said Judge Cullen, "the Assembly was not in session during the proceedings in Saratoga at which Judge Barnard was tried."

"Your recollection is entirely correct, your Honor," said Mr. Marshall, "but, as I have stated, that is of no consequence, because, as I have stated, the Assembly in regular session impeached and then presented the matter to the Senate while it was in regular session, and then the Senate and the Court of Appeals, or a major part thereof, heard the case in the absence of the Assembly."

Alton B. Parker, speaking from the floor, answered Mr. Marshall. He said that Mr. Marshall erred in saying that counsel for the managers proposed to attack the position taken by the Sulzer counsel on the ground that it was a technicality.

"We do not challenge their right to make the demurrer," he said. "We challenge its correctness."

In the last analysis he said the defense's argument came to this: The Assembly had not the power of impeachment because the Legislature, of which it was a branch, was in extraordinary session.

"If I understand the argument," said Judge Parker, "it is based either upon a misapprehension of the nature of the impeachment proceedings or upon a confusion arising between the judicial power of the Assembly to impeach and the legislative power to enact legislation. The grant of power of the Assembly is as broad as human language can make it There is no provision in our Constitution that the Assembly should consider the matter at all in regular session. It has been done, and because it has been done it has not been challenged. It is now done for the first time in an extraordinary session, and hence the challenge, upon which ingenious legal minds have been at work for a long time."

Parker Cites Instances.

The opinion of Justice Hasbrouck, challenged by Mr. Marshall, that the Assembly may be self-convened, was boldly asserted by Mr. Parker as the position actually taken by the defense.

"If it is conceived, for instance, that the time should come in the history of this State when a Governor should be guilty of treason, would there be any question in your minds of the power and the duty of the Speaker of the Assembly, the Legislature having adjourned, to invite the Assembly to the Capitol at Albany to consider this matter? And when they should be gathered here, all of the members of the Assembly being present, that it would be within their power to save the State from the great injury which might be wrought to it by this Governor, because of incompetency or because he was guilty of treason, that they should have the power to impeach him?

"Let us assume another instance. Take a case that we have had within the last few years. We have had a State officer who was a member of a board that had the making of contracts for the construction of roads throughout this State. We know that large appropriations are made. Suppose we had a time when a State official was a member of such a board, dominating another official, and assume there was $50,000,000 of the people's money in the Treasury, ready to be expended in building roads; and suppose this official dominating the weaker member of the board, and suppose together they could enter into a conspiracy for the letting of contracts for road building throughout this State for 25, 40, and 50 per cent. more than the actual cost of it, and that there was a division of the profits between the contractor and this State official.

"Suppose there was such a situation, and the contracts were being made day by day, and the Assembly should meet under circumstances which I have described. Is there any one who doubts that the High Court of Impeachment would sustain the action of the Assembly and would hold that it was the duty of the Assembly under those circumstances to protect the people of the State, and that the people were not impotent under this provision of the Constitution, but that there was help and relief to the people of the State?"

Recommend Own Impeachment.

"It was not to be supposed," said Mr. Parker, "that the Governor would recommend his own impeachment:

"Suppose, now," he went on, "that upon adjournment of the general session of the Legislature the Governor should become at once totally incompetent or that he should have commited treason against the State or pursued any other course subversive of State government. Is it to be supposed that a person capable of such conduct would convene the Assembly for the purpose of recommending his own impeachment; that he would or ever might do such a thing? It is contrary to the experience of mankind and to the plainest dictates of common sense.

"It was never intended that the administration of the State Government should depend upon any such contingency as that. If so, then the State may be at any time subject not only to having its affairs administered by a person guilty of misconduct, but it must suffer from the close of one session of the Legislature until the beginning of the next, or for substantially one-half of the Governor's term."

Mr. Parker declared that it would not even be necessary for an assumedly self-convened Assembly to make its report to the Senate, but that the impeachment report might be made to the President of the Senate, whose duty it would be to call the High Court of Impeachment, in which the Senate would convene.

Mr. Parker took up the functions of Assembly and Senate, and emphasized the essential independence each of the other.

"There is no reason," he said, "why, upon extraordinary session of the Legislature, the Assembly should not impeach, just as well as at the regular session. There is not any provision of the Constitution which in terms provides that it may impeach in either regular or extraordinary session. It is sufficient, so far as the Constitution is concerned, that it grants the power to impeach."

Authority of the Governor.

Mr. Parker insisted that it was the Legislature which the Governor was empowered to convoke, and that it was therefore the Legislature, not the Assembly, which the clause in the Constitution quoted by Mr. Marshall restrained from acting on any subject except such as recommended by the Governor.

"And necessarily the subjects were meant to be legislative subjects," he continued. "It must be so, for the Legislature can consider only legislative subjects. The Assembly may consider those things which belong to it alone. If the power of impeachment is granted to the Assembly at all, it must be a power that continues throughout 365 days in the year.

"It will not do for us to assume that the time ever will come when there will be a Governor who would convene the Legislature in extraordinary session and recommend the Assembly to impeach him. And there should be no decision by this High Court of this important question, except along the line of the natural and reasonable construction which these two provisions of the Constitution require. They can stand together, side by side, the one giving the grant of the power of impeachment to the Assembly, which should continue 365 days in the year, the other giving the Governor power to assemble the Legislature in session for the purpose of considering legislation, or the Senate, which he may assemble only for the purpose of considering legislation."

Mr. Brackett's Argument.

Ex-Senator Edgar Truman Brackett of counsel for the Managers continued the argument against the pleading that the Court of Impeachment had no jurisdiction. He said, in part:

The defendant stands properly impeached by the Assembly. These impeachment articles were not adopted at any extraordinary session of the Legislature, or any session of the Legislature. They were adopted at a meeting of the Assembly which happended to be held during a time when there was an extraordinary session of the Legislature, as it could have been at any time, whether the Legislature was in session or not. In the second place, the Assembly may adopt impeachment proceedings at an extraordinary session of the Legislature. There is no constitutional limitation against its doing so. There is no authority anywhere for the Governor to convene the Assembly alone.

While it is conceivable that a Governor may be of so high a mind and so certain that he has done nothing worthy of impeachment or criticism that he would issue a call convening the Assembly and recommend the consideration of the subject of impeachment, and then join battle with them in an orderly way as to whether he was guilty of anything impeachable, perhaps that is too much to hope for if it is rather probable to be expected that he distinctly would not do so, but would shield himself behind what is a technicality, that he cannot be approached in the manner and at the time that the proceedings were instituted if at a special session.

Assume that soon after the adjournment of the regular session, a Governor should commit a series of flagrant acts. Would the people of the State be compelled to sit helplessly by during the months until the first Wednesday in January following, until the Legislature could get together in regular session under the direction of the Constitution, before staying his wicked acts?

"Oh," my friend says in his argument, "it doesn't amount to much; it is only a few months any way."

Can any sane man who loves orderly administration consider with complacency a crime of that kind? Is it true that throughout seven or eight months of the year a wild man shall be permitted to remain in office, particularly in the office of Governor. It is enough to say that the Chief Executive of the State could do acts that might bankrupt and ruin it.

The Assembly, in its solemn power of impeachment, may get together upon any call and in any place and in any way.

Taking up the defense's argument that the Legislature could at the extraordinary session consider nothing except subects recommended by the Governor, Senator Brackett said.

"The Governor's proclamation urged the Legislature to the consideration of his direct primaries bill. The Attorney General has held that it was therefore within the power of the Legislature through a joint committee to investigate all frauds on the election law which it was to consider for amendment. Therefore the Frawley Committee was properly invested with power to investigate the election law in order to enable the Legislature to legislate properly.

"In doing this, the committee suddenly discovers a series of crimes by the Governor-elect. Having done so, it was the duty as well as the right of the Assembly to impeach the Governor. And therefore if, as our opponents contend, impeachment was a legislative act, it was a legislative act in strict conformity with the recommendations of the Governor for the consideration of amendment of the election law. And, I submit, no more effective means of procuring the proper amendment of the election laws could be devised than such an impeachment for their violation."

Mr. Marshall in Rebuttal.

Mr. Marshall, in rebuttal, declared that the State would be beset with a veritable Pandora's box of ills if, as counsel had contended, the Assembly could convene itself at will. Concerning Judge Parker's picture of a Governor running riot with the State's appropriations with no regularly convened Assembly to check him. Mr. Marshall said:

"Has it occurred to my friend that it might be that the power of impeachment would be exercised for the very purpose of preventing these looters and contractors and dishonest officials from putting their hands into the public Treasury?

"It is said, suppose the Governor is guilty of treason, what can be done then? It is a very simple thing. If he should lead the militia in this State against Massachusetts, as has been suggested, if he should try to seize the Supreme Court of the State—and that would be a treasonable act—all you would have to do would be to go to the District Attorney of Albany County and call his attention to Section 2,380 of the Penal Code, and the Governor would be at once placed where he belongs."

Senator Brackett suggested: "Suppose he pleaded guilty to the charge and then pardoned himself?"

"He could not pardon himself. Conviction would remove him from office."

Mr. Marshall made light of the contention of the Managers' counsel that there should be a distinction made between the Legislature and the Assembly, adding: "They would raise the question, 'When is a Legislature not a Legislature?' Each house is a part of the Legislature at all times, without regard to what function it is performing."

Mr. Marshall—Now they say the Assembly may come together at any time and impeach, and all that they have to do is to present the articles of impeachment to the President of the Senate. Of course, an impeachment could not be presented to the President on Fourteenth Street in the City of New York, nor in the Throne Room at Delmonico's in the City of New York.

Mr. Brackett—Nor in the Republican Club.

The President—There is no use in discussing the question when there is no such provision in the Constitution.

Suggestions by Senators.

Senator Murtaugh interrupted Mr. Marshall to ask whether the Constitution, in providing for a Court of Impeachment, did not intend to remove the power of dealing with a vicious and unfit Governor from the hands of the District Attorney and mihor courts to officials of equal rank with the Governor.

"I believe our penal law is no respecter of persons," replied Mr. Marshall.

"But hasn't the Governor the power to suspend a District Attorney?" objected Senator McClelland.

"Yes, and thereafter there remains the Attorney General," replied Mr. Marshall.

The vote was then taken to hold an executive session for deliberation and vote upon the demurrer that had been argued.

The argument on the third demurrer of the defense will begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PUT OFF GARRISON HEARING.

Court Permits Technical Custody, but Sheriff Locks Prisoner Up Again

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 22.—James C. Garrison, the Sulzer press agent, who was arrested on the floor of the Assembly for refusing to answer questions after he had charged that four of the Assembly votes for the Sulzer impeachment resolution had been bought, was taken from the county penitentiary this afternoon to Troy on a writ of habeas corpus and produced before Supreme Court Justice Aaron V. S. Cochran, who had issued the writ. With Garrison were his counsel, Gilbert E. Roe of New York and Judge John T. McDonough of this city. Garry Benson, proprietor of the hotel for which Garrison was forced to exchange the penitentiary, provided $1,000 bond to insure the Sheriff against the escape of the prisoner.

Justice Cochran was trying a jury case when Garrison was brought into court. At the request of Deputy Attorney General James A. Parsons, for the Assembly, who submitted that he was not sufficiently informed about the case as yet, the Justice granted an adjournment until 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. At the same time he expressed a desire that the case be heard before one of the Albany Justices. Counsel for the prisoner insisted that this was not feasible, inasmuch as both Albany Justices, Alden Chester and William F. Rudd, were out of town and not expected back till Thursday or Friday. They asked that Garrison be remanded either in custody of his counsel or in the custody of the Sheriff. In the latter case they counted upon the Sheriff's turning Garrison over to a special deputy and allowing him, as in the case of Harry K. Thaw in New Hampshire, to stay at his hotel with the deputy watching him.

Justice Cochran remanded Garrison in the custody of the Sheriff But when counsel for Garrison made their request of Sheriff Peasley the latter denied it. He said he had been advised by his counsel, Recorder Frost, that Garrison would be safer in jail. He refused an offer of $15,000 bail, which Garrison's friend Garry Benson made to insure the Sheriff against the prisoner's escape.

Judge McDonough commented indignantly this evening upon the course adopted by the Sheriff, which, he said, compelled Garrison to remain in the penitentiary hospital ward with five sick prisoners, of whom three were colored.

"We feel that this has been done in pursuance of a deliberate policy to humiliate Mr. Garrison," he said. "He has not committed any crime and has no intention of escaping."

Garrison will be taken before Justice Cochran again to-morrow afternoon, and if there be no further adjournment the writ of habeas corpus will be argued then.

KETCHAM IS DEPOSED.

Sulzer Follower Ousted from Orange County Chairmanship.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, Sept. 22.—George F. Ketcham of Warwick, who was Chairman of the Democratic Committee for Orange County for sixteen years, was deposed at the party meeting held here to-day. William P. Gregg of Port Jervis was chosen to succeed him, but not until Mr. Ketcham had made a speech, in which he said he was being deposed because he was a follower of William Sulzer.

Arthur A. McLean of Newburg led the fight on Mr. Ketcham. Mr. McLean is Treasurer of the Democratic State Committee. Mr. Ketcham withdrew his name and only one candidate was balloted for, the nomination of Mr. Gregg being made unanimously. Mr. Ketcham said the change was the result of an effort to "Tammanyize" Orange County.

DENIAL FROM BARNES.

Not Attempting to Influence Members of Impeachment Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 22.—In a telegram to Elon R. Brown, minority leader of the Senate, here to-day, William Barnes, Jr., denies that he has used his influence with members of the Sulzer Impeachment Court to control their votes.

The telegram was sent from New York by Mr. Barnes, and read:

"It seems hardly necessary for me to advise you that under no possible conditions would I seek to influence any member of that court regarding his vote, because it would be incomprehensible to you that I would commit so manifest an impropriety.

"The public should be early informed that such articles as may appear in the future will be based upon no act of mine, because there will be none upon which to hang even a suspicion.

"Each individual member of that court should come to his conclusion in accordance with his own conscience. To that I have no relation. No man in this State or elsewhere has the right to attempt to influence a single member of that court."

Condemn Sulzer Impeachment.

At a meeting of the United Charitable Circle, Inc., held at 227 Lenox Avenue, resolutions were unanimously adopted declaring that the Sulzer "articles of impeachment are contrary to the moral feelings of this community," condemning "the acts of Tammany Hall and its leaders in causing the proceedings to be brought," asserting "that such acts are against the sentiment and against the wishes and desires of the honest and decent people of the State of New York," and urging "the Senators of the State to vote for dismissal of the articles of impeachment as illegal and unfounded."

PRESENTS GRAFT EVIDENCE.

Hennessy Lays Highway Fraud Case Before District Attorney.

BUFFALO, Sept. 22.—John A. Hennessy, special investigator under the Moreland act, spent three hours with District Attorney Dudley to-day going over evidence of alleged frauds on State highway work in Erie County. Although Mr. Dudley declined to discuss the evidence, it is understood that he regards it of sufficient importance to lay before the Grand Jury which will be in session next week. Mr. Hennessy left for Suffolk County at 10 o'clock.

"My engineers have found in Erie County some of the worst highway work in the State," he said. "Additional evidence of fraud will be ready for the Grand Jury when I return here next week."

The Food Route To Steady Health

Many people are kept ill because they do not know how to select food that their own particular bodies will take up and build upon.

What will answer for one will not do for another.

If one is ailing it is safe to change food entirely and go on a plain, simple diet, say:

Some fruit
Dish of Grape-Nuts and Cream
Soft-boiled eggs
Crisp Toast
A Cup of Postum
no more.

Man! But a diet like that makes one feel good after a few days use.

The most perfectly made food for human use is

Grape-Nuts

Food That Saved When Everything Else Failed.

The food route is a safe and very sure road back to health.

"For six years I was a serious sufferer from indigestion and general stomach troubles, from the improperly cooked food in boarding houses and restaurants of which I was a victim.

"During three of the six years, I was so bad off nervous prostration set in and I sought relief of a specialist without success. I had gotten so that I could eat almost nothing and was steadily losing flesh.

"Many different foods and preparations were recommended for a trial, without success, and I had become indifferent to all food.

"Some months after seeing your ad in the daily papers about the scientifically prepared food, Grape-Nuts, and its good qualities, and being driven almost to despair over my plight, I skeptically resolved to give Grape-Nuts a trial as a last resort. And I thank God that I did.

"From my first meal of Grape-Nuts I felt a great change for the better; the knot that arose in the chest after meals disappeared; stomach ceased its uneasiness and gradually the nervousness disappeared.

"For about a year I ate Grape-Nuts and cream 3 times a day and have gained 54 pounds of lost weight and weigh 5 pounds more than I ever did and now do not find any trouble in using my old-time relishes with my Grape-Nuts.

BATTISTA'S CHIMES PRODUCED DISCORD

Preonzo Was Wrongly Credited with Having Asked for the Bells Sent to Gnosca.

ABLE TO SUPPLY HER OWN

Therefore the Donor Suffered from the Error of a Scribe, Which Is Herein Set Right.

When, several weeks ago, it was told in THE TIMES that Battista, one of the waiters at the Imperial, had made a gift of $300 to the village of Gnosca, in his native Switzerland, to make it possible for the local church to own a full set of chimes, it could not have been foreseen that the announcement would stir up a teapot tempest such as has since raged about the head of Battista and among the local Italian-Swiss colony and found echo in the far-off community of Preonzo.

Preonzo boasts something like 300 souls. Over the hill, in the next valley, less than two miles away, lies Gnosca, which lays claim to no more than 200 inhabitants. Preonzo contains many well-to-do folk. Gnosca is unpretentious. Preonzo can buy all the bells it wishes without outside help.

When Gnosca wanted some more sweet-throated brass instruments for its own Swiss bellringer to peal it thought of Battista, native of Preonzo, but a friend of many of Gnosca's people, who was known to be of a generous disposition toward the Church. It made a suggestion, and warm-hearted Battista immediately drew $300 out of the savings bank and sent it over with his blessing. As a result he received a letter signed by twenty-seven of the leading men of Gnosca thanking him for his generous gift.

Unfortunately for the peace of mind of Battista and that of some of the local Preonzo colony, when the story was reported an error was made in the name of the place that got the bells. Battista, who had no thought that his tale would appear in print, and who told the story to explain why he seemed happier than usual that day he received the letter of thanks, had not mentioned the name of the village he had honored, and when an inquiry was made later at the hotel one was told that it was Preonzo. Hence Preonzo got the glory, while Gnosca got the bells.

But Preonzo has those hereabouts who look out for anything that does not redound to its honor. It was intimated in the story that Preonzo, (which should have been spelled G-n-o-s-c-a,) had no rich people in it. It was this imputation that attracted the attention of G. Dell'Era of Weehawken, who is chef at the Union League Club. Mr. Dell'Era, who came from Preonzo twenty-five years ago, knew that Preonzo had not received from Battista $300 for bells. Therefore the intimation that Preonzo might have had to appeal for outside aid in such a good and sonorous cause must be refuted.

So Mr. Dell'Era dictated a statement in which he repelled the idea that Battista had bestowed bells upon Preonzo, and mentioned that the citizens of the place could well afford to purchase their own when it came to chimes. Unfortunately Mr. Dell'Era, though his letter gave evidences of some heat in preparation, neglected to sign his name to it, and there being no evidence as to who was responsible for it, the missive failed to find its way into print.

After a time Mr. Dell'Era sent a second communication to THE TIMES, this time signed. He acknowledged yesterday having sent the first letter, and said that he had had no wish to court publicity in the matter. Only a high sense of duty, it was gathered, caused him to write the second time.

Wherefore this correction is made in the interests of justice to Battista, who hopes to pay a visit to Preonzo before long, and hopes to find things pleasant, and in honor of the high purpose that animated Mr. Dell'Era when he wrote the anonymous letter to THE TIMES.

Won't Recognize California Divorce

Arthur R. Bastine, a real estate man, with offices at 1,178 Broadway, filed an answer yesterday to a Supreme Court suit brought by William J. Kitchener for the alienation of the affections of Mrs. Alice Wilson Kitchener. Bastine said that the woman for whose affections Kitchener was suing was now his wife, and that she married him in 1912, after divorcing Kitchener under the laws of California. Kitchener does not recognize the California divorce as binding upon him, and is suing Mrs. Kitchener-Bastine for divorce and the custody of his 17-year-old son, W. Francis Kitchener.

WHEN M. GAITZ-HOCKY LED

Armenonville Stood Up on Its Chairs to Applaud Him.

M. Gaitz-Hocky, leader of the orchestra at the Plaza, who has lately started things humming in the restaurant of the hotel, made the folk who were eating modest dinners at Armenonville one recent night sit up and take considerable notice, according to word brought back from Paris by M. Gaitz-Hocky himself.

It seems that the musician had been visiting relatives in Russia before he stopped in Paris on his way to visit a brother, who is in the feather business. To them came their nephew, who had built a wonderful big aeroplane, the biggest, according to the musician, that had been seen in France. Young Jean, the nephew, went up one day in the machine, but something went wrong. After a few days of mourning, one brother said to the other:

"Let's go out to the Bois to get a bite and cheer up." After the usual taxicab journey, they were set down at Armenonville. The brother who lives in Paris said to the musician:

"It would be nice for you to play."

So M. Gaitz-Hocky, who knows how it is done, walked over to the leader of the orchestra, slipped a five-franc piece across, and received the bow and violin and a smile.

In a moment the audience knew that a real musician was playing. Restless they had been under the ministrations of the regular leader. Now they quieted. Conversation ceased. Then it broke out afrssh, mostly in the shape of wondering comments. M. Gaitz-Hocky had told the leader he was an amateur.

As the violinist, who had scorned the offer of a score, wielded the bow, the crowded restaurant simply couldn't stand it. People were drawn to their feet and that was not far enough, the musician lifted them upon their chairs, where at the end they shouted "Bis!" and the other things Americans learn to shout in Paris, until M. Gaitz-Hocky was compelled to respond—once, twice, five times. Then it dawned upon several persons who stop at the Plaza and who were temporarily in exile that they knew this musician who was wielding the magic bow, and they crowded about and shook his hand.

But the leader of the orchestra by this time had become jealous. He cast at the intruder in spite of the five-franc piece, looks of hatred. Seeing which M. Gaitz-Hocky untied the prisoners he had drawn to the tops of chairs, wound up with a proper chord, or as near one as can be made with violin strings, bowed and handed over the fiddle.

"And say," added the voice that came over the telephone from the Plaza at the end of the recital that was substantially as above, "that's a crackajack story."

SUFFRAGISTS OUT TO-DAY.

Meetings in Fifty Parks and Fair at Mineola.

Out of respect to Mayor Gaynor, the headquarters of the Women's Political Union, 13 East Forty-second Street, were closed all day yesterday. The Suffrage Park Day of the Woman Suffrage Party, which was to have been held on Saturday, was postponed for the same reason, and will be celebrated to-day instead. This is the first celebration of what it is expected will be an annual affair. There will be open air meetings in the fifty parks of the five boroughs of the city, beginning at 3:30 P. M. Automobiles will carry the speakers from park to park.

Luncheons, at 25 cents each, were served yesterday for the members of Mrs. Chapman-Catt's Suffrage Seminary at the headquarters of the Woman Suffrage Party, 48 East Thirty-fourth Street, and will be served daily through the week, which is the final one of the suffrage school. Outsiders were also welcome to the luncheon as long as it lasted yesterday, and the party did a thriving business.

A suffrage reporter on horseback will be a feature of the Mineola Fair, which opens to-day. Mrs. De Mott Robinson of Hempstead will be the reporter, visiting the women who are making speeches and doing other propaganda work. She will ride with her news to Rockville Centre to turn it over to Mrs. E. B. Kearns, who will see about getting it in print. This is under the State Woman's Suffrage Association.

GET AIGRETS HUMANELY.

Colombia Is Using Painless Clipping Method, Says J. J. Smith.

J. J. Smith, a collector of birds and wild animals, who arrived yesterday on the steamship Allemania of the Atlas Line from Central American ports, said that the Colombian Government had discovered a way in which aigrets could be clipped from the birds without causing death or even the slightest pain. To make this a monopoly for the Government 100 farms have been established in Colombia and stocked with 500 birds. A notice has been published prohibiting any persons but the appointed agents from offering aigrets for sale.

Mr. Smith said that a pound of aigrets was worth $450 at the present time, and he believed that if the Audubon societies were convinced of the truth of the Colombian Government's assertion the edict against their importation into the United States would be revoked.

WOMAN OUTWITS A BLACK HANDER

Kerosene to Fire Tenement Already Soaking Floor When Janitress Gives an Alarm.

LETTERS DEMANDED $2,000

Threatened Grocer Sees Man Flee from Building—Fugitive Runs Into Arms of Corner Group.

Mrs. Mary Green's sense of the romantic has not been lost just because she is busy night and day as the janitress of the five-story tenement house at 451 West Forty-sixth Street. Thanks to this trait thirty occupants of the tenement were saved from possible death by fire.

Mrs. Green's vigilance landed Venteni Umberto, a tailor, 21 years old, of First Avenue, near Fifteenth Street, in a cell in the Forty-seventh Street Police Station suspected of being a black hand man and charged with housebreaking. Acting Captain of Detectives Kerr says that Umberto tried to set fire to the tenement building, and that if it had not been for Mrs. Green many lives would possibly have been lost. Umberto denies that he is a black hand man. An effort is being made to identify him at Headquarters. Meanwhile he was held for the West Side Court, and will be arraigned to-day.

The black hand attempt was against Pietro Garufi, a grocer in the tenement. Three letters reached him demanding $2,000 under the penalty of death for refusal. Garufi chose the latter alternative.

Mrs. Green was much interested Sunday night in the betrothal party being given for Maria Lorenza on the third floor of the tenement. She heard the shouts and laughter of the guests and the music from a harmonica. She waited up until the guests left at 10:15 o'clock, and then took a peep at them from the fire escape. While watching the party disperse she saw two men acting suspiciously in the street below. She went downstairs and immediately detected the odor of kerosene. Quantities had been poured over the grocery floor. She followed the scent to the rear entrance to Garufi's grocery and found that the door had been forced.

A screw-eye, through which the hasp of a padlock passed, had been pried loose. She summoned Garufi, who had been kept awake by the serious illness of his wife, Angelina. Garufi rushed downstairs and darted into his store, after upsetting obstructions that had been placed against the door. Through the dim light he saw a man fleeing through the front door.

Garufi's yells and the commotion in the block attracted the attention of a group of men standing at Tenth Avenue. The fugitive ran into their arms. Without stopping to inquire into details they pummeled him until Capt. Kerr and Detectives Burgess and Fitzpatrick rescued him. He proved to be Umberto, and denied that he had been in the store, although witnesses said he had run from it.

Garufi got his first Black Hand letters on July 22, and turned them over to the police at the Forty-seventh Street Station. One was in English and the other in Italian. That in the foreign language was carefully worded and well written. The English missive was brief and clumsy. It demanded $2,000, and was signed "Black Hand." A week later Garufi got another letter demanding $1,000. This letter was also in Italian.

The police are looking for Umberto's companion. The prisoner says he was to meet an old friend, whom he had known a year ago, at Ninth Avenue and Forty-sixth Street Sunday night. He thus accounts for his presence in the neighborhood. He talks little English, but that which he does use is good.

Congressman Brown for Tariff Bill.

Congressman Lathrop Brown of the First New York District said yesterday that through a clerk's error he had been recorded as having voted against the Tariff bill and the gold standard. As a matter of fact, he was paired with a Republican who was opposed to the Tariff bill, and if he had been present he would have voted for the Tariff bill and for the gold standard.

PASSENGERS HURT IN GALE.

Nieuw Amsterdam and Minnetoka Encounter Fierce Storm.

The steamships Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-American Line and the Minnetonka of the Atlantic Transport Line which arrived yesterday from Rotterdam and London, respectively, reported passing through very stormy weather on Monday and Tuesday of last week. Both vessels pitched so heavily that several of the passengers were thrown down and bruised.

W. H. Southern, 78 years old, a retired business man of this city, who was on the Minnetonka, was thrown down the companion way, and E. S. Perkins, the ship's surgeon, put six stitches in his head.

Anna Daniel, a second cabin passenger on the Nieuw Amsterdam, was thrown into the lee scuppers and sprained her ankle, and Solomon Fleischman, an immigrant, was dashed against an iron stanchion and broke his collar bone.

S. H. Wilfred Kelley, one of the passengers on the Nieuw Amsterdam, on his way home from the Far East, said that he had experienced severe typhoons in the Formosa Channel, going from Hongkong to Shanghai, where the velocity of the wind had been more than 100 miles an hour, but it never kicked up such a sea as the Nieuw Amsterdam encountered on leaving the English Channel.

"It seemed to came all ways at once," he said, "and lifted the ship up on its foaming crests like a shuttlecock."

OLD DOMINION COPPER SUIT.

Decision Reserved on Application to Enjoin Dividend.

Vice Chancellor Howell in Chancery Court of Newark yesterday reserved decision on the argument for an injunction to restrain the Old Dominion Mining and Copper Smelting Company of New Jersey from issuing a special dividend. Volumes of depositions and minutes of the annual meetings of the officers of the company in Jersey City were introduced.

A temporary injunction enjoining the company from declaring the dividend had been obtained by Godfrey M. Hyams, formerly manager of the company, who contended that a fund of $2,000,000 which had been set aside as a special dividend was part of the corporation's capital and that the Directors had no authority to pay it out.

The money is said to be the sum awarded to the company recently in its suit against Albert S. Bigelow of Boston, who assisted in floating the mining company's stock.

Striking Picture of MAYOR GAYNOR Ready to Frame

One of the truest likenesses of the late Mayor, to whose memory thousands of New Yorkers rendered impressive tribute yesterday, will be reproduced by the Mertens rotogravure process for distribution with THE NEW YORK TIMES next Sunday. This picture, suitable for framing, will be distinctive as well for perfection of printing as for photographic accuracy. It will measure 14x23 inches. Below will be a facsimile reproduction of Mr. Gaynor's signature and a characteristic epigram from his pen.

The Mertens rotogravure process is the last word in development of the printer's art. It has the advantage, too, of speedy reproduction. In the case of the photograph of Mayor Gaynor, therefore, every reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES next Sunday will receive an artistic product which it would have been impossible a few months ago to produce in so short a time.

In the regular Picture Section of the same issue will be published the first high-class reproductions, from engraved plates, of pictures showing the tremendously impressive funeral scenes. Thousands of New Yorkers joined yesterday in ceremonies which were among the most striking ever witnessed in this city. Distinguished men of all parties united in a harmonious tribute. Business was suspended. Throngs of men and women from all walks of life poured into downtown Manhattan to participate in the solemn demonstration, while flags at half mast and sombre draperies decorated the skyscrapers that are typical of the city's progress.

There will be many published photographs of the scenes at City Hall, along the funeral procession's route on lower Broadway, and around Old Trinity Church. But the first reproductions on supercalendered paper, recording adequately the city's great mourning demonstration, will be printed in THE TIMES Picture Section.

For the many who knew and loved Mayor Gaynor, and for the many more who admired him from a distance, these notable photographs are to be published. To obtain them it will be necessary to order next Sunday's TIMES in advance. The edition with the rotogravure portrait of Mayor Gaynor and the series of remarkable funeral scene pictures is sure to be exhausted early.

CALL UPON FARMERS TO END MEAT CRISIS

Packers in Convention Say Small Land Owners Alone Can Avert a Real Famine.

NO HOPE FROM RANCHES

New England and the South Are Suggested as New Sources of Meat Products.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Responsibility for averting a future meat famine was put up to small farmers by speakers at the eighth annual convention of the American Meat Packers convention today.

Among the remedies suggested by the speakers for the growing scarcity of meat, were:

Every small farmer should raise at least two beef steers a year to offset the decreased production of the Western ranches.

The remaining ranges should be cut up in farms to put all farmers on an equal footing.

New England, with its bountiful springs and prevailing shade, should be developed as a beef producing country.

Corn should be substituted for cotton in the Southern States, which would help cattle and hog production.

The report of the Executive Committee said on this subject:

"The packing house situation and that of consumers of meat in this country are both in a condition more precarious than at any other time in our history. We are facing conditions in the production of meat products which would have been thought impossible ten years ago. The shortage of livestock, which has been impressed upon us for several years, has been intensified during the last year. Demand exceeds the supply of meat food products to such an extent that we have abnormally high prices.

"The farmers are not furnishing nearly enough animals to keep the packing houses in operation on full time, and this results in heavy losses. And there seems to be no prospect of relief. Statistics show that the farmers are not increasing their production of meat food animals, but that such production is decreasing at an appalling rate."

Among other causes for the shortage of meat, the report pointed out, were the loss of meat food animals through preventable diseases and "the unthinking slaughter of calves, and especially heifer calves."

Speakers at the national convention of butter and egg men urged the need of national legislation to regulate the storage of these products to avoid the repeated charges of price raising and monopoly. J. L. Homigman of New York said:

"If every State has its own laws with regard to the length of time we may keep eggs and produce we will soon have a condition like those caused by the present divorce laws."

WILL URGE ARMOR PLANT.

Wilson to Put Matter Up to Congress in Message.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—President Wilson in his first annual message to Congress will urge consideration of the establishment of a Government armor plate factory. In line with this attitude of the Administration and the efforts of Secretary Daniels to bring about an understanding with the three large armor plate manufacturing plants that there shall be actual competition, it was decided to-day to appoint Capt. Joseph Strauss, U. S. N., as Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, to succeed Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining. Capt. Strauss will have the rank of Rear Admiral while holding that office.

By those who are familiar with the successive steps that Secretary Daniels has taken in the consideration of the armor plate problem this selection is regarded as most significant. Capt. Strauss, who is now in command of the battleship Idaho, was Aid for Material in the last naval administration, and has long been regarded highly for his great ability as a student and as an executive in the specialties of ordnance and equipment.

It was said on the highest authority to-day that his selection as Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance was not made without a full interchange of views on the subject of armor plate, and also that it was not made until it was known that Capt. Strauss firmly believed that there should be a Government plant as the only way to secure and maintain competitive conditions.

President Wilson is especially pleased by the selection of Capt. Strauss, and believes that his assistance will be of the highest importance in presenting to Congress the whole problem of securing armor at what the Government regards as a fair and reasonable price.

Capt. Strauss will be the officer who will go before the Naval Committees of the House and the Senate and present to them the technical and scientific argument in regard to the manufacture of plate, and upon him will devolve the task of framing the entire proposition of the scope, size, and equipment of the proposed Government plant.

Capt. Strauss is a native of the State of New York. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1885, and in the years of his service has cruised in all parts of the world. While with the Hydrographic Office he saw a good deal of life in Alaska and along the Pacific Coast. He was for three years in the bureau of which he will soon be the head. Ever since the Spanish war he has been connected with various ordnance experiments.

While in command of the cruiser Montgomery he conducted important tests of torpedoes. He was in command for three years at the Naval Ordnance Proving Grounds at Indian Head, Md., and urged the establishment of a Government plant for the manufacture of smokeless powder. When Congress authorized such a plant he was charged with its construction and operation. He is the inventor of the superimposed gun turret, which for a time worked a revolution in the construction of battleships, and he has been a recognized authority in this country and abroad for many years in all matters of ordnance and ballistics.

Rear Admiral Twining, who was selected for Chief of Ordnance in compliance with President Roosevelt's theory that younger officers should be advanced to bureau commands, will resume his rank of Commander and will be assigned to command the cruiser Tacoma, which is now engaged in watching affairs in Mexico.

The relief of Capt. Strauss as commanding officer of the Ohio has not been selected. Aside from this place, there will be no changes in the commands of the vessels of the Atlantic Fleet until after the return of the fleet from the cruise to the Mediterranean. Rear Admiral Badger, commanding the Atlantic Fleet, was at the Navy Department to-day for consultation with Secretary Daniels in regard to the appointment of Capt. Strauss as Chief of Ordnance and the details of the cruise to the Mediterranean. The decision was reached by them that the commissioned personnel of the fleet should remain unchanged throughout the cruise.

German Lieutenant Flies Here.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., Sept. 22.—Lieut. William Walb of the 168th German Infantry started to fly from the Hempstead Plains Aviation Field to Jamaica this afternoon, preliminary to a flight to Governors Island. He encountered so many cross currents that he turned back at Belmont Park, almost on the edge of Jamaica. Lieut. Walb flies a biplane.

B. & O. OFFICIALS MEET.

Nearly 300 Railroad Men at Staff Gathering in Maryland.

DEER PARK, Md., Sept. 22.—The second staff meeting of officials of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad system, embracing the Baltimore & Ohio, the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, Staten Island, and the Sady Valley and Elkhorn lines, opened here to-day with an attendance of about 300 railroad men. The officials who are here are members of the operating, transportation, engineering, and mechanical departments, who are responsible for the actual operation of 5,500 miles o railroad lines stretching from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi and from the great lakes to the Ohio River. The meeting was arranged in order that there might be a general family discussion of the affairs of the Baltimore & Ohio system.

With President Daniel Willard and his executive staff, including Vice President A. W. Thompson, the chief operating officer; Chief Engineer Stuart, General Managers Galloway and Loree of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Baltimore & Ohio South Western, Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton lines, respectively; General Superintendent of Motive Power Clark and their official families present, the headquarters of the railroad have been moved temporarily to Deer Park, where they will remain until the adjournment of the meeting Tuesday night.

Three years ago, or a few months after Mr. Willard became President of the Baltimore & Ohio and allied companies, the chief executive called a meeting in order to confer with his fellow-officials as to the needs of the property and also to outline the policy of the management in its dealings with the general public. During the interval which has elapsed since the first staff meeting and the conference which opened to-day there has been expended in betterments of the Baltimore & Ohio system an amount aggregating $100,000,000. With this vast amount of money miles of new tracks have been constructed, mountains have been torn away to provide low grades, tunnels have been eliminated, safety appliances have been installed, and hundreds of passenger cars have been added to the services.

The most significant result of this large expenditure for new facilities was the earnings of the Baltimore & Ohio for the last fiscal year, which were in excess of $101,000,000 gross.

Summing up the railroad situation, President Willard said that the hope of railroads for the future is to be found through an increase in rates for services performed, and acting on this belief the Eastern railroads have applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to make a horizontal raise of 5 per cent. in existing rates. He said that he had every confidence in the outcome of the matter.

REVIVE GRAND TRUNK WORK.

Construction of Southern New England Line to be Resumed.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 22.—Work is to be resumed immediately on the Southern New England Railway, the Grand Trunk subsidiary planned to connect the Canadian system with tidewater at Providence.

The construction stopped ten months ago, and it was charged that this was due to an agreement between C. S. Mellen, then President of the New Haven, and E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk. Last week Vice President G. C. Jones came here and inspected the right of way throughout. John Marsch of Chicago, general contractor for the line, reopened his office here to day and within a few days the steam shovels will resume operations. It will be some time before work will be general, because some of the sub-contractors have in many instances removed their apparatus.

There is great rejoicing all along the line because of this resumption of work on the road. Mr. Chamberlin repeatedly promised that the Southern New England should be completed provided the necessary money could be obtained. This evidently has been accomplished.

ARMY NEEDS AVIATORS.

Civilian Fliers Growing Fewer Each Year, Says Gen. Scriven.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—In the event of a war it is doubtful whether a score of men could be found in civil life in this country who could be utilized by the army in aeroplane work, in the opinion of Brig. Gen. George S. Scriven, chief signal officer, in charge of the army aviation corps.

In calling attention to what he considers a critical situation, Gen. Scriven declared to-day that the number of civilians who have heretofore undertaken to fly heavier-than-air machines for pleasure, sport, or money making is fast diminishing.

"The army must look to itself and to the men of the organized militia," he said, "to supply a reasonable number of officers for military aviation in case of necessity."

Stories of Real Humor

are always the first stories to be read and the last to be forgotten—somehow they stay with you whether you try to remember them or not—that is, if they are really funny.

Among the seven unusual stories in Harper's Magazine for October there are three which are full of humor—stories quite different in character but all the kind that you don't forget—and the other four stories are quite as interesting but more dramatic—more romantic.

NOTABLE ARTICLES

ON THE WAY TO AUSTRALIA

Many months ago Norman Duncan set out on an interesting expedition for Harper's Magazine. He was accompanied by George Harding, the illustrator. They went to discover Australia—not the great cities which the tourist visits, but the many interesting out-of-the-way places where men lead strange lives and where civilization is only beginning to penetrate. Mr. Duncan has just returned. The first of his articles appears in the October Harper's—a brilliant word picture of the voyage out, illustrated with many drawings in color.

CHRISTIANIZING THE ESKIMO

No task which the missionary has ever undertaken is more difficult that of teaching the Christian religion to the Eskimo. They place their own interpretation on all that is taught them, and while accepting the new religion they cling to their old beliefs. Mr. Stefansson, whose articles in Harper's Magazine have attracted such wide attention, contributes the most interesting article which he has written on this phase of his experiences.

A FORGOTTEN SLAVERY OF COLONIAL DAYS

Into the American Colonies in the early days were sent thousands of men and women who were practically bound out in servitude to the Colonists. These men and women were the overflow of English jails and prisons. Professor Jernegan, of the University of Chicago, has made a study of this period and contributes an article of great interest on the system and its influence on the early life of this country.

THE INVISIBLE HUMAN TIDE

Beneath the streets of any great city like New York or London flows an incessant hurrying stream of men. In places this underground life goes on at three or four different levels. Alan Sullivan writes of this invisible life of New York in all its varied and curious phases.

CAPITALIZING CHARACTER

In Italy there are banks for the laboring classes where character is collateral for a loan. A member of one of these banks may borrow within certain limits and for certain purposes on being vouched for by another. Workingmen in this way can get together and borrow enough to undertake contracts and reap the profits for themselves. And the big banks of the cities lend to the workingmen's banks. John L. Mathews has studied the system and tells of its success.

Pure Milk in a Great City!

The difficulty that faces every family in New York—Briarcliff Milk, Guaranteed Milk

PURE milk in a great city is a big question. Here is how it has been answered by Briarcliff Farms. The Farms are situated in the heart of the famous Dutchess County (N.Y.) dairy district—4100 acres of beautiful hills and valleys, all under one ownership and management. The soil is of limestone formation—a technical point which your scientific friend will tell you means the best soil for maintaining dairy herds.

EVERY one of the cows at Briarcliff Farms is under closer and more constant medical observation than nine out of ten human beings. Constant observation and frequent tests by veterinarians in charge make it impossible for any but a sound, healthy cow to remain in the Briarcliff herd.

THE Briarcliff milking herd consists of 600 blooded cows—cows selected for the quality of their milk rather than for its quantity. Milk of Briarcliff quality is seldom sold; it is generally used for butter making and the butter sold at "fancy" prices. Too much expense is involved in producing such milk to sell it at ordinary milk prices.

WHEN not grazing, the Briarcliff cows are housed in barns especially constructed for sanitation and ventilation. A stranger seeing the barns at Briarcliff Farms, for the first time, is usually astonished at the cleanliness and sanitary measures observed. It is all in the interest of clean, pure, wholesome milk.

BEFORE milking, the cows are carefully groomed and the udders thoroughly washed. The milkmen are dresssed in white garments freshly sterilized. Everything which may possibly come in contact with or near the milk is cleanliness itself.

THE milk is cooled at once, bottled and kept on ice, sent to our New York office in express cars and delivered to our customers by our own delivery system. From our Farms to your table, Briarcliff Milk is guarded from every possibility of contamination.

BRIARCLIFF Milk is not modified or changed in any way, but reaches your home in its pure, original state, fresh from the cows. The conditions under which Briarcliff Milk is produced, and the cleanliness of its production, were the basis on which the New York Board of Health acted in issuing a permit to Briarcliff Farms to sell Briarcliff Milk as Guaranteed Milk—which signifies the best milk that can be produced by taking advantage of all the knowledge and experience that have been developed on the subject. The selection of the cows, housing, ventilation, sanitary handling—everything involved in the production of Briarcliff Milk is according to the latest and most advanced methods known to science.

TO produce such milk, to keep the conditions so nearly ideal, calls for constant care and expense; therefore, Briarcliff Milk must be sold at more than ordinary milk prices. If you use three quarts or more a day the price is 15 cents per quart; less than 3 quarts a day, the price is 20 cents per quart. These are monthly rates. Full information about Briarcliff milk, cream and butter may be secured by application to the New York office of Briarcliff Farms—12 East 48th Street, either in person or by telephone. Telephone numbers are Murray Hill, 7070, 7071 and 7072. A Briarcliff representative will call on you if you prefer.

UNTERMYER URGES MONEY BILL CHANGES

Approves Measure, but Wants Commercial Paper Defined in Its Strict Meaning.

NOTE REDEMPTION BY GOLD

Wouldn't Include "Lawful Money," as Bill Provides—Fears No Political Juggling.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—President Wilson's determination to push currency revision at this session is interpreted by most people here as insuring the enactment of the Owen-Glass bill in some form before Congress adjourns, and, in fact, opposition to the bill in the Committee on Banking and Currency indicates that it will be materially amended before a favorable report is ordered. Seven Senators on that committee are now openly against the measure as it stands, while the other five Senators are far from being all as openly in favor of it. To-day's hearing before the committee threw interesting light through Mr. Untermyer's testimony on what amendments may finally be recommended.

An attempt to hurry consideration of the bill by the committee failed. Senator Shafroth of Colorado tried vainly to obtain an agreement to close the hearings before the committee on Saturday, Oct. 4. No other member of the committee supported his suggestion.

Senators Reed of Missouri, Bristow of Kansas, and Weeks of Massachusetts opposed any attempt to limit the consideration of the bill.

"I think other members of the committee are beginning to see," said Senator Weeks, "that this bill will take up most of the Fall, and I propose to call up in the committee soon the resolution I introduced in the Senate to allow the bill to go over until the regular session next Winter."

Samuel Untermyer of New York, who was counsel last session for the Pujo Money Trust Committee of the House, was the only witness. He appeared as an ardent champion of the bill, but proposed many important modifications. His chief suggestion was that security for the notes to be issued under the proposed system be limited to commercial paper in the strictest meaning of that term. The bill's definition of such paper as that "drawn for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes, or the proceeds of which have been used, or may be used, for such purposes," Mr. Untermyer characterized as "hopelessly loose." Issues of currency based upon such widely defined security would lead, in his opinion, to great inflation, as the term would include paper that would prove upon test to be anything but liquid.

Accepting the suggestion of Senator Nelson of Minnesota, the ranking Republican of the committee, Mr. Untermyer said that he thought redemption of the proposed notes by the regional reserve banks should be altogether in gold, instead of in gold and lawful money, as the bill now provides.

To provide beyond all mistake for the Government's ability to meet in gold without delay any demand for the redemption of the notes Mr. Untermyer thought the bill should contain an authorization for the issue of currency not secured by commercial paper, with which the Treasury could purchase gold to continue redemption. The only currency issue authorized in the bill is upon security of commercial paper, and Mr. Untermyer thought the Government's issuing power should not be absolutely dependent upon the amount of this paper presented for rediscount.

Mr. Untermyer opposed the admission to the regional associations of banks with many branches, like the Corn Exchange Bank of New York. He criticised the authority given by the bill to national banks to deal in bills of exchange arising from exports and imports as a discrimination against domestic trade, and thought that the minimum tax of one-half of 1 per cent. on issues of notes was too low. He thought Mr. Hitchcock's proposal for a provision compelling the regional reserve banks to rediscount the paper of their member banks was unnecessary and unwise.

In attacking the bill's loose definition of commercial paper Mr. Untermyer said that the term applied correctly only to paper arising from the purchase and sale of merchandise. The use of the proceeds from a note for carrying on a general mercantile business, he said, would be a note for "commercial purposes" within the language of the bill, but it would not be commercial paper. An acceptance for a shipment of merchandise, on the other hand, would automatically cancel itself when the disposition of the shipment to the purchaser's customers supplied the funds with which to meet the accepted draft. The loosely described notes of the bill, he said, might be sunk in enterprises that could not be liquidated for a lifetime.

"Acceptances such as I have described," said Mr. Untermyer, "I know are rare in this country. Business is run with book credit instead of liquid paper. But under the proposed system the acceptances will be developed to replace the unliquid, immobile book credits which are absolutely incapable of rediscount."

Senator Hitchcock indicated that he feared the Federal Reserve Board might use its power of fixing the rediscount rate to control the interest rates of the country and effect great modifications in the financial world for political effect.

Mr. Untermyer laughingly said that with his "vivid Oriental imagination" he could conceive of an artificial creation of easy money for political effect, but thought it beyond the realm of probability. In general, he said, the rates fixed by the Federal serve board would be ineffective on the business community unless conditions justified the rates fixed.

"This bill," said Mr. Untermyer, "will lower interest. It will not help the stock markets. It will hurt them, as under its operation there will be less money available for speculative purposes than now. It will not affect prices except to make them more stable and to make credit more reliable.

"The reserves of the banks of the country will now be put within the grasp of those needing them, and a bank in need of money can go to the regional reserve bank and rediscount its paper."

To Mr. Hitchcock's proposal that the regional reserve banks should be compelled to rediscount the paper of its member banks, Mr. Untermyer replied that the member banks would themselves control that question.

Mr. Hitchcock retorted that the present banking system of the United States was democratic, and that he feared the bill tended toward imperialism.

"We are so near imperialism in finance now," answered Mr. Untermyer, "that this bill can only lead us away from it."

Howard Wants Two Per Cents. to be Allotted to Postal Depositors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Representative William Schley Howard of Georgia submitted to the House to-day a plan for the disposition of the Government 2 per cent. bonds now available as security for outstanding national bank circulation. There are about $742,000,000 of these bonds outstanding. The Glass Currency bill proposes to retire them and create 3 per cent. bonds in their place.

Mr. Howard proposes to issue the 2 per cent. bonds in small denominations to depositors in postal savings banks. The bonds were now held by the banks, he said, and used by them as a basis for a national bank circulation, and he argued that the placing of this debt in the hands of the great masses of the people would solve the problem of retiring them and place the debt where it belonged.

"It is contemplated by the provisions of the Currency bill," said Mr. Howard, "that in twenty years the present national bank issue of bonds will be retired, or in exchange the Government will issue 3 per cent. interest-bearing bonds without the circulation privileges. I cannot see where the Government has settled its difficulty by simply agreeing to pay 1 per cent. per year more for money to retire these bonds and at the same time leaving the ownership and control of its bonded debt and the control of its future sale of bonds in the hands of the same people.

"It is unnecessary for the Government to increase its rate of interest to 3 per cent. Such an operation will cost about $10,000,000 per year, and means that the Government hereafter must always issue its bonds at a minimum rate of interest of not less than 3 per cent. on all new loans.

"In effect, I simply want the Government to sell its bonds at retail instead of wholesale, and if this is done the Government can accumulate all of the money necessary for the retirement of the present national bank bond issue at 2 per cent. Only a slightly higher rate is paid in England. The small investor is not much worried as to the rate of interest if he feels absolutely confident about the prompt repayment of the principal. This constitutes the strength of the Government's position in the postal savings banks. The people are satisfied that their money is absolutely safe.

HIGHER TAX STANDS ON BIG INCOMES

Tariff Conferees Accept Senate Increases—Tax Collectible as from March 1 Last.

WILSON READY FOR BILL

Plan to Continue Existing Rates to Stop Foreign Countries from Imposing Tariff Penalties.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The Conference Committee made good to-day in disposing of the points of difference between the two houses in the income tax section of the Tariff bill. The plan of submitting minor disputed amendments to a joint sub-committee worked well, and to-day the full majority membership of the committee approved by far the greater part of the section. While details were withheld, it was understood that the Senate amendments, particularly in the first part of the section, were generally accepted.

Important paragraphs are still to be settled, and the eleven rates left undecided have also to be thrashed out.

President Wilson this morning was confident that he would sign the completed bill this week. He told callers that his conferences with leaders led him to believe that all differences would be smoothed out before the week ended.

"I've got my pen sharpened," he said.

An accident, however, would frustrate his hopes. Both houses have adjourned until Thursday, so that a report cannot be made before that day, and another day's delay would almost certainly postpone final action in the Senate until next week.

The Senate amendment increasing the surtax on large incomes from the House maximum of 3 per cent to a maximum of 6 per cent. was accepted. Under this amendment, in addition to the normal tax of 1 per cent., that part of incomes in excess of $20,000, but less than $50,000, will be taxed 1 per cent.; from $50,000 to $75,000, 2 per cent.; from $75,000 to $100,000, 3 per cent.; from $100,000 to $250,000, 4 per cent.; from $250,000 to $500,000, 5 per cent., and 6 per cent. above that amount.

The Senate amendments to the exemptions from the tax, changing the lower limit from $4,000 to $3,000 and allowing exemptions of $500 each for two dependent children, and exempting certain funds of mutual life insurance companies, was passed over without agreement, it was said. It is believed that the Senate amendment rewriting the clause for deductions computing the net income was accepted.

The most important change in that amendment limits to 5 per cent. of the gross output of the preceding year deductions for wear and tear in the case of mines.

It is understood that the conferees finally accepted the recommendation of the joint sub-committee adopting the Senate amendment making the tax collectible on incomes of this year dating from March 1, 1913, instead of Jan. 1, 1913. The Senate amendment was to obviate a possible objection should the tax be levied on incomes accruing prior to the proclamation of the income tax amendment to the Constitution. In the same way the provision requiring the withholding of the tax "at the source" was tentatively modified to suit the Senate amendment limiting the application of the provisions to incomes accruing after the passage of the act.

To-morrow the conference will take up the administrative clauses, going back later to the passed-over paragraphs in the income tax sections in the dutiable schedules.

The tax on cotton futures will be left to the last to allow time for a compromise provision to be drafted.

Apprehension lest the Tariff bill lead foreign nations to impose tariff penalties against the United States as soon as the new law goes into effect caused Administration and Senate leaders today to plan the introduction of a joint resolution in Congress making specific provision for the continuation of existing relations with all countries until President Wilson has time to negotiate new trade agreements.

The seriousness of the situation that will confront the Administration was impressed upon Chairman Simmons of the Senate Finance Committee by State Department officials. It was pointed out that the trade relations established by ex-President Taft's proclamations under the Payne-Aldrich law of 1909 would terminate as soon as the new law becomes effective, and that the United States then would face the possibility of having higher tariff rates applied against its exports by many countries.

While the tariff law would give the President authority to negotiate trade and reciprocity treaties, it would also require him to apply special penalty rates against any countries discriminating against the United States.

To prevent the possibility of trade wars the State Department is now drafting a joint resolution, which will provide that existing relations shall continue for four months. This will not keep in effect the tariff rates of the Payne-Aldrich law, but will assure to foreign countries that the new penalty provision of the Underwood-Simmons bill will not be applied to them until a reasonable time has been allowed the President and the State Department to negotiate new trade treaties. Practically all nations having any foreign commerce will be asked to enter into such compacts.

Senator Simmons pointed out to Administration officials that it would be impossible to insert the provision desired as an amendment to the Tariff bill, because the introduction of any new matter is precluded while the bill is in conference. The provision will be put through Congress as a separate act, supplementary to the tariff law.

Senate amendments to the Tariff bill would authorize the President to assess extra duties on coffee, tea, fish, chinaware, silks, laces, jewelry, sugar, and many other items coming from countries not treating the United States as a "favored nation." While the joint resolution cannot prevent other countries from imposing higher tariffs against the United States, it is expected that it will induce them to withhold such action temporarily.

Chairman Alexander of the House Merchant Marine Committee, with Representatives Jones of Virginia, Small of North Carolina, and McGillicuddy of Maine, asked the President to favor an amendment to the Tariff bill giving a 5 per cent. discount in duties to imports in vessels wholly built in the United States, no matter where owned. A House provision for a 5 per cent. discount for goods in American-owned ships, was struck out by the Senate on the protests of many foreign Governments that it violated their treaties. The President did not commit himself, but indicated that if the new amendment did not conflict with treaty rights he would favor it.

THE MAYOR'S FUNERAL.

The full measure of the popular approval of a public man cannot be ascertained until after his death. There was a comparatively big crowd at the meeting to renominate Mayor GAYNOR by acclaim in City Hall Park a week before his death, but it was a mere handful of humanity as compared with the hundreds of thousands who paid tribute to his memory from early morn till late at night on Sunday and during the services in Trinity Church yesterday. The fact that his death, under extraordinary circumstances, followed so soon after the great political demonstration, the unusually pathetic character of his taking off, the public knowledge of the suffering he had so heroically endured, combined, of course, to arouse an uncommon degree of public feeling; but these causes are not sufficient to account for the line of mourners extending from Bowling Green to the City Hall, in the pelting rain, or for the obvious sincerity of the crowds assembled to make the Mayor's funeral the most memorable since LINCOLN'S. We may admit that a lying in state always attracts many who are impelled by curiosity, but such were obviously a small minority in the throng of mourners on Sunday, while something more than the partial cessation of business, which gave unusual leisure to hundreds of men and women, induced the thousands of reverent spectators to throng lower Broadway yesterday and called out so full an attendance of the city's distinguished men.

Mayor GAYNOR'S death, indeed, has revealed the enormous measure of his popularity, and if it seems surprising to those who know that in all his career his faculty for antagonizing people was so highly developed, that he spoke his mind freely on all public questions, and changed his mind fearlessly when he saw justification, they must now correct their idea of the qualities that make for popularity. To begin with, Mr. GAYNOR was a most interesting man, perhaps the most interesting of his hour. He lent his services freely to the succor of the humble; while of a seemingly cold disposition and a man of few intimates, he had genuine sympathy with humanity, and his occasional expression of it was always effective. His courage never failed him, and that he had need of all his plentiful equipment of that quality in his career was within the public knowledge.

Above all, he was a thoroughly competent and loyal Chief Magistrate of this city, the best Mayor we have had, all things considered, since ABRAM S. HEWITT, and that the death of such a man and such an officer should so deeply affect the sympathies of the multitude of citizens is a most encouraging sign. Sincere grief, indeed, and a keen sense of great public loss are, in the circumstances, natural and most commendable.

MR. BRYAN'S APPROVAL.

In Mr. BRYAN'S judgment the one shining provision of the Banking and Currency bill which above all others commands his approval is that which authorizes the Government to issue the circulating notes. In his remarks to the bankers at Richmond last week he commended that feature of the bill. He was almost enthusiastic over it in his letter to Chairman GLASS, which was read in the Democratic House caucus when the bill was under consideration. In that letter he said:

> The provision in regard to the Government issue of the notes to be loaned to the banks is the first triumph of the people in connection with currency legislation in a generation. It is hard to overestimate the value of this feature of the bill. In the second place the bill provided for Government control of this money—that is, control through a board composed of Government officials selected by the President with the approval of the Senate. This is another distinct triumph for the people, one without which the Government issue of the money would be largely a barren victory.

That is a very significant utterance, even though Mr. BRYAN seems to misunderstand the nature and extent of Government control of the note issues. Control, if it were actual and complete, would give the Government power to issue the notes at its pleasure to any amount. Mr. BRYAN overlooks the fact that the Government's control is not complete, that the reserve banks really have control of the volume of the issues, because unless they ask for notes none will be put out by the Government. The process is that a Federal reserve bank on a vote of its Directors applies to the local Federal reserve agent "for such amount of the Treasury "notes hereinbefore provided for as "it may deem best." Accompanying the application, it offers rediscounted bills as collateral security, and these rediscounted bills must be equal in amount to the sum of the notes applied for. The reserve banks, therefore, will actually control the volume of the circulation.

There is a very widespread belief that Mr. BRYAN would like to have it the other way, that in his view an ideal currency would be one issued by the Government at its own discretion. In that Mr. BRYAN would see the highest triumph of the people. He evidently supposes that that is what the provision amounts to, for he says that this "is the first tri-"umph of the people in connection "with currency legislation in a gen-"eration." His notion of the currency of the people is something that is not money, greenbacks or silver, something, at any rate, that is not gold. It is in this respect that his approval of the bill is significant. That very fact will lead men who have not approved Mr. BRYAN'S currency views to examine the measure with unusual care.

There is comfort and reassurance in the fact that even though the measure may not enforce, it will permit, sound banking practice. It may open the way to dangerous inflation, but the banks are not bound to extend unduly either credit or the issue of notes. The danger, of course, is that in some parts of the country there will be great pressure put upon the banks to do both.

HELPING WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

If Mrs. ARTHUR M. DODGE desires to keep her anti-suffrage organization alive she must speedily change her tactics. Believing, as we do, that an extension of the suffrage without regard for the fitness of the new voters would work great public harm, we see danger in such an assault on woman suffragists as Mrs. DODGE has just published. It was not true of the women who led the suffrage movement in the last generation, and it is not true, to any appreciable extent, of the leaders of the present movement or the great body of their followers, that they are responsible for the vogue of indecency in dancing, literature, plays, and dress. That women are really more responsible than men for the vogue of nasty plays and books we firmly believe, but they are not necessarily the earnest, demonstrative sisters who are clamoring for votes. Perhaps some of the heedless who, for curiosity's sake and with no thought of responsibility, buy and read the bad books and go to see the bad plays, may dabble a little in the suffrage business, just for the sake of excitement. But they are the kind of human beings who accomplish nothing in the world, and their influence is not dangerous so far as the suffrage movement goes.

As for the other way in which vice is being made familiar, the needless public discussion, nauseating in its frankness, futile in its effect, of certain evils, we have not noticed that any large proportion of the woman suffragists take part in that. One or two of the least efficient have made pitiful public exhibitions of themselves, to be sure, but the suffrage movement is not to be condemned on their account. It should be attacked solely for what it is, and what it will lead to. We are so anxious that the counter-movement, of which Mrs. DODGE has been an efficient leader, shall be effective, that we regret very much the mistake she is making.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The State Convention of Republicans to be held in Carnegie Hall this evening has no standing in law. The delegates assembled may, if they please, act as a designating committee, and may recommend to the State Committee of the party a candidate for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, in place of Chief Judge CULLEN, and a candidate for Associate Judge of the same court, in place of Judge GRAY. The State Committee probably will accept these designations, but it has full power to make the nominations itself.

Acting as a council of a party, the convention, of course, may accept resolutions and declare policies. Probably the Republicans of the country look with interest and hope to the action of this convention, the first to be held in an important State since the great schism and defeat of last year. To draw up a satisfactory declaration of party policies will be a work of great delicacy and difficulty for this convention. There are signs which inspire the hope, but may fall short of giving the full assurance, that the Progressive Party is in dissolution. The showing it has made in primaries here and in other States has been one of weakness approaching insignificance. But the Progressive leader has recently shown signs of recurrent activity and of the old ambition. No Republican would be so foolish as to suppose that Mr. ROOSEVELT is not to be reckoned with.

A Republican platform dictated by intelligence and foresight must take account of whatever is sound and reasonable in the Progressive demands. Upon the other hand, it would be wholly foolish to persist in what have been called the reactionary tendencies of the party. The convention cannot very well adopt a standpat platform, and the party cannot make itself the citadel of privilege. The revision of the tariff, now so nearly accomplished, is an emancipation not only for the industries of the country, but for the Republican Party. The old party of protection can now take a step forward.

The path before it is in plain view. Nothing could be more acceptable to the country now than the renunciation of attempts to make political capital by assaults upon business. A sound and acceptable policy for the Republican Party, for any party, would be one that should demand the enforcement of the law, the punishment of proved offenses, but beyond that an assurance to honest men that they may carry on an honest business without molestation. There has been a great deal of molestation in the last dozen years, and it has been visited alike upon the just and the unjust. Men who have been not only trying to do business in obedience to the law, but who have so done it, have suffered with the violators through the confusion, uncertainties, and disturbance due to the continual mixing up of politics with business. All over the country it has become a profession, eagerly followed by demagogues, to seek political preferment by continually proclaiming war on business. There are abundant indications that the country is at the beginning of a period of great prosperity. It wants peace, not peace at the price of condoning unlawful practices, but at the price of justice and the abstention of politicians from activities that are purely selfish and pestiferous. If the Republicans in Carnegie Hall can prepare a platform that will promise peace with justice, the fruits of their labors will be widely welcomed.

THE THIRD REFRIGERATING CONGRESS.

The United States is the home of refrigeration. This country taught the world what it knows about methods of transporting fruits and other perishable products "pre-cooled" and kept cool over thousands of miles during their journey to the great markets. The attendance of representatives from other lands at the third International Refrigerating Congress at Chicago outnumbers that of previous gatherings at Vienna and Paris. Chicago is the centre of refrigeration for this country, perhaps the chief refrigerating city in the world.

The foreign delegates will see the large icing and fruit "pre-cooling" plants equipped to supply the trains of provisions that are sent out daily over the transcontinental railroad systems, the houses for the storage of natural and artificial ice, and the economical and noiseless machines used in the process and adapted to problems of sinking shafts, refrigerating at sea, liquefying air and other gases, and cooling cars and buildings.

The millions who consume every day foodstuffs and luxuries that are preserved by the icemen will have a personal interest in the sessions of this congress. We trust that in its commercial deliberations will be injected a moral spirit commensurate with the responsibility of its leading members with respect to the quality of the foods intrusted to them for the nations' stomachs.

A "MINIMUM WAGE" FOR PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

We suppose it is the supreme confidence of American citizens in their ability to care for themselves that accounts for their failure to provide an adequate public health service. The Socialistic propaganda has made little headway against this usually praiseworthy spirit of individualism at one of the few points of attack where it might prove useful. A man can never wholly protect himself and his family against the danger of epidemics. It is inherently a communal task. Yet Mr. FRANZ SCHNEIDER, Jr., representing the Department of Surveys and Exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, has received replies from 140 American cities showing that one-third have no laboratory facilities for detecting the commonest diseases, one-half of them have no organization to care for infant mortality, a sixth make no inspection of school children, three-fourths have no housing law, and nine-tenths have no concern with the hygiene of industry. Less than one-third of these cities take any measures whatever against the spread of tuberculosis.

The public work of preventing disease, which Dr. SIMON FLEXNER says is the most hopeful field of modern medicine, is but begun in this country. Dr. PARK has asked for a "minimum wage" for health departments, ranging from 50 cents to $1 per inhabitant, according to the size of the city. Mr. SCHNEIDER'S investigation shows that in 119 American cities, containing in 1910 a population of 17,525,000, the yearly expenditure for prevention of disease is but $6,774,773, or 38.4 cents a head. Seattle heads the list at $1.22 per capita, with Clinton, Iowa, spending eight-tenths of 1 cent, at the foot. New York City spends 55 cents yearly in preventive measures; Hoboken, N. J., only 4 cents, and Lewiston, Me., 2 cents. With such poor support of city health departments as these figures indicate, their efficiency even where precautions are attempted may well be called in question. The lives of men and women in Prussia, the home of preventive medicine and of Government paternalism such as is needed in matters of quarantine and sanitation, average five years longer than in this country, which neglects the health of its individuals. And the saving of German lives is largely during the years of their greatest usefulness to the Prussian State.

MR. M'CALL ON WEBSTER.

In his recent address at the birthplace of WEBSTER, the Hon. S. W. MCCALL paid a measured, candid, and weighty tribute to the memory of one of our greatest statesmen. In the confusion and passion of the closing years of his wonderfully fruitful life, the lustre of WEBSTER'S name was sadly—one might say tragically—dimmed. Because he could not, or would not, see the mighty issue of slavery as the leaders of the anti-slavery movement saw it, he was denounced for weakness, cowardice, treachery, and selfish ambition. The denunciation in many cases was sincere enough and the outcome of the struggle which WEBSTER strove to avoid may be held to have justified their foresight as to the situation; it did not justify the bitter things they said of him.

It must be remembered that, while the issue of slavery produced the civil war, it was the issue of nationality on which LINCOLN summoned the American people to the field, and it was the decision of that issue that brought slavery to its doom. And WEBSTER was the most powerful, the most devoted, by far the most convincing champion of the Union. Referring to the splendid reply to HAYNE, Mr. MCCALL says:

> WEBSTER inevitably ranged himself upon the side of nationality. He became its prophet. All his splendid talents he devoted to its service. He spoke in the very crisis of our history, when difficulties were appalling, and when the development of our institutions might easily have put nullification in the ascendency, and he spoke with an effect which was augmented with the flight of time. It is not extravagant to say that had it not been for him we should not to-day be one nation. What more glorious distinction than that could a statesman have?

And again:

> He possessed a peculiar quality of mind which made him right upon the mightiest issue in our history, and he had that dignity and distinction of character which ennobled every cause he touched and helped put our Government upon a loftier plane. He was not merely the greatest orator, but the most stately figure in the politics of his time. He was national-minded. Without seeking expansion through imperialism and conquest, he inevitably took that view of his country and its institutions compatible only with its unity and greatness. There was an affinity between the aspirations of his nature and a great and free country, and it is impossible to imagine him upon the side of a national government with no real power and subject to all the discords and varying whims of a score of little sovereigns.

Mr. MCCALL holds that WEBSTER "be-"lieved profoundly in popular govern-"ment and his democracy was bred in "the bone," but his faith was "in a "popular will worked out in laws "passed by representative assem-"blies." His seemed the embodiment of the ideal of the Greek poet—"the or-"dered life and justice, and the long, "still grasp of law, not changing "with the strong man's pleasure." We can imagine his bearing toward the modern "progressive" notion of forcing the people to intervene in all the details of their Government, putting aside representation and dealing directly with duties they have neither the time to master nor the knowledge to understand, and in their bewilderment inviting, almost compelling, the guidance of the professional politician.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Threatening Us with Vegetarianism. President BISCHOFF of the American Meat Packers' Association prophesies that within ten years porterhouse steak will cost us $1 a pound, and then, peering still more deeply into the dismal future, he sees the Americans of the twenty-first century living as the low-caste Chinaman does now, on rice and vegetables, and, like him, slothful creatures, anaemic, and without initiative. The only way to ward off this terrifying fate, Mr. BISCHOFF says, is to educate the American farmer to the necessity of raising more cattle.

If that last be so, the prospect is pretty dark, for the American farmer is as little likely as the rest of us to determine the nature of his production by anything except its profit to himself, and no national "necessity" will ever make him raise cattle if it doesn't pay. For some time past, in spite of advancing meat prices, he has seen steadily less and less for himself in stock—a fact indicating, perhaps, that not to him, but to the members of the Packers' Association, the process of education should be applied. The farmer will not be put out of business even though we all do become vegetarians, and the meat packers, as such, certainly will be.

As for the effect of a purely vegetable diet on the race, Mr. BISCHOFF'S prediction would be more impressive had he been more careful in the selection of adjectives with which to characterize the Chinese. Without initiative, in some senses, they may have been, but until very lately, as history goes, they were by far the most advanced and probably the most intelligent people in their half of the world, while they are not and never have been either anaemic or slothful. It was an excusable, if not justifiable, belief in their own superiority that prevented them from adopting Occidental ways and inventions as promptly as the Japanese did, and, as between the two nations, not a few observers expect greater things from awakened China than from its more promptly moving rival.

But of course Mr. BISCHOFF, whatever the vegetarians may say, is right on general principles in foreseeing disastrous consequences to follow deprivation of meat. Master races, and the ruling class of other races, have always been flesh eaters, no considerable number of people ever having been strict vegetarians except from a necessity clearly recognized as cruel and escaped from as soon as economic competency permitted.

What Pegoud's Flights Are Proving. As if to settle the uncertainty whether it was S's or O's that PEGOUD "cut" in his first exhibitions of upside-down flying, on Sunday he went up into the air and proceeded to write both of those letters on the presumably astonished sky. Probably any bird that chose could duplicate these feats easily enough, but it is not recorded that any bird ever attempted either of them. Many take headlong-dives from great heights, but as these descents are always of a strictly business character, the upward turn is made in the simplest possible way. That, of course, is forward, not backward, and no flight half way around from the normal position is involved.

PEGOUD follows his more complicated path, as he himself explains it, to prove that an aviator is not necessarily lost even if his machine does capsize. The demonstration is hardly convincing except as to carefully planned overturnings, quite different from those which come unexpectedly and in other than the conditions and positions that the Frenchman selects. If capsized within a few hundred feet of the ground, for instance, or if his planes collapsed, he would be as helpless as was many another aviator who has fallen to death.

Unquestionably, however, PEGOUD has revealed that the aeroplane has possibilities hitherto unthought of by practical fliers, though nothing he does presents any difficulties of explanation to the closest theorist. He evidently has a machine of exceptionally good construction, else would it not have endured the enormous strains to which his evolutions subject it, and in this probably lies the most valuable lesson of his performances.

The chief wonder of these performances is that a man can keep all his wits about him and do exactly the right thing after he has fallen a thousand feet as fast as, or faster than, gravity can take him. It has been a common assumption that merciful unconsciousness comes on before the termination of much shorter falls than that, and the phrase "he never knew what hurt him" has rarely been missing from descriptions of such accidents. However it may be with other men, PEGOUD, if the fate he is tempting overtakes him, will not be spared full realization of his end.

Turkeys Live Too Long. Great as is the present popularity of the turkey as food, its favor would be both greater and better deserved if more people realized that a young turkey is as much better eating than a fully matured one as a chicken is better than a hen.

Too long have most of us taken it for granted that the best turkey is the biggest turkey, and amiable patriots—with a keen eye for incidental advertising—have carefully reared birds of monstrous size for presentation to Presidents, Governors, and other high-and-mighties. These eminent ones have gratefully acknowledged such gifts in pathetic ignorance of the fact that they would have been much better served had the well-browned victim been further from the record by a dozen pounds or even twenty.

Economists may frown at the suggestion that all turkeys intended for the table should be killed young, for that plan would involve a seeming diminution in the total supply of turkey meat. Probably the loss is only seeming, however, for several little turkeys can be raised for what one big one costs, and many a lamentable accident would be avoided by a more timely use of the hatchet.

NO IMMIGRANT PLAGUE.

Chief Medical Officer Says Few Have Venereal Taint.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It has become the fashion to attribute most of our social ills to immigration. In THE TIMES recently appeared a letter from Alexander Konta asserting that, on account of the laxness of the medical inspection at Ellis Island, large numbers of immigrants suffering from syphilis gain entrance into the country. This statement was made the subject of editorial comment under the caption "Importing a Plague." Your correspondent's statement is not borne out by the facts.

In addition to the primary inspection to which all aliens are subjected, approximately 175,000 are turned aside annually for special examination. These persons receive careful physical examination, yet only six cases of demonstrable luetic disease were found among them during the past year. Five additional cases occurring among recently landed immigrants, in which it could be stated that the disease existed prior to landing, were admitted to hospital.

Some years ago this question was given a still more drastic test and, for a brief period, all steerage aliens were given a special examination for the detection of this particular disease. The number of cases found was practically negligible.

That many cases of insanity occur among recently landed aliens is true, but, according to the observed facts, the great majority of those brought to Ellis Island for deportation suffer from forms of insanity due to constitutional tendencies rather than to infectious disease of this character.

The catalogue of objectionable diseases brought by immigrants is sufficiently large without adding to the list by taking counsel of panic fear. The immigration problem is beset by difficulties, and it is unfortunate that it should be still further complicated by exciting public alarm in regard to a danger which is mainly imaginary.

Mrs. Pankhurst Seeking Funds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is not so much that Mrs. Pankhurst will corrupt our own "suffragettes" into adopting the militant ways of the English suffragettes, or that there is danger that she will do much harm here. But she is after the dollars. Their funds to continue their anarchistic destruction of property, and possibly of life, are running low. They need more, and must remain quiet until they obtain more. The question is, Are we Americans in such sympathy with their ways of intimidation and destruction to secure their desired object that we are willing to add to these funds, without which they will probably have to adopt more rational means, or desist entirely, for the present, and thus add to the peace of the world?

BOGUS TRADE NAMES.

High License Fee Urged to Produce Revenue and Check Frauds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In New York, if a man wants to launch some scheme without compromising his own name, he goes to a stationer, buys a form for 5 cents, fills it out more or less accurately, and presents it at the County Clerk's office where, upon payment of 25 cents, the "trade-name certificate" is filed, permanently, and without further inquiry.

At least twenty thousand of these fictitious trade names are on record, and every day all the time of three clerks is occupied in answering inquiries as to the identity and whereabouts of the real persons behind these high-sounding aliases, for it is the petty enterprises that are being run under their cover that furnish the bulk of our minor litigation.

My proposition is this: Let a filing tax of $10 be required of every one who wishes to conduct a business under a fancy name, and let an annual license fee of $5 be required for its renewal. This tax should insure to the licensee that no other imitative certificate be recognized—for I know of several cases where such trade names have been boldly approprlated by others.

I would not tax plain partnership designations which, like "J. P. Morgan & Co.," use the authentic name of the principal partner with the "& Co.," as a simple abbreviation. What I urge is a check to the activities of the thousands of fakers in New York City, who are skulking behind high-sounding appellations and thus obtaining a prestige —especially by the mails—that their personalities could never give them. A notary or a lawyer or a doctor must pay a substantial fee to the State for permission to register, and the registers of these professions are no expense to our city. Why should we give a free rein to thousands of these "noms de crook"—for every lawyer and banker knows that such by-names are too often only subterfuges to avoid creditors?

My proposition would produce a yearly revenue of at least $100,000 to the city. Its adoption should include the appointment of a registrar of trade names, who would receive a salary out of the receipts. My plan is, therefore, a treble boon—it produces money, it curbs crooks, and it insures a self-supporting office. At present the taxpayers have to provide room in an already overcrowded department and pay at least three salaries to look after these records.

If a trade name is worth having it is worth paying for.

WHY WAIT FOR THE FLAGMAN?

Valuable Time Would Be Saved if Second Train Picked Him Up.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From the testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission it appears that the stalled Bar Harbor train at Wallingford, after sending back its flagman to stop the oncoming train, started on its way, then slowed down, stopped, and waited for its flagman to return, whistling for him twice.

In this there was no violation of the rules of the road. All trains are expected to wait for their flagmen; all flagmen are expected to return to their trains.

But how many minutes were lost by the slowing down and the stopping of the Bar Harbor train, precious minutes which might have been used for speeding it on its way, possibly taking it out of danger?

All suggested innovations meet with objections, over and beyond the exasperating, time-honored one, "because it is never done." What may these be in this case? Perhaps the most obvious is that the first train loses its flagman. The second, or last, train (supposing several trains to be stalled, the flagman of each having been sent back to flag the one next behind) carries one extra, unnecessary trainman—this last of no importance. But how replace the lost flagman of train No. 1? The testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission points the way. Flagmen and brakemen, it says, receive the same pay. Why, therefore, should not all brakemen qualify in their examinations as flagmen also, this to enable them to serve in an emergency? As to expense, what is it? A few more signal flags, lanterns, torpedoes, and fusees for each train—nothing more.

This very simple suggestion may have nothing new in it. Other railroads, unknown to the writer, may have tried the experiment, with or without success; but not the New Haven.

Why run a single unnecessary risk where the lives of human beings, passengers and trainmen, are at stake?

Why wait for the flagman? L. L. S.

A REMARKABLE SINGER.

Italian Girl's Voice Reached One Octave Above High C.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The papers contain a dispatch from Milwaukee regarding the "discovery" of a girl there with a phenomenal voice. The dispatch goes on to say: "She disclosed a range topped by high G—the highest note ever attained by the human voice." Leaving aside the fact that a well-known American singer—Ellen Beach Yaw—has been singing this same note for years, permit me to call attention to the case of Lucrezia Agujari, born in Ferrara in 1743, instructed in a convent by P. Lambertini, and making her debut in Florence in 1764. This remarkable artist had a positively unequaled range, reaching with ease the C one octave above high C!

No less an authority than Mozart himself heard her sing at Parma in 1770, and, writing of her performance, said: "She has a lovely voice, a flexible throat, and an incredibly high range. She sang in my presence the following notes and passages"—the same being of remarkable difficulty and reaching variously the high G quoted regarding the Milwaukee claimant, the A above that, the B above that, and finally the C one octave above high C. In 1775 she went to London and sang at the Pantheon concerts, receiving the sum of £100 a performance—an absolutely unprecedented sum at that time—and died in Parma, May 18, 1783. In view of all of which it would seem as if Milwaukee would have to try again.

BANANA PLANT ECONOMICAL.

Small Acreage Will Support Many Thousand People.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The action of President Wilson in putting bananas on the free list will be commended by every student of economics who has investigated the subject, even casually. In food-producing power, per acre, the banana will support a greater number of people than any other food plant known unless one excepts the bread-fruit, as the following will show:

> From twenty to twenty-five acres of land are necessary to provide enough beef for one adult consumer. The same area planted with wheat would feed from forty to fifty people; planted with corn or with rice, it would support about one hundred and eighty people; planted with potatoes, a litle less than that number. But twenty-five acres of bananas will support about five thousand people—in some instances even a greater number.

These figures are only an approximate, it is true, but they represent coefficients of pretty close value and great importance.

WILD BIRD DESTROYERS.

Dr. Hornaday Denounces the Feather Trade's Tactics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Herbert Syrett's attack on Miss Eleanor Wilson in your columns for participating in the bird play at Meriden on Sept. 12 is thoroughly characteristic of the spirit that animates the feather trade. Nothing that gets in the way of "the trade," no matter how beautiful or innocent, is safe from attack. It is easy for men who pay naked savages to slaughter hummingbirds at a cent apiece, or birds of paradise at fifty cents apiece, to train their guns on an American girl who dares to appear in public in behalf of the birds of the world. The meanest and fiercest politicians in this country always respect the wives and daughters of candidates for office, and hold them immune from attack, or even criticism. We have seen some remarkable exhibitions of the binding effect of this unwritten law.

But at least one man in the feather trade is different. Even the fact that Miss Wilson is the daughter of the President of the United States does not render her safe from Mr. Syrett's bitter criticism. It is this spirit that has made men hate the feather trade, and demand that it be cast out.

After a three hours' fight in the Senate Democratic caucus the people's representatives have definitely settled the question: To kill or not to kill birds for American millinery. The final vote of the caucus not to kill them was practically unanimous. Mr. Syrett's letter entitled "Plumage Saves Birds," opens with this wild statement: "Every outrage committed against bird life in any part of the world has been charged to the feather trade."

That was merely a range finding shot; and it missed the target, clean and clear. The market gunners swear, literally, that they are the real victims of the wretches who are "making all this fuss about birds." The sportsmen, gunners and game-hogs who have been severely arraigned for great slaughter will violently dispute Mr. Syrett's statement; and with them we leave it.

Yes; it is very nearly true, as Mr. Syrett says, that "at this time it would seem the trade as a whole has not a single friend or sympathizer among press or public." And why is this true? It is because the golden opportunity presented by the Tariff bill to secure a sweeping result against the trade aroused all the abhorrence and animosity toward the slaughter of the innocents for gain and vanity that has been gathering in this country for twenty years or more, and seeking an outlet in adequate, effective expression. The best women and men of America and England hate the principle of the trade in wild birds' plumage. They have determined that so far as they are concerned there shall be no more of it, now or at any time hereafter. The importing milliners of our country have laid in enormous stocks of the plumage that soon will be forbidden—a Chicago man admitting to having borrowed $150,000 in order to put it into birds of paradise and other plumages—but I would not be surprised if the universal odium now attaching in this country to the wearing of such feathers would presently dull the edge of the market.

Mr. Syrett attempts to throw dust in the eyes of the public by talking about "the business of the feather trade to increase and enlarge the supply of bird plumage" by breeding egrets and birds of paradise! I will add that in England the feather trade has made a very shrewd move in founding a "Committee for the Economic Study of Birds"—to which a number of gullible British zoologists have foolishly loaned their good names as "advisory" boarders—which has for its real object the delaying of the British Plumage bill while the "committee" studies birds. At one time, the feather trade attempted to prove, by three Frenchmen of mystery, that in Venezuela there are wonderful egret farms ("garceros") in which a great product of shed plumes is picked up and marketed, without killing any birds! That fake has been so completely riddled by exposure and counter-testimony that its use in campaigns has apparently been abandoned.

To the feather trade we say: "Show us one result that you have achieved in protecting or increasing any species of wild bird, great or small, either in captivity or out of it. Show us one law for the protection of birds that you have put upon any statute book, or have even helped to place there. Point to one warden that you ever have paid to protect birds anywhere on this round earth. Show us one law restricting the slaughter of birds for millinery purposes that you have not fought. Tell us where and how you propose to breed birds of paradise in captivity—any species you please. Tell us where you are going to raise egrets for the plume market.

Mr. Syrett denies the extermination of birds by the feather trade. If space in THE TIMES were available, I would gladly write down here a list of species; for I have it right here before me. Let me cite at least one concrete case, quite near home. But for the work of the Audubon societies there would not be at this moment one gull, or tern, or shearwater, or skimmer, alive anywhere on any portion of our Atlantic Coast! The milliners' hunters would have killed them, every one. They were stopped just in time to save sufficient seed stock.

AUTUMN.

Home season of Magicians who aspire
To tell great Nature's victory of days
In royal grandeur! Lo, the flaming fire,
The arching sky with triumph all ablaze!
And in the trees the wind sung hymns of praise!

Each frost-kissed leaf a noble ensign waves
In gorgeous colors. 'Neath the gleam and glow
An iridescent, limpid ocean laves
Its quiet shore, and in calm, tranquil flow
Speaks no foreboding of the coming snow.

The murmuring echoes of sweet symphonies
Enthrall the ear. The loves of bygone hours
Waft incense rare of hallowed memories,
And in the silences of forest bowers
Lurk benedictions from the Summer's flowers.

Lo, Autumn comes with glories manifold,
To tell the garnered treasures of the year!
Unnumbered blessings rest within her hold,
And in her heart the promise, sacred, dear—
A goodly harvesting of love and cheer!

JOURNALISM SCHOOL ENTERS NEW HOME

Building Given by Joseph Pulitzer to Columbia Is Ready—Work Starts To-morrow.

HAS NEWSPAPER FEATURES

Besides About Thirty Rooms for Classes, a Students' Clubroom, and a Large Library.

With reporters' rooms, editors' offices, libraries, clipping files, and other features of the most up-to-date newspaper plants, the new building of the School of Journalism at Columbia University will throw open its doors to students to-morrow, when the academic session gets under way. The absence of large printing presses is all that is lacking for a complete newspaper plant. The entire building has been carefully arranged for training newspaper men at a cost of $500,000.

This building, work on which has been going on for a year and a half, was made possible by the late Joseph Pulitzer, who gave Columbia $1,000,000 for a School of Journalism. It stands on the corner of 116th Street and Broadway, at right angles to new Furnald Dormitory, which has been going up simultaneously. For the time being all of the rooms will not be occupied by the journalism department, and for the present year at least the department of anthropology will have its offices and lecture rooms on one of the floors, as well as the Institute of Arts and Sciences. The basement will be given over to the university bookstore and The Columbia Spectator, the university daily paper. More than half the building will be used for journalistic purposes.

The main door of the building is on South Field. In the entrance hallway are bas-reliefs of Delane, Franklin, Greeley, and Thomas. The first floor, which is on a level with South Field, contains the offices of the Directors and of the Administrative Board, and four lecture rooms, two having the capacity of 225 students each. The larger rooms, it is believed, will be used for public lectures. The second floor has a ceiling height of twenty feet and has a large library and reading room, with collections in current history and politics, municipal charters, documents relating to all branches of modern governmental activity, indexes of current history and politics, pamphlet literature, and reports of civic organizations. History, politics, and economics will constitute a very important part of the course in journalism, and the proposed arrangement of the second floor will place material for the study of these subjects at the most accessible point, while immediately above, on the mezzanine floor, will be the lecture rooms and a "City Room."

The "City Room" has a specially constructed semi-circular desk such as most newspaper offices have for copy reading. This desk is in the centre of the room, and around it are typewriters for "reporters," file racks, telephones, and all the equipment found in the up-to-date city room. There will probably be about twenty students who will use this classroom in "newspaper technique," as the course is called. Some of the students will handle the copy as in a real office, while others will cover assignments and do rewriting work.

The third, fourth, and fifth floors will be used for lecture rooms, classrooms, offices, and studies. A room on the top floor has been set apart for a students' clubroom. The upper floors can be reached by two elevators and two flights of stairs. The classrooms and lecture rooms number about thirty, ranging in seating capacity from 30 to 300 students.

FIRST RECALL OF A JUDGE.

Contest in San Francisco Won by Women Voters.

The first man who has won an election under the recall law in California arrived at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday. He is Judge Wiley F. Crist, who in April was elected to take the place of Police Judge Charles Weller, when the women of San Francisco decided Weller must go, and made good their decision.

Judge Crist is 35 years old, and went out to the coast twelve years ago from Washington, D. C., where his family lives. He says, to the best of his recollection, the only time previous to his own election an attempt was made to work the recall law in California was in regard to a Mayor of Los Angeles, but the Mayor was not recalled. He won by 870 in a total of about 61,000 votes cast, and after an exciting campaign.

"Mr. Weller had been a Police Judge for several terms," said Judge Crist last night. "A lot of prominent women became incensed because of his action in fixing low bail in certain cases, particularly attacks upon women. These bails were so low that the accused almost invariably fled after bail had been given. In one case bail was fixed at $50 cash. The case that brought matters to a crisis was that of a man named Hendricks, who, is was learned, had been accused of an attack upon a woman in Sacramento. Another offense in San Francisco aroused great indignation.

"The case was assigned to Judge Shortall, who set bail at $3,000. Some lawyer persuaded Judge Weller, who had such authority, to reduce the bail to $1,000 cash. This was paid, and Hendricks promptly skipped. That was in February.

"An agitation was started at once. People had been complaining for a long time about the police courts. The club women held a mass meeting and decided that they would attempt to recall Judge Weller. They had a petition signed by 15 per cent. of the voters, and an election was set for April 22. The Recall League was organized. Campaign funds were solicited. Meetings were held in halls and churches. Between forty and fifty prominent speakers volunteered their services, among them the Rev. Charles F. Aked, formerly of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, and many prominent lawyers.

"After the election, the opposition brought suit to set the result aside, on a technicality. There were two other subjects voted on, and the wording of the law was slightly ambiguous. The opposition said I should have a majority of the votes cast upon all the questions at issue. The suit was decided against them."

N. Y. UNIVERSITY PLANS.

Fund for City Improvement Work—New Teachers Appointed.

As trustee of the fund left by the will of Theodore Greely White in 1901, New York University will open what is called a "research laboratory in public affairs," and William Lamkie, formerly Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Northampton, Mass., will have charge. Clubs will study neighborhood conditions in their relation to city affairs. The announcement was made yesterday by Chancellor Brown.

Announcement was also made of the appointment of Prof. George M. Finlay of Colorado College to the geology department, of Prof. H. L. Hollingsworth of Columbia University to the lectureship of the psychology of advertising in the School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance, and of Dr. Marion McMillan and Dr. Charles Bolduan as lecturers on hygiene and sanitation in the Medical College.

The Owner of Baldpate.........John C. King

Melodrama of the good, old-fashioned sort, with a goodly supply of villains, an adventuress or two, just enough careless display of "guns" to tingle the nerves of the audience, a murderous shot, graft disclosures, a wad of money large enough to make the Chief of Police turn crook, and an old man hermit ghost who was just as ghostly as such characters usually are and who furnishes a lot of the live fun of the play—these supplied the chief materials out of which George M. Cohan has fashioned his mystery farce, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," from Earl Derr Biggers's novel, which had its first New York production before an appreciative audience at the Astor Theatre last night.

The scene of the farce is in the office of a Summer hotel known as the Baldpate Inn, on top of a mountain in the middle of Winter, at midnight, and with a howling storm outside. Melodrama starts in with a rush, and it is sustained with varying degrees of startling incidents to the end. To the inn comes the writer of popular department store fiction, William Hallowell Magee, a bold young man who care not what the critics say so long as the public buy. He has made a wager of $5,000 with the owner of the hotel to write a thrilling tale in the vacant hotel within twenty-four hours. The caretaker, one of the choicest characters in the play, gives the brave novelist the key, "the only key to Baldpate."

This key, or, rather, the multiplicity of keys, which unlock the door and admit grafters, a railroad President, murderers, the hermit ghost, a charming adventuress, and a still more charming young woman reporter, open all the stirring details of the story, and after it is all over, and the novelist narrowly escapes being arrested for the murder of the adventuress—who, of course, complicates matters by coming to life—the owner appears and says it has all been a joke to prevent the lurid novel being written within the prescribed time.

Wallace Eddinger is the novelist, the hero of the play, and in his energetic dealing with the hardened characters who burst in unexpectedly upon him he showed no effects of the automobile shaking up which he suffered a few days ago in Hartford with the author of the farce. Both Mr. Eddinger and Mr. Cohan were called at the close, and loud cries went up for a speech from the author, but the audience had to be satisfied with a single appearance and a cheerful smile.

"Reformers have no money," says the quick-witted novelist early in the play as he overhears one of the villains on the 'phone telling a sum of cash raised to fight the grafters and which has been deposited in the safe of the vacant hotel for safe keeping. The young woman reporter eventually gets the wad, $200,000, and starts off with it for the office of her paper to expose the plot. She loses it, but it bobs up again, and the Chief of Police gets hold of it and he plans to skip to Canada.

The improbabilities are so well sustained that no one can guess how it will all turn out, but the result shows that the play is what the young novelist has written during the twenty-four hours' incarceration in the hotel, and he bows himself off with the triumphant exclamation that the novel will sell into the millions.

"AIDA" IN ITALIAN.

Century Opera Changes the Language at the Last Performance.

It appeared last evening that a week of "Aïda" in English at the Century Opera had not in the least dulled the public appetite for that masterpiece. It was given there again, but in Italian, and though there had been eight large audiences last week, there was another one for the single Italian representation, which, in accordance with the plan intended to be followed all through the season, ended the series with a performance in the original tongue. It was said, indeed, that several hundred would-be purchasers of the cheaper seats were turned away.

There seemed to be a larger proportion of the composer's fellow-countrymen in the audience than before; and there was, perhaps in consequence of this, somewhat more of demonstrative applause. Perhaps, too, the week's experience may contribute something toward the solution of the problem of opera in English; but the solution is not to be made in a week.

The performance showed naturally again in smoothness and effectiveness of ensemble, but it did not gain much dramatic life and energy from the conducting of Mr. Nicosia. It served to enhance the good opinion of some of the principal singers who had been heard before, notably of Miss Amsden, the Aïda, and Miss Howard, the Amneris, both admirable in voice and style and intelligent actresses, and of Mr. Chalmers, the Amonasro, whose voice is of good quality. It brought forward a new tenor as Rhadames, Mr. Eugenio Folco, who imparted to it a characteristically Italian flavor of the second rate, by means of his powerful but colorless voice, his fondness for dwelling long in stentorian tones on most high notes, falling in them occasionally below the pitch, and his disposition to rush to the footlights at every occasion.

The first week of the new operatic undertaking has been full of the promise of success. The second one will begin to-night with Ponchielli's "La Gioconda."

An international marriage of interest, which has just been announced here, is that of Miss Virginia Cameron MacVeagh, daughter of Mrs. Frederic Ogden de Billier of this city, wife of the Secretary of the American Legation in Athens, Greece, to Marchese Agostino Ferrante di Ruffano, Chamberlain of the Count of Caserta, which took place on Aug. 21 in Athens.

The witnesses for the bride were Sir Francis Elliot, British Minister at Athens, and her stepfather, Marchese Emanuele Filiasi, and Don Marino Filomarini Tomacelli, son of the Duca della Torre of Naples, Italy, were the witnesses for the bridegroom.

The couple's engagement was announced by cable from Athens last May.

SOTHERN-MARLOWE APPEAR

Audience Greatly Interested in "Much Ado About Nothing."

There was a large audience last night to greet E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe when they began their annual engagement at the Manhattan Opera House with a performance of "Much Ado About Nothing," which had not figured extensively in their répertoire before they offered it last season. And there was a point about its being played at the Manhattan Opera House.

The audience there, which is not exactly like any other in the city, wants a story in its plays, and it wants to feel that it is getting the good human emotions of comedy or pathos, or preferably both.

The striking thing noticeable about last night's performance was the frequent manifestation on that part of the audience that it was getting just what it wanted. Of course there was a large following of Sothern and Marlowe adherents, but the great majority of the auditors were legitimate Manhattan Opera House patrons, the same who sat last week through the moving adventures of Joshua Whitcomb, as he followed his erring son to New York from "The Old Homestead."

They were simply wrapped up in the story of Beatrice and Benedick and Hero and Claudio. There once was a man who acknowledged his belief that Shakespeare had been relegated to the "closet drama," and only those went to see him acted who thought it was a good thing to be seen there.

That man should have been at the Manhattan Opera House last night. It was a whole sermon on how vital the plays of the Elizabethan dramatist are in this very day and generation. The people were fairly breathless when Benedick was being tricked or Beatrice flouted; there was a tenseness over the house that "East Lynn" never brought when Hero was led to the altar and they knew she was to be repudiated, and they just roared at the misbegotten pomposity of Dogberry. In fact, they acted as if they were listening to one of George M. Cohan's latest ones—which would have been balm of Gilead to the troubled soul of the Shakespearean pessimist.

BISPHAM IN VAUDEVILLE.

Baritone Sings Operatic Selections and Kipling's "Danny Deever."

David Bispham, the baritone, made his first appearance in vaudeville yesterday afternoon at the Palace Theatre He sang operatic selections from three periods, the first from Handel, the second from Mendelssohn's operetta, "Son and Stranger," and the third, the prologue to "I Pagliacci." These were all sung in English, each preceded by a short explanatory talk. Mr. Bispham prefaced his singing by an argument in favor of English librettos and song texts, in which he said that it seemed characteristic of our opera and that of London to charge exorbitant prices for singing no one could understand. He said that English was not a bad language to sing in unless bad English was sung.

The baritone was very successful with his audience. At the conclusion of the operatic numbers he sang as an encore Walter Damrosch's setting of Kipling's "Danny Deever," which for years he has made his property. His familiar gifts of dramatic utterance were brought to bear in the usual manner on the ballad, and it proved that a vaudeville audience likes to have a cold chill sent down the spine as well as the recital or concert auditors. Harry Gilbert at the piano played discreetly accompaniments that made no complex demands on the pianist.

PRESIDENT AT THE THEATRE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—President Wilson has become a vaudeville "fan." He went again to Keith's Theatre to-night, making his third visit there in two weeks. The President said on the occasion of his first visit that he had never been to a vaudeville performance before, and had an idea until that night that it would not be entertaining or interesting.

It was not until just before his dinner hour this evening that the President decided to attend the theatre. With him were his brother-in-law, Prof. Axson of Princeton, and Passed Assistant Surgeon Cary Grayson of the Navy. The President wanted to view the performance from the 50-cent mezzanine row, where he sat last Friday, but it was impossible to accommodate him there. He and his companions were obliged to go to what is known as "The President's Box," which Mr. Wilson does not like because it does not give him as good a view of the stage as the mezzanine seats. The President showed that he enjoyed the performance greatly. He particularly applauded the comedy features.

Warfield Again in 'The Auctioneer.'

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 22.—David Warfield opened his season here to-night in "The Auctioneer" at Ford's Opera House. The event signalized Mr. Warfield's return to comedy, playing again the first of his prominent rôles. The comedy has been rewritten, and is essentially a new work. Both Mr. Warfield and Mr. Belasco were called before the curtain many times. Marie Bates acted her original part of Mrs. Eagan. Others in the cast were Janet Dunbar, Marie Reichardt, Charlotte Leslay, Jennie Moscowitz, George Lee Guere, Louis Hendricks, Horace James, Harry Rogers, and Tony Bevan. After a week in Baltimore Mr. Warfield will open a limited season in New York next week at the Belasco Theatre.

After all, a market is the place where one expects to find green young things.

Which is one way of explaining why two perfectly nice young ladies from the city who go about pretending they are farmers' daughters, in disguises which wouldn't even deceive a green-goods man, ultimately find themselves hitched up for life—the one to a more or less bogus cowboy, with no end of money, and the other to an English Title, with no assets but a sense of humor. Just what the titled gentleman paid for his wife in "The Marriage Market" eludes at the present moment, but cynics might say that the cowboy person got his cheap, considering that what he offered was a not negotiable security in the form of love, whereas the other bidders were putting up such real collateral as cows and other dairy products.

All of this by way of introduction to the statement that this new musical piece at the Knickerbocker combines something of a story with a soupcon of real fun and quite a few of the most insinuatingly graceful and pleasing songs and dances that the season has brought. Incidentally, there is the color that should go with these things in the form of pretty pictures, pretty girls, and pretty clothes.

There are touches of melodrama in this story of the cowboy who revengefully marries the daughter of the man who ruined his father years before, (the girl, by the way, thinks it is a mock ceremony,) tries to force her love in the primitive forceful fashion, finds himself jilted, and risks seasickness and other things to be near her on her daddy's yacht. And there is the occasional pleasurable thrill that comes when the best man wins, even though the lady of his favor has previously proved herself a snob and a worthy daughter of her unpleasant father.

What is more important, however, is the fact that the plot structure, though it is there, doesn't specially impede the flow of music and dance, which provides the lightsome part of the entertainment, as, indeed, it must, with a Donald Brian to sing and dance, no matter what the other demands happen to be.

Last night's audience was particularly amused, and naturally, when the enraged father, thinking to embarrass his cowboy son-in-law, invited him to a party aboard his yacht, with an aside to the effect that the young man would surely make a holy show of himself in gentleman's clothes, and forever lose his bride as soon as he tried to dance.

Of course, the cowboy—that is to say, Mr. Donald Brian—did dance, and he didn't lose the lady by reason of the exhibition. Furthermore, it may be mentioned at the moment that this young man with the useful feet and the engaging smile developed more depth in both his singing and his acting last night than have been apparent hitherto, with the result that where it was necessary "The Marriage Market" did convey a sense of something dramatic. One may except to the moment at the end of the second act where the supposed gentleman so far forgets himself as to raise his fist on Dadda, a breach of decorum regrettable on its own account and also because it led down an otherwise natural and effective sentimental climax.

After some preliminary sparring, which fills in about the amount of time ordinarily utilized for an English curtain-raiser, the going really began with "The Mendocino Stroll," a yip-yip cowboy number, with "shooting in it," lariats, and other Western things serving to bring Mr. Brian to the centre of the stage, and in good time for the sale of wives presently to take place in a picturesque assemblage to which the good looks of the girls materially contributed. But before this happened there had been an agreeable number, "American Courtship," with a charming dance by that very refreshing young person, Miss Carroll McComas, who, besides radiating good humor whenever she appeared, whistled her way into favor before the evening was over.

When it came to love confidences, done as usually for the benefit of some thousand listeners, Mr. Brian had the co-operation of Miss Venita Fitzhugh, who needs to soft pedal a little more, but who is otherwise a very valuable addition to the ranks of the musical comedy prima donnas. Miss Fitzhugh sings well, but suggests the hauteur of her rôle more successfully than its sentiment.

There are capital finales to both the first and second act, with the music well colored in arrangement and orchestration and well sung by principals and chorus. In the second act there is a notable love duo, "Oh, How Near and Yet How Far," a neat number for the middies, and several good singing and dancing numbers. In one of these dancing features, "A Little Bit of Silk," which served to prove that the more one sees of some persons the better they look, Miss Mona Mannering and several rosebud garbed Dollies easily merited the long delayed encore, which served to add some unexpected importance to the number.

The final act brought, among other things, a capital number, "The Irish Husband," composed by Mr. Brian, who delivered it with an unction worthy of the great Chauncey himself. There was a Futurist Twirl, also, which brought more girls in more striking gowns and poses, and the star himself, footing it for a finale on a table which two lackeys presently removed while Miss Cissy Sewell was being lightly twirled in the air.

By way of added diversion, Mr. Percival Knight, as the titled person adrift in the far West, contributed occasional bits of real fun.

A word is due Mr. Edward Royce for the stage direction, and Mr. Harold Vicars for spirited conducting, though that long delayed encore, where these things are usually too freely given, seemed to need an explanation.

YIDDISH BARD DIES; THOUSANDS MOURN

Zunser for More Than Sixty Years Wrote His People's Songs.

HIS FAME WORLD WIDE

Fleeing from Persecution Abroad, He Settled Here—Loved American Institutions.

Eliakum Zunser, the Yiddish poet, one of the most picturesque figures of the east side, died at his home, 171 East Broadway at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was 77 years old. He had been ill for two weeks with pneumonia. Funeral services will be held to-morrow, probably at the Educational Alliance Building, at 197 East Broadway. It is expected that between 25,000 and 30,000 persons will attend, so greatly was the poet loved.

They spoke of Zunser yesterday as the "man without an enemy." As soon as the news of his death had spread throughout the east side a steady stream of callers passed up the narrow stairway to his home to pay their respects to his memory and express their sympathy to the bereaved family. For Zunser was his people's poet and the man who laid the foundation of modern Yiddish poetry. Not only did he write the poems that made his name a household word wherever Yiddish literature is known, but he also set them to music of his own composition.

These song-poems—the first of the Yiddish folk songs—gained a popularity unequaled by those of any other Yiddish writer both in this country and Russia, where Zunser was born in Wilna Oct. 25, 1836. One of his works, entitled the "Book of Eight Songs," published in 1861, is said to have had a tremendous circulation.

When Zunser was 7 years old his father died, leaving his family in poverty, but the boy was fortunate in obtaining the aid for a time of a distant relative, the rich Sara Gordon.

After a few years in school, Zunser took up the trade of embroiderer and became an expert.

In his free hours he taught himself how to write, and even worked out a system of algebra for his own use. At the age of 14 he wrote his first poem, which is still sung in many Jewish homes in Lithuania. He soon gained a local reputation as a poet, and, after evolving a theory of music, fitted the music to his words. He found a profitable employment in singing at weddings, and at one time his fee was as high as 200 rubles.

In 1862 he was married and set himself seriously to work to compose songs. Four children were born to him, all of whom, together with his wife, he lost nine years later in the cholera epidemic of 1871. This great bereavement was responsible for several of his most popular songs which caught and expressed most faithfully the "tone" of the times. They were "The Bell of the Mail Wagon," "The Railway," "The New World," and the greater part of his play, "The Sale of Joseph," said to be the first Yiddish drama.

During the years up to 1889 Zunser's popularity became so great that the Russian police looked upon him with suspicion. He was no longer permitted to express himself openly, and the police persecution became so vexatious that he finally decided to come to America. In 1890 he made a tour of the country, reciting his poems and meeting with great success. After his tour he settled in New York and opened a small printing establishment at 156 East Broadway.

Zunser continued to write songs mostly in defense of American liberty and American institutions. One of the most popular was "The Scythe," in which he told the Jews to go back to the soil. Others were "The Peddler," "The Nineteenth Century," "The Immigrant," "A Letter to Mother," "What America Loves," "The Last Chapter," "Overlooked and Lost," "The Three Stations," and "Slaves Were We," which brought him a popularity here as widespread as in the old country.

The poet-playwright was a great admirer of the late Mayor Gaynor. Some time before the Mayor's death Zunser said emphatically that "if the people of New York City do not re-elect Mr. Gaynor as Mayor they do not deserve him."

On March 30, 1905, the fiftieth anniversary of Zunser's literary activities was celebrated by a large meeting in Cooper Union.

He leaves a widow and seven children, three boys and four girls, all of whom were at his side when he died.

TAG.—The Trustees of the German Savings Bank in the City of New York at a special meeting held the 22d day of September, 1913, have received with deep sorrow the announcement of the demise of their beloved President, Mr. Casimir Tag, and record the following resolutions on the minutes:

In the death of Casimir Tag the German Savings Bank sustains the loss of its worthy President and the Trustees have been deprived of an esteemed friend and earnest coworker.

Honor was the guiding motive of his life.

Recognizing his manly worth and virtues, the Trustees of this institution elected him a member of its board May 5, 1890; a member of the Committee on Finance Jan. 5, 1891; Second Vice President March 5, 1900; First Vice President July 2, 1900, and President Oct. 7, 1901.

He was true to all trusts reposed in him and a wise counsellor in the deliberations of the board. His force of character, sterling integrity, and sound judgment won the confidence of all having relations with the bank and his charm of manner and kindliness endeared him to all who knew him.

It is also our happiness to know that in other fields to which humanity invokes the services of men his labor and earnest benevolence were always effective.

The Trustees deeply lament the death of their friend and, gratefully recording their high appreciation of the services rendered by him to the bank and desirous of expressing their deepfelt sorrow to the bereaved family, offer a tribute of affection to his memory at the parting in the poet's fateful words:

"Weh, dass wir scheiden muessen."

Resolved, That this board attend the funeral services in a body and that the flag of the bank be displayed at half mast until the day after the funeral.

Resolved, That these resolutions be printed in the press of this city and that an engrossed copy thereof be sent to the family of the departed.

YANKEES DROP GAME TO CLEVELAND---ATHLETICS WIN PENNANT

YANKEES PRESENT GAME TO CLEVELAND

Bases on Balls and Error Bring New Yorkers Close to Last Place Again.

The Yankees had a spasm of generosity at the Polo Grounds yesterday and deeded a game to the Clevelands. The team from Ohio had little or nothing to do with winning, for the game was thrust upon them with such positiveness that they couldn't have turned it down if they had wished to. Here's the way the Yanks divided up the spoils. They kept 4 runs for themselves and gave the Naps 5.

Said Joey Birmingham to Frank Chance after the presentation exercises were over: "For those little favors, Husk, we thank you."

Ray Fisher, who gave up a good job teaching school to be a pitcher, had quite a little to do with turning the game loose. In the first inning he made a wild heave that put Joeless Joe Jackson on third, whence Joe scored. In the third round, with the bases blockaded with runners, Ray thrust a pass on Carisch and inveigled the same Joe Jackson over the plate with another run. Fisher was then permitted to disguise himself in plain clothes and go home. Heinie Schulz, with his pretzel shoot, went to the pitching hill.

Not so very many people were there. About the same size crowd that attends a musical comedy during Holy Week. Everybody was very quiet, like at a deaf and dumb convention. Aside from Silk O'Loughlin's bark and a few bright, green Autumn hats, there wasn't a bit of noise.

By their philanthropic treatment of the Naps yesterday the Yankees came as near as possible to going back into last place without being buried. For some reason St. Looey won a game and the Yanks are hanging onto seventh place by a single point. Their grip on their present position is so frail that a slight breeze will blow them back into the cellar.

The Yanks got fifteen hits and the Naps seven. The infield was wet and slippery, and many infield taps went for safe hits. Twelve Yanks were stuck on the bases. In fact, the home boys were good at everything but scoring runs.

Cy Falkenberg, the human lightning rod, was pounded out of the box by the Yanks in the fifth inning. Falkenberg is growing taller and thinner every day. If he had only one eye he would make a good needle. Steen understudied the tall party, and started out with a hilarious wild pitch. After that he stopped the Yanks' advance.

The Naps grabbed two in the first, when Liebold singled and was sacrificed by Chapman. Jackson singled to right, scoring to Liebold. Lajoie got an infield tap and Fisher threw the ball a mile past first, Jackson going to third. He scored when Johnston forced Larry at second.

Maisel walked in the first and Holden and Cree died. A two-base belt by Williams scored Maisel. Gilhooley singled to left in the second, went down on Peck's out, and continued to third on Falkenberg's wild pitch. After Gossett skied to Liebold in short centre, Gilhooley took a long chance and tried to score after the catch. Carisch dropped Liebold's toss and Gilhooley was safe.

Chapman walked in the third and Jackson was hit by Fisher. Lajoie tried to sacrifice and popped to Williams. Johnston's single to centre scored Chapman. Bates died at first and Graney walked, filling the bases. Carish walked and forced Jackson home with another run. Schulz went in and fanned Falkenberg for the third out.

Graney walked in the fifth and went to third on Carish's single, scoring on Falkenberg's single. Falkenberg cracked in the fifth. Maisel singled and went to third on Holden's double to left. Cree's infield tap scored Maisel, and a single to centre by Williams tallied Holden. Steen then came to the rescue and a wild pitch put Cree on third and Williams on second. Zeider walked and filled the bases. No one out. Steen then began to pitch as if he meant it, and after Gilhooley and Peck flied to Jackson, Gossett was extinguished at first.

Here and there during the remaining moments of the game the Yanks had plenty of opportunities to score, but they just wouldn't. It was so dark in the ninth inning that Umpire O'Loughlin had to toss out a new white ball every few minutes so the players could see it. The score:

Senators Go to Pieces and Lose.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Washington played miserably in the field to-day and St. Louis had little difficulty in winning, 7 to 5. The defeat coming when Cleveland was winning from New York ousted the locals from second place, which they had held jointly with the Naps since Saturday. Ayres, a recruit from Richmond, Va., started his first major league game to-day and pitched splendidly while on the mound. He went along for six full innings in great shape, holding St. Louis to three scattered hits, only one of which was clean. In the seventh he allowed his fourth hit and then Washington went to pieces. Before St. Louis had been retired five runs had crossed the plate, in which only two hits figured. Boehling went in with two on bases and two out. After allowing the first man to face him to single, he struck out the next batter. He was not scored on again. Washington could do little with either Leverenz or Mitchell. The score:

Cubs and Phillies Divide.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Chicago and Philadelphia completed their season's series to-day by dividing a doubleheader. Alexander, who was routed by the locals in the first game Sunday, was good enough to shut them out in the opener this afternoon, timely batting off Humphries, giving Philadelphia a 2 to 0 victory. Good control by Pierce and hard batting gave Chicago the second game, 5 to 1, Chalmers proving ineffective. The result of the games leaves the locals still three games behind Philadelphia in the struggle for second place. The scores:

Allen Starts Billiard Practice.

Benjamin Allen, the Kansas City pocket billiard expert, who is matched to play Alfred De Oro, holder of the world's championship, next week, began his practice in preparation for the coming match last night at Doyle's Billiard Academy. He is to play the pick of the local billiard players, and will allot large handicaps. His opponent last night was Edward Gray of the Amateur Billiard Club, and the Western player was returned the winner by the score of 150 to 47. Allen displayed excellent form and made a high run of 33 points. This evening the men will be opponents again in the second block of the match.

ATHLETICS CLINCH AMERICAN PENNANT

Double Victory Over Detroit Gives Them Fifth Flag in Johnson's League.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Philadelphia won the pennant of the American League for this season and its fifth championship in the thirteen years' history of the organization by winning two games from Detroit here this afternoon. It was a day of triumphs for the home team, as the Detroit team was whitewashed in each contest, the scores being 4 to 0 and 1 to 0, not a fielding error marring the afternoon's work of Connie Mack's combination.

Preparations will at once be begun by Manager Mack to tune up his team for the World's Series next month. The first move toward this end will be the easing up on the Athletics' players, all of whom will be given holidays from time to time until the final series with the New York Americans here on October 2, 3 and 4. Several of the players are suffering with bruises or other injuries, and they will be given plenty of opportunity to get over their ills before starting the hard conditioning for the blue ribbon event.

Manager Mack said to-night that he would at once start to put in substitutes.

"I will give some of the veterans a holiday to-morrow", said Mr. Mack. "Each day I will fill the places of some of them with young players, until all of the men have had some holidays. By the time we reach Washington for a series, which will start next Monday, I may have in an entire team of substitutes. This will depend upon whether I think the regulars will be benefitted or otherwise by a lay-off at that time. I intend to travel to Boston and Washington with the team. The hard work of preparing for the World's Series will be done in this city in the final series with New York.

"Some of the players are badly in need of a rest, and they will now have an opportunity to take one. All of those suffering with bruises or wrenched muscles should be in good condition by next week, except Danny Murphy, whose injured shoulder has not yielded to treatment as expected."

For weeks hundreds of applications have been received by Business Manager John Shibe, of the Athletics, for tickets for the World's Series. All of these, however, have been returned to the senders. Now that the pennant is won another flood of applications is expected, but all will be turned back until the National Commission announces the arrangements for the big games.

Bush held Detroit down to eight scattered hits in the opening contest and fooled his opponents when opportunities were presented for scoring. Philadelphia scored two runs in the second inning. Baker singled and Dauss hit McInnis. Both runners moved up on Strunk's bunt and scored on the "double squeeze" play when Barry was thrown out on a bunt. The other two tallies were secured by bunching hits in the third and fifth innings.

The only run needed to decide the issue in the second game was scored in the second inning. Dubuc gave McInnis a pass. The latter was forced by Walsh, who stole second base, and tallied on Lapp's single to right field. Pennock twirled for two innings, during which Detroit got two hits and a pass. Plank pitched the last seven innings. He was in trouble in the third session, when, with two out, Crawford and Cobb each singled and Burns was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Plank then fanned Gibson. In the last six innings Detroit did not get a runner past first base.

Burns and Bush fielded their positions in sensational style. The scores:

Boston Wins at the Start.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Boston defeated St. Louis to-day, 5 to 1. Hess was strong in all except the second inning, when St. Louis got its only run. Boston scored three times in the first inning without a hit. In this inning, after two passes and an error filled the bases, Griner gave way to Trekell, who was fairly effective, but received ragged support. The score:

London Cricketers In Lead.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Opening a match with the Philadelphia Cricket Club to-day, the Incogniti Club of London scored 139 runs in its first innings. The Philadelphians scored 96 for the loss of 8 wickets, when play was stopped for the day.

G. R. R. Colman, with 52, and C. L. Tudor, 37, were the high batsmen for the visitors, while P. N. Leroy, 37, made the best stand for the home team. J. B. King, taking seven of the eleven wickets for 46 runs, had the best bowling record for the Philadelphians. Hatfield and Falcon led the English bowlers, each taking four wickets.

GIANTS' TEN-GAME LEAD.

Only Six Victories Needed to Clinch National Pennant.

With the American League race settled, and the Athletics in line for a conditioning period of two weeks before the series begins, the attention of the fans now turns to the Giants and the amount of time they will have to prime themselves for the baseball classic. The backsliding of the Phillies during the last two days at Chicago, where they dropped three out of four games, has simplified matters to such an extent that the Giants are now in a position to clinch the National League pennant about ten days before the big series begins.

At the close of yesterday's games—the Giants resting while the Phillies were getting an even break—there remained a margin of ten full games separating the Giants from the Phillies. McGraw's men have thirteen more games to play, four with Brooklyn this week, three with Boston, and six with Philadelphia next week. The Phillies have seventeen games to crowd into ten playing days—seven with Boston this week, four with Brooklyn, and six with the Giants next week.

Only three full games separate the Giants from the ownership of the National League pennant. Three victories by McGraw's men, coupled with the same number of defeats by the Phillies, will put the latter team beyond all chance of winning the pennant. Regardless of what the Phillies may do, the Giants will put themselves beyond danger by winning six of their remaining thirteen games. The Phillies could then win all their seventeen games and finish one game behind. With five victories in thirteen games for the Giants, the Phillies could only tie them by winning seventeen successive games.

The earliest possible time for the settlement of the National League race is Thursday night. This can be accomplished by the Giants winning from Brooklyn to-morrow and Thursday, while the Braves are taking two doubleheaders from the Phillies. This is a bit unlikely, but there is a strong likelihood that the Giants will take three out of four games from Brooklyn. This being the case, it will be necessary for the Phillies to take five out of seven games from Boston to prevent the National League race being mathematically over on Saturday night. On the form displayed by the teams during the last two weeks, it is probable that the Giants' claim to the title will be clinched by Saturday night, possibly one day earlier. This would allow McGraw one full week to get his players in condition for the series.

The Giants arrived in New York last night from their final tour of the West. To-day will be a day of rest and to-morrow they play one game with Brooklyn at the Polo Grounds. The last three days of the week they will be at Brooklyn for one game each day. On Monday and Tuesday of next week they will play three games at Boston and then return home for the final series of the season with the Phillies at the Polo Grounds.

OUIMET'S GOLF VICTORY.

Champion Taylor of England Says He "Had Everything to Gain," &c.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The defeat of Harry Vardon and Edward Ray by young Francis Ouimet at Brookline, Mass., is described as "humiliating" by John Henry Taylor, British open golf champion.

"Youth has no nerves," he contends. "Youngsters playing golf do not realize how difficult it is to play really well. Only when one has made a reputation and understands the dire consequence of failure is one properly thankful if one is paying well. Ouimet is a splendid golfer, endowed with splendid nerves. At the same time my impression is that he had everything to gain and nothing to lose. Vardon and Ray on the other hand knew they carried on their shoulders the golf reputation of this country. That did not make their task easier. It is much more easy to make a reputation at golf than to maintain it."

Taylor himself won his first open championship in Great Britain at the age of twenty-three.

A. Reid, British open champion in 1902, expresses the opinion that when Ouimet had some experience in championship play he began to find his nerves. George Duncan, James Sherlock, and Tom Ball hold similar views. "From my own experiences in support of them," Ball declares, "it is harder to keep on top of the ladder than to climb it."

J. H. Taylor thinks that the tie should have been played off over thirty-six holes. He says: "It is a maxim among golfers that any one can win over eighteen holes, but only the best man can win over thirty-six." Taylor is also surprised that the tie was decided in a three-ball match. In his opinion there is nothing more distracting than to have to watch two other balls, which prevents one concentrating his efforts and which was bound to detract from the skill of Ray and Vardon.

News for the Golfers.

As the result of the matches in the semi-final round for the Vice President's Cup at the Haworth Country Club, Ira Hedges and E. R. Proctor will play in the decisive test. Hedges with a handicap of 17 eliminated K. Tanaka, 15, 4 up and 2 to play, while Proctor, 28, defeated F. J. Fitzgerald, 42, 1 up.

By defeating Harry J. Sachs 12 up and 11 to play in the thirty-six-hole final round Harold A. Steiner won the championship of the Inwood Country Club. In the consolation division Herbert A. Wolff beat Clarence M. Cohen, 2 up. There will be a one-day meeting for members of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association at Inwood on Thursday, marking the start of the women's Fall season.

Play for the Veterans Cup presented by Joel S. Coffin will be in order next Saturday at the Englewood Country Club. There will be eighteen holes of medal play for members more than 45 years of age, eight becoming eligible for subsequent match play. The season at Englewood will end Nov. 8 with four-ball matches in two classes, both morning and afternoon.

Cornell Cross-Country Team Poor.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Cornell cross-country practice opened to-day with the poorest prospects since Jack Moakley took charge of the Ithaca teams. Cadiz is the only one of Cornell's point winners of last Fall to be a candidate for the team this year, and Capt. H. S. Kinsley is not expected to run at all. He is still suffering from an injury received last Fall, and, though a specialist is treating him, little hope is held out for his running this year. The hardest blow of all came to-day, when it was announced that Speiden, the two-miler, who was expected to be a big factor in cross-country work this Fall, would not run because of parental objection.

GERMAN ATHLETIC VISITORS HONORED

Imperial Commission Cordially Greeted at New York A. C. Reception.

Athletic relations between the United States and Germany were more strongly cemented last night at the New York Athletic Club through the medium of the rousing demonstration given in honor of the German Imperial Athletic Games Commission, made up of Carl Diem, Secretary of the German Olympic Committee; Lieut. von Reichenau, Dr. Martin Berner, and Joseph Waltzner, who have been in this country for more than a month studying athletic conditions here for the purpose of applying them in Germany in anticipation of the Olympic games to be held in Berlin in 1916.

This function had been preceded by a private dinner to the visitors, at which Rudolph Schaefer was the host, in lieu of the public banquet which had been planned, only to be abandoned because of the sudden death of Robert Kammerer, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee of the New York Athletic Club.

The gymnasium, in which the reception took place, was tastefully decorated with American and German national colors. A representative crowd of Winged Foot members, augmented by delegates from other athletic organizations in the metropolitan district to the number of about 500, were present.

William H. Page, President of the New York Athletic Club, presided. Speeches were made by James E. Sullivan on international athletics, by Lieut. von Reichenau on athletics in Germany, by Judge Bartow S. Weeks on national athletics, and by Carl Diem.

One of the pleasant announcements in connection with the proceedings was that which had to do with the fact that the Order of the Golden Eagle had been conferred upon James E. Sullivan, Justice Bartow S. Weeks, Matthew P. Halpin, William H. Page, and Rudolph Schaefer, by Minister von Podbrelsk, President of the German Union for Olympic Games, and by sanction of the Kaiser.

The Germans were enthusiastic about the manner in which they had been received in the many cities they had visited, and admitted having taken copious notes on the methods and systems used at the big athletic clubs as well as at the largest of the universities in the East, South, and Middle West. These findings will be incorporated in an exhaustive report containing the committee's observations and deductions which will be filed with the German Olympic Committee when the members get back to Berlin.

Secretary Diem stated that the tour could not help being of benefit and great value to the end of developing the German Olympic team for 1916. He further admitted that after seeing the perfect system which obtains in the United States, he could readily understand why American teams have won every set of Olympic games since the revival in 1896.

"It is really marvelous," said he, "and there is nothing like it at home. I hope, however, that with the help of Dr. Kraenzlein, who has been engaged as athletic director, we shall be able to undertake the work of preparing our athletes upon modern lines, and thereby produce a formidable team for 1916. We have the material, and now know how to get the best results.

"Athletics and athletic life in America have astounded us. The palatial clubhouses, perfect training equipment, athletic fields and stands, and everything in connection with the furtherment of track and field games, show a development unequaled in any country in the world."

Herr Diem finished his talk with the thanks of himself and his confreres to the officers of the Amateur Athletic Union and the athletic clubs of the various cities whose guests they had been, for the courtesies and assistance extended.

Dr. Kraenzlein will sail with the members of the commission this morning, and will, on his arrival in Germany, immediately begin the formation of a corps of German athletic trainers, who will have direct control over the various corps of club and university athletics. Kraenzlein will make no attempt to train any of the German athletes for probably a year or so.

Those who attended the dinner were: Rudolph J. Schaefer, Carl Diem, William H. Page, Hon. Edward E. McCall, Charles H. Sabin, Capt. Albert Gleave, Brooklyn Navy Yard; Gen. George W. Wingate, Paul H. Pilgrim, Dr. Bernard F. O'Connor, William C. Muschenheim, Charles H. Pond, Evart Jansen Wendell, George T. Montgomery, John Whalen, George J. Corbett, William J. Seaich, William L. Miller, Matthew P. Halpin, Rhinelander Waldo, W. C. Potter, Joseph Waitzer, James E. Sullivan, Martin Berner, Herman A. Metz, Martin S. Paine, Herman B. Scharmann, William L. Mitchell, H. O. Toussaint, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Judge Henry A. Gildersleeve, Dr. James N. West, Judge Bartow S. Weeks, Charles L. Leonori, Robert Appleton, Powhatan R. Robinson, Witherbee Black, Fred R. Fortmeyer, Hon. William Forster, Col. Jacob Ruppert, Jr., Commodore Leonard Richards, Col. Daniel Appleton, Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, and Lieut. Walter Von Reichenau.

MANHASSET CUP RACE.

Chicago Sloop Michicago Wins First Event of Series.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Michicago, the Chicago Yacht Club's Class P sloop, successfully defended the Manhasset Cup to-day in the first of three races for the trophy. Michicago, which won the cup last year on Long Island Sound, finished the sixteen miles in 2:51:38, nearly three minutes ahead of Stranger, the Rhode Island Yacht Club challenger, which finished third in 2:54:27.

South Shore, entered by the South Shore Country Club of Chicago, was second, only 22 seconds behind Michicago. Olympian, Lincoln Park Yacht Club of Chicago, and Mavourneen, Jackson Park Yacht Club of Chicago, were fourth and fifth, respectively. The race was twice over an eight-mile course, four miles out and back. The yachts will sail over a sixteen-mile triangular course to-morrow, and on Wednesday will again sail under today's conditions.

The weather to-day was heavy and all the sloops had to reef.

Ray Plays Myopia Links in 76 Par.

HAMILTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the British professional golfer, played an exhibition match at the Myopia Hunt Club to-day in a drizzle. Ray went over the 18 holes in 76, par figures. Vardon picked up his ball after holing out at the seventeenth hole, with a record of 72 up to that point.

Smith's Hard Day of Training.

Gunboat Smith yesterday put in his hardest day's work since he began training for his ten-round bout with Sam Langford at Madison Square Garden on Friday night. In the morning he spent an hour on the roads in the vicinity of his training quarters at Sheepshead Bay and in the afternoon he boxed twelve hard rounds with Al Kubiak and Billy Leitch. At the conclusion of the afternoon work-out Smith tipped the beam at 184 pounds. He will put in another strenuous session to-day and will then slow down in his work so as not to become too fine. The Californian is brimming over with confidence that he can defeat the negro, whom he saw in action recently against John Lester Johnson at one of the local clubs. Langford will finish his training at Woodlawn Inn, and he also is working like a Trojan to fit himself for this bout, as he realizes that Smith is far more dangerous than any opponent whom he has faced for the past two years. The men will weigh close to 185 pounds when they climb through the ropes Friday night.

TRAPSHOOTING ON BEACH.

Six Events to Engage Gunners in Three-Day Tourney at Long Beach.

The first annual trap shooting tournament of the Long Beach Gun Club will be held at Long Beach, L. I., Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The tournament gives every indication of being one of the best contested events ever held in the vicinity, as it is under the personal supervision of the well-known professional trap shooter, Jack Fanning. The traps will be laid out on the beach in front of the Hotel Nassau with the blue rocks flying over the water. Trophies and money prizes to the amount of $500 will be distributed among the lucky shots for the three days' competition.

There are six events arranged for each of the three days to be shot in strings of twenty-five each, making the total for the day 150 targets. On the opening day the last 100 shots will comprise the Long Beach championship, the winner of which will receive a silver cup, emblematic of the championship. On the second day the last 100 targets will be for the Hotel Nassau Cup.

The last four strings of the closing day's card will constitute the 100-bird metropolitan championship. To the winner of this event will go a silver and copper cup standing twelve inches. In addition to these will be a number of other prizes. The President's Cup will be presented to the amateur shooter making the longest straight run during the tournament. The five high amateur guns of the three days will also receive silver cups. Ladies are invited to compete in the tournament, and a cup will be given to the one making the highest score each day.

Prominent among those who will compete are Barton Lewis of Auburn, Ill., national amateur champion; William Ridley of What-Cheer, Iowa; D. F. McMahon and C. W. Billings, New York A. C.; A. W. Church and R. L. Spotts, Larchmont Yacht Club; John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster; John Fanning, the veteran trapshooter; H. H. Stevens, P. A. Davis, P. H. Keller, O. R. Bickey of Boston, W. Hammond of Wilmington, Del., and C. Von Lengerke of this city.

WEST SIDE DOUBLES TITLE.

Mathey and Pell Defeat Ewing and Frelinghausen in Straight Sets.

Dean Mathey of Princeton and Theodore R. Pell of New York are the doubles champions of the West Side Tennis Club. The pair won the title yesterday on the club courts at 238th Street and Broadway, when they defeated Dr. Ewing Taylor and F. F. Frelinghausen in three straight sets by the score of 6—4, 6—4, 6—3. While the result was anticipated by the club members, it was not expected that the defeated pair would put up the determined opposition that marked the contest.

Mathey and Pell, who are well to the fore among the ranking players, did not have the easy victory they expected, and at several stages it appeared as though Taylor and Frelinghausen would win at least one set, if not the match. The winners won through experience and superior combination work. They played excellent tennis, and although they eased up at times they stiffened when necessary and finally ended with eighteen games to twelve.

One of the most remarkable matches played this season in the Metropolitan district was witnessed in the finals of the Class B doubles division, when Grosbeck and Bishop faced Heylman and Gatcomb for the title. The rival pairs battled for more than two hours, and when darkness stopped further play the first set had not been decided, the score being 15-all. The two teams alternated in the lead throughout the thirty games played. It was decided to start the match over again to-day.

The finals in Class C doubles were also left undecided. The contestants were Miller and Satterlee and Leaske and Morris, while each pair won two sets, with the fifth 1-all. The summary:

West Side Club Doubles Championship.—Final Round—Dean Mathey and Theodore R. Pell defeated Dr. Ewing Taylor and F. F. Frelinghausen, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3.

Class C Doubles.—Final Round—Miller and Satterlee versus Leaske and Morris, 4—6, 6—0, 6—4, 5—7, 1—1, unfinished.

Class B Doubles.—Final Round—Groesbeck and Bishop versus Heylman and Gatcomb, 15—15, unfinished.

South Brooklyn Tennis League.

The finals in the South Brooklyn Tennis League between the Borough Park Tennis Club, present champions, and the New Utrecht Club, both being the winners this season in their respective sections, are to be played next Sunday afternoon on the grounds of the West End Tennis Club of Brooklyn, Seventy-second Street and New Utrecht Avenue. The West End grounds are accessible by the Fifth Avenue-West End elevated. The finals consist of three singles and two doubles. The league, made up of eight clubs, was this year divided into two sections of four clubs, each club playing a series of home and home games. The New Utrecht Club won in the section composed of the West End, Linden Heights, Woodlawn, and New Utrecht Clubs, while the Borough Park team won in the section made up of the Dyker Heights, Bay Ridge, Lefferts Park, and Borough Park Clubs.

Phil Cross in Atlantic Garden Ring.

Phil Cross of this city and Johnny (Kid) Alberts of Elizabeth, N. J., rival claimants for welterweight honors, will come together in the feature bout of to-night's show at the Atlantic Garden A. C. on the Bowery. Two years ago Cross stopped Alberts in three rounds, and the latter has been trying since that time to get a return match. In the meantime both boys have forged to the front ranks of the welterweight division. In the ten-round semi-final Frank McGuinness and Battling Levinsky, heavyweights, will do the honors.

Sailors' Basket Ball Tournament.

The Navy Y. M. C. A. was crowded with United States bluejackets last night to see the opening basket ball games in the tournament which is to decide the championship of the first division fleet. In last night's games the team from the Wyoming defeated the Florida five by a score of 52 to 8 and the quintet from the Utah beat the jack tars from the Delaware by a score of 29 to 16. The Wyoming team showed much speed and good team work. The line-ups:

LEATA J. WINS HOTEL HARTMAN STAKE

Frank Bogash, Jr., the Favorite, Outfooted in Four of Five Heats at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Leata J., a California mare, was second choice to Frank Bogash, Jr., in the Hotel Hartman pacing stake race that held the place of prominence on the programme for the opening day of the Columbus Grand Circuit racing, but she won in a five-heat struggle, in which the sprinting through the stretch was a feature.

Several times this season these two pacers have met, and to-day victory is the third for Leata J. In the second heat she did the final quarter in 29½ seconds, and completed the next mile with a quarter in 28¼ seconds. Winning this heat gave her an advantage over Frank Bogash, Jr. They did not have rush enough to overtake Delrey in the fourth heat, but were fresher in the fifth, which Leata J. took, staving off her rival by a sensational burst of speed. She was credited with pacing the last half 1:00¾.

Cleo B. was almost overlooked in a field of thirteen 2:15 pacers, of which Princess Margaret was thought to be the best. The first two miles were won handily by Cleo B. The third heat went to Zanzibar, and then the race went over to to-morrow. Summaries:

TIGERS IN A SCRIMMAGE.

Lamberton of Last Year's Freshmen Team Tried Out at Right End.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 22.—Keene Fitzpatrick gave the Tigers light football work this afternoon. The backs practiced catching punts, while the linemen were drilled in blocking. Several rounds at the tackle dummy were followed by a twenty-minute scrimmage.

Lamberton, a promising end of last year's freshman eleven, reported today and was tried out at right end in the 'Varsity blocking practice. Sieffield, a 1902 player, took the linemen and some of the back-field men in charge. The team ran through a few plays, and he gave each man individual coaching in blocking.

To aid in training some of the men he played Phillips, the veteran tackle of two years on the scrubs, and played two men against him. In the short scrimmage the 'Varsity scored in five minutes. Receiving the kick-off, the first team carried the ball down the field and shoved it over the line without great difficulty. Following the second kick, Law punted to Doolittle, who fumbled, and Law recovered his own punt. The 'Varsity then carried the pigskin to the 20-yard line, from where Law booted it over the crossbar.

HARVARD SQUAD REDUCED.

Coach Haughton Retains Only 38 Men for 'Varsity Eleven.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 22.—Coach Percy D. Haughton made the first cut of the season in Harvard's football squad of seventy-eight men today, when he retained only thirty-eight for the 'varsity.

Seven complete elevens were in action within and about the stadium in the light drill of this afternoon. Of these three were "first string" combinations called teams A, B and C. They included all of the regulars and leading substitutes remaining over from last season's championship eleven, and last year's freshmen team.

Tudor Gardiner, the star guard of the 1911 Crimson eleven, took up active football work to-day for the first time since he was hurt in the Princeton game of that year, being turned out at end on team A.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 22.—Point Judith Sandpipers pulled out a victory over Rumson this afternoon at the Essex County Polo Club in the last half minute of play, when Capt. Giants or Athletics?

Last year it was Giants vs. Redsox, and HUGH S. FULLERTON, the most famous baseball writer in the country, told the readers of The Times in advance why the winners were going to win. While his articles were running in The Times they were as warmly discussed as the Presidential campaign.

This year FULLERTON will do it again. The first of his series of articles analyzing the merits of the players and indicating the probable winner of the championship will appear next Friday, Sept. 26. There will be an article every day until play begins, and then FULLERTON will report the games for The Times.

This much may be said now: He thinks the Giants are better than they were last year.

Order The Times for Next Friday and Every Day Thereafter.

GOOD ROADS MEN FEEL LOSS OF PAGE

Ambassador to Italy Was Active in the Work—News of Motordom.

Appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy will interrupt his energetic work in behalf of good roads. For several years Mr. Page has been Chairman of the Membership Committee of the American Highway Association, and has brought nearly 2,000 members into that association. Filling the vacancy caused by his absence abroad will be one of the tasks before the body at its coming meeting at the American Road Congress, which opens in Detroit on Monday. At that time an election will be held to fill the offices of President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, eight Directors, and Chairmen of committees.

The present officers of the association are: Logan Waller Page, Director, United States Office of Public Roads, President; W. W. Finley, Vice President; J. E. Pennybacker, Secretary; Lee McClung, Treasurer; James S. Harlan of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Chairman of the Board of Directors, and Charles P. Light, Field Secretary. Mr. McClung, who was elected Treasurer while he held the office of Treasurer of the United States, is just completing a trip around the world, and has so timed his return as to be present at the opening of the Road Congress. Much emphasis is to be laid during the congress on the importance of Federal aid in road building, and the Secretary of Agriculture, in his opening address, is expected to outline his views of the methods in which it can best be rendered.

Motorists who use the ferry to cross Long Island Sound between New Rochelle and Glen Cove are delighted with the completion of the Boston Post Road improvements. The final stretch through Mamaroneck has been finished, so that, except for a short bit of macadam through Larchmont, there is now a new asphalt surface from New Rochelle through Rye and Port Chester to the Greenwich line, from which point other excellent surfaces make good going through Stamford, Norwalk, Bridgeport, and New Haven. The shore road connecting the Pelham Parkway with the Boston Post Road has also been newly asphalted. The road signs of the State Highway Department on the new Post Road, which are placed on concrete uprights, are unusually legible and add to the attractiveness of the route.

There was much talk along "Automobile Row" yesterday concerning new models. The new Packard "38s" are soon to be shipped here. The model is equipped with worm bevel driving gears, an entirely new mechanical feature. It will be made in two chassis types, "Touring" and "Phaeton," and in nineteen body styles. Cylinders are cast in blocks of three, and there is a separate exhaust system for each unit. The wheel base is 140 inches. In a new delivery wagon model announced by the Autocar the chief modification is the rear axle. The gears may now be removed without taking off the axle housing. A direct driven pump and a fan behind the radiator have also been added, while the clutch mechanism has been simplified. The Franklin has concentrated on one model to succeed the light six. It weighs 2,700 pounds, with a wheel base of 120 and a tread of 56 inches. The valves of the air-cooled motor are of the compensating type, and each cylinder is an independent unit. The first consignment of 1914 Hupmobiles is on the row. They show only minor mechanical changes, chief of which is the long-stroke motor. Full flush doors and a concealed electric horn have been adopted. Four models are shown. A newcomer to Broadway is the S. & M. six-cylinder of forty-eight horse power. It is an underslung car, weighing 3,200 pounds, and is shown in four body designs.

PEOPLE'S GAS TAKES JUMP.

Heavy Trading Gives Rise to Reports of Melon Cutting.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The heavy trading and swift upward movement in prices of People's Gaslight and Coke Company shares both in New York and on the local Stock Exchange to-day gave rise to further reports of melon cutting, and that Directors' action in the matter is near at hand. Rumors of a merger with the Commonwealth Edison Company were also reiterated.

From a usually well-informed source it was learned to-night that the Gas Company's Directors will make a formal announcement of some sort on Wednesday.

There is nothing to add to the expectations of La Salle Street in relation to the People's Gas melon. Without definite knowledge most persons believe part of the $13,000,000 surplus will be distributed in new stock, an amount of new stock sold at par and the dividend rate increased from 7 to an 8 per cent. basis.

Rumors of a merger of People's Gas and Commonwealth Edison were strengthened to some extent by the departure of President Samuel Insull of the latter corporation for New York.

For many years it has been reported at regular intervals that the two lighting companies would be put together, but nothing ever came of any of these rumors. Leading interests of both companies have conceded the logic of such a transaction, and have admitted that some day might see the plan an accomplished fact. Some of the knowing outside interests argue that the passage of the law at the last session of the State Legislature creating a State Public Utilities Commission, to assume power next January, may hasten the plan.

ALABAMA WINS RATE FIGHT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Justice Lamar of the Supreme Court to-night refused to issue a restraining order to prevent the enforcement of the two-and-one-half-cent passenger fare order issued by the Alabama Railroad Commission. Attorneys for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad sought to have the order held up until the Supreme Court had passed upon its validity.

The order has been in force since Aug. 12, the Judges of the District Court in Alabama declining to issue a restraining order pending an appeal to the Supreme Court.

W. A. Colston and S. J. Bowie, for the railroad, contended the company was entitled to a restraining order provided it issued refund checks to passengers, to be good in case the Supreme Court eventually affirmed a decision of the Alabama Federal Court. Attorney General Brickell of Alabama and S. D. Weakley argued that the Justice had no authority to grant the order.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has been notified by its chief examiner that he has completed promotion examinations for assistant engineer, Grade C, in the Board of Water Supply, office of the President of Richmond Borough, and Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, and for fifth-grade examiner in the Finance Department.

The commission has approved the following:

Report of Mr. Fuld recommending that the disqualification appearing against the name of Henry S. Van Gaasbeck of 280 Clinton Avenue, Kingston, N. Y., on the list of junior architectural draughtsman be removed.

Report of Mr. Fuld relative to the letter of Martin H. Oakwood, a candidate in the examination for Assistant Inspector of Combustibles, who complains that his disqualification on the date of the mental examination was the fault of a monitor, who directed him to erase a title which he had signed to his report. Mr. Fuld recommends that Monitor Borowsky, who took up the candidate's papers, be asked to submit a report.

Letter from Mr. Fuld transmitting report of Mr. Cavo on his investigation of the experience papers of two candidates who have recently been appointed from the list of Engineer Inspector-Civil. He recommends that no further action be taken in the case of James R. Hayden.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination at the New York Custom House for teacher of metal working and mechanical drawing, for men only, on Oct. 8, to fill a vacancy at $720 a year and quarters, in the Indian Service, Haskell School, Kansas, and vacancies as they may occur in places requiring similar qualifications. As the commission has experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining a sufficient number of eligibles, qualified persons are urged to enter this examination. Competitors will be examined in arithmetic and computations, drawing and shading, drawing from sketch, training and experience in metal working, and fitness.

It is desired to obtain a person qualified to take charge of a class in forging. The appointee should have a thorough knowledge of general blacksmithing. He should also be familiar with the elements of general machine work, and must understand mechanical drawing in machine work. Applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their fiftieth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

EDUCATION NOTES.

City.

City Supt. Maxwell has informed the Board of Education that John B. Shufeldt, Jr., 10 Minerva Place, the Bronx, has received a temporary license as teacher of printing in a school for the deaf.

Temporary licenses to act as assistant teacher in a training school for teachers have been granted Mary G. Crohan, 2,465 Broadway, and Mignon Levin of Baltimore, Md. Miss Crohan's subject will be English and Miss Levin's will be psychology.

The New York Public School Kindergarten Association will meet at 4 P. M. to-morrow in the chapel of the Normal College, Park Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street.

A resident of Corona, L. I., wrote to President Churchill of the Board of Education asking whether it is mandatory for a public school teacher to instruct his or her pupils in morals as well as knowledge. In his reply President Churchill said:

"There is no specific time set apart in the curriculum for the instruction of morals. It would seem to me inadvisable to hedge so important a part of education in as if it were something separate and distinct from the truth revealed in the quest for knowledge. To my thinking, education without morals is dross. If the schools do nothing beyond the brightening of the wits of scamps, the schools had better not be.

"I am of the belief that morning, noon, and night, when the schools are in session, the teachers, by precept and example, as well as by communicating the truths inherent in the subjects taught, are teaching morals in the minds and souls of all pupils. I should have little regard for the teacher who did not deem that to be the highest function of a teacher.

"You will understand that I am not talking about religion. While we must recognize morals, we are not allowed to propagate the tenets of any creed."

The Tome School

WITH its endowment of over two and a half million dollars, it can limit its enrollment to boys of high character. It has a faculty of unusual strength and size. It has created an unique type of school life. It can give much individual attention through its special tutors. Its graduates take high honors in the leading colleges and technical schools. Each boy has his own room.

It has the most beautiful school buildings and grounds in America.

It has one hundred and seventy-five acres, on which are a nine-hole golf course, five athletic fields, swimming pool, quarter-mile cinder track, tennis courts and batting cage.

Its tuition of $700 would have to be fifty per cent. greater were it not for its endowment.

The LOWER SCHOOL FOR LITTLE BOYS offers all the advantages of the Upper Forms, with the special benefit of a separate dormitory and a separate organization.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Improve in Short Session—Currency Bill Becoming More of Market Factor.

Prices became firmer after a dull and irregular opening of yesterday's shortened session on the Stock Exchange. The forward movement was sufficiently general to add a substantial fraction to the general level of quotations. Closed until noon on account of the funeral of Mayor Gaynor, the Stock Exchange had expected a more or less perfunctory trading, and this expectation was borne out, so far, at least, as the volume of transactions was concerned. The price movement was more decided than had been generally expected. Reading and Union Pacific, among the leading issues, and People's Gas, among those usually less prominent in the trading, led the way in the advance and showed net gains quite beyond the average improvement. All three were buoyed up by expectations of distributions or like developments, although in the case of only two of these stocks, Union Pacific and People's Gas, have reports suggested developments of this kind in the near future.

The possibility of a Union Pacific distribution has been the outstanding feature of recent market expectations. It does not appear that the company's plans have yet been worked out, but it is possible, so Wall Street heard yesterday, that they will crystallize into more definite shape within the next forty-eight hours. It was not thought, however, that formal action on the matter was likely to be taken as soon as that. The reports which the financial community has been hearing regarding the People's Gas Company have had to do with a probable increase in its dividend rate and with other changes in the status of the company. Again yesterday the Rock Island issues furnished a contrast to the movement of prices as a whole. The preferred stock of the holding company was weak, the railroad collateral 4s sold within a fraction of 50, and the refunding 4 per cent. bonds of the old railway company declined to 74. This was a new low price for the last-named bond, although the other issues were still above the lowest point touched during the general market decline of last June. Liquidation and bear pressure were spoken of in banking circles as explaining the recrudescence of declines in these issues which several times before have been conspicuously weak. The adverse rumor which has circulated regarding the company, however unfounded it may be, must necessarily be counted as one of the factors in the present market position of these securities. That rumor was again pronounced to be without any foundation.

Talk continued yesterday of the possibility of gold imports, although it would seem that engagements this week, in view of the present position of the European markets and of the prevailing rate of exchange, would be in the nature of a forced movement, which it would be desirable to avoid. Discount rates in several of the European markets hardened further yesterday, as was not unnatural in view of the near approach of the quarterly settlements. Money market sentiment here was helped by the favorable showing made in Saturday's bank statement, and by the knowledge that further substantial additions would soon be made to the special deposits which the Treasury has made with the banks in the interior. A little more of this money has found its way to New York, but the real help which the money market here is deriving from these Treasury deposits comes from the fact that they are meeting requirements which otherwise would have to be provided for, at least in large part, by the New York banks.

Predictions are coming from Washington that the Currency bill will be reported to the Senate a week hence, albeit these predictions do not seem to be supported by the information which comes to hand regarding the attitude of the individual members of the Senate Currency Committee toward the bill which was passed last week by the House. Naturally enough, however, these predictions are causing more attention to be given to the prospect of currency legislation as a factor in the stock market. It is being noted that sponsors for the bill, official and unofficial, are laying stress upon the expansion which the establishment of the proposed currency system would make possible. There is much talk, for instance, of the banks joining the system being able to borrow from the Federal reserve banks two-thirds of the amount of the reserve which they will be required to keep with those central institutions. The ability to borrow or to rediscount to that extent would depend upon the reserve which the Federal reserve banks would feel called upon from time to time to maintain. It certainly ought not to be assumed that they will under any and all conditions maintain no greater reserve than the minimum required by the proposed act. It is not surprising under the circumstances that the stock market should be coming more and more to the point of agreeing with the Chairman of the Senate Committee that the proposed new banking and currency scheme would open the way to great expansion.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Brokers Late to Business.

The extent of business on the Stock Exchange yesterday was about what had been looked for, although the activity of a few issues gave to the market at times the appearance of being much more lively that it really was. The crowded condition of Broadway while the funeral of Mayor Gaynor was in progress prevented many brokers from getting to their places on the board until after the market opened. In consequence, the first half hour was the dullest part of the short session. At the opening the coal road stocks started off with a fair degree of firmness, but in other directions the list was inclined to sag. Union Pacific, Steel, and Amalgamated Copper declined under slow selling, and several of the others which have been ranked with the leaders lately did not show signs of life for some time. The attention of the Street was diverted from the favorite speculative issues to People's Gas and Rock Island preferred; to the former because of its exceptional strength, and to the latter because of a renewal of the weakness which was a feature of last Saturday's business. The pressure against Rock Island helped to make the closing hour the busiest of the day.

High Speed on Railroads.

Commenting on dispatches from Washington to the effect that the Interstate Commerce Commission is likely to seek the right from Congress to regulate the speed of trains, railroad officials said yesterday that an order to reduce speed would not be objected to by the carriers if generally applied. Fast service for the transportation of passengers, and of freight which was not in the perishable class, they contended, was the product of competition alone. It means greater wear and tear on equipment and a much more complicated operating organization than would be necessary if the time pressure were lessened. The railroad men assumed that the purpose of such a departure was to protect travelers, and that it would not be likely to extend far into the freight line schedule. As many fast passenger trains were run at small profit, if any, they observed, the roads would be able under reduced speed schedules to effect economies of operation not now possible.

Suspense in the Oil Fields.

The gist of news from the California oil fields would seem to show that owners of oil lands are living in a state of pleasant suspense. The Royal Dutch-Shell interests are seeking to increase their holdings on the American continent, and their representatives are reported to be examining minutely the whole stretch of California's oil-bearing sands, the unproved no less than the proved properties. Since the presence of water in many wells has been demonstrated as a serious handicap to economical production in some regions, it is no more than natural that owners and lessees should welcome the hope of handing over the work to a powerful company at a profit to themselves. Hence they appear to be living from day to day in expectation of a deal which will net them a substantial return.

August Copper Output.

Records of production of the leading copper companies show that there was a general falling off in the August output, as compared with the same month of last year. Practical cessation of labor in the Lake Superior territory contributed largely toward a decline of nearly 17,900,000 pounds. Production amounted to 81,700,000 pounds, in contrast with 99,540,000, the list comprising twenty-six of the more prominent producers. The porphyry properties, including Chino, Utah, Ray Consolidated, Nevada Consolidated, and Miami, were able to show an aggregate increase of about 2,000,000 pounds, and the various mines of the Phelps-Dodge Company reported an even larger increase, but the others fell behind. Calumet & Hecla, affected by the strike, failed to equal the 1912 August record by 5,500,000 pounds, Anaconda by 2,250,000, Arizona Copper by 1,450,000, and Copper Range by 3,000,000 pounds.

Eyes on Union Pacific Meeting.

The Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad holds its weekly meeting to-day, and there is likely to be considerable unrest among traders in stocks until they learn what the committee has done. The deliberations of this body lately have become of deep significance to the Street. In the hands of the Directors composing it lies the power, the Street believes, to decide whether there will be a melon-cutting or not. The size of the melon, if one should be selected for slicing, and its form, may call for the sanction of all the Directors; but the speculative community is not so much concerned with these details as with the action to make them possible. It has been promised that when the Executive Committee takes action that fact quickly will be made known. The eyes of the Street, therefore, will be on the meeting to-day.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2@3 per cent., with the last loan at 2 per cent. The renewal rate was 3 per cent.

British American Tobacco Most Active Issue, but Fluctuates Narrowly.

Business on the Curb yesterday was in small volume owing to the suspension of business during the morning out of respect to the late Mayor Gaynor. British-American Tobacco was the most active issue, but its fluctuations were within narrow limits.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Prices Improve in London, but Are Easy in Paris—Trading Quiet in Berlin.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 23.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"Owing to the approach of the end of the month money was somewhat scarcer yesterday, and there was rather more demand. Three per cent. was charged for fixtures maturing on Oct. 1.

"Discount rates were firm and a shade higher for three months' bills.

"Twenty thousand pounds was withdrawn from the Bank of England for shipment to Egypt.

"On the Stock Exchange the settlement of the Liverpool railway dispute brought about an advance in home railway stocks, and that market remained firm throughout. Apart from this, there was very little of interest in the markets. Business was quiet in view of the settlement, which begins to-day.

"A further recovery occurred in rubber shares, the price of the raw material being rather higher.

"The fact that Wall Street did not open until late restricted dealings in American shares, and prices moved within narrow limits all day.

"Foreign bonds were dull.

"There was some profit-taking in the principal copper shares."

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Prices were easy on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes 89 francs 25 centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Trading was quiet on the Boerse to-day.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Reading touched a high price on the Consolidated Stock Exchange of 170⅝, which was a fraction above its high attained on the New York Stock Exchaige. The advance in Reading was one of the features of the short trading day. For a time after the opening at noon it was evident that the Gaynor funeral services were exerting a sentimental effect and tending to contract dealings. As the afternoon progressed, however, activity increased. In contrast to the advance in Reading renewed weakness developed in the Rock Island issues. Their decline late in the day tended to somewhat unsettle the general market, which sold off from the best.

Arrogance

"I knew a man," once remarked a banker, "who imagined he knew all the ins and outs of finance. As a matter of fact, he had no time from his business to study conditions. He was a speculator, practically a gambler. I have often wondered of what real value such a man is to a community."

The man who invests at hazard speculates. An investor who purchases securities should do so along established lines and consult with a banker before investing.

We seek to know people with whom we can work in this manner.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Wheat and oats sold off yesterday and corn advanced toward the close after fluctuating rather widely. Wheat lost from ⅜c. to ⅞c. a bushel as the result of extensive offerings. Corn gained from ⅛c. to ¼c. and oats declined as much. Cotton attained new high records in early trading, but ended the day with small losses. Provisions and cotton oil were irregular.

WHEAT.

The few occasions during the day when wheat showed any steadiness were almost entirely due to strength in the corn market. Most of the session the trend was downward, the weight of the movement falling heavily on sentiment so that offerings were liberal throughout most of the day, and prices broke down a cent a bushel from the highest point, and closed ⅝@⅞c under Saturday's figures. New York did not open until noon on account of the funeral of the late Mayor Gaynor, but it developed sympathetic weakness with the West, and closed practically at the bottom for the day.

Receipts at the three big Spring wheat points, including Winnipeg, amounted to 4,769 cars, compared with 2,374 cars a year ago. Another influence contributing to the weakness of the market was the Broomhall total of world's shipments, making the amount 13,792,000 bushels, against 13,328,000 bushels the previous week, the figures including 7,080,000 bushels from Russia and the Danube. Cables reflected this big movement by declining ⅝@¾d at Liverpool, ⅝@⅞c at Berlin, and partly 1c at Antwerp. In the local market No. 2 red was quoted at 96c, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, and 97½c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 96½c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.

Throughout the day corn was relatively steadier than wheat, being only ⅛c to ¼c below Saturday at its weakest point, while at one time the list was ⅜c to ⅝c net higher. The market experienced a moderate setback after midday, which was followed by a little steadier feeling near the close, and last prices were ⅛c to ¼c net higher. Commission house support was not so active as heretofore, and the market seemed to respond less freely to bullish news, giving the impression in some quarters that the strong features had been discounted. World's shipments were 1,600,000 bushels under last week, while the visible supply increased 1,113,000 bushels. Liverpool was ⅝d lower and export corn in the local market was quoted at 82½c, nominal, free on board, afloat.

OATS.

Early in the day the market was steady and at one time ¼c to ⅜c net higher, but under pressure in the afternoon prices worked off a little and closed ⅛c to ¼c net lower. Commission houses were good sellers on the advance and on the visible supply increase of 2,494,000 bushels. In the local market standard white oats were quoted at 48@48½c; No. 2 white, 48¼@49c; No. 3 white, 47@47½c; No. 4, white, 46½@47c; ordinary clipped white, 46½@48c; fancy clipped white, 49@49½c, all elevator.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The early market for oil was active and firmer, in line with higher crude markets, and the strength in cotton and lard, but a return of liquidation in the near positions and a lack of outside support for late months caused afternoon reactions, and the market closed irregular, with September 5 points lower, October unchanged, and later months 1 to 6 points net higher. COTTON.

The cotton market made new high records for the season at the opening yesterday but soon became nervous and unsettled, with prices easing off sharply under heavy general realizing and confusing reports from Washington as to the prospects for cotton futures legislation. Both the Liverpool and New Orleans markets had shown pronounced strength during the morning, while there were many bullish private crop reports, and the weather news was considered unfavorable, as the light frost reported in parts of the Eastern belt and the unseasonable low temperatures west of the river increased apprehension of a short growing season. These features accounted for an opening advance of 11 to 15 points here and December contracts sold at 13.52 on the call, or more than $2 per bale above the low level of last Friday. Active months broke about 25 to 30 points from the early high level during the middle of the afternoon, selling some 12 to 14 points net lower, but there was a rally of 3 or 4 points later in the day on covering, with the close steady at a net loss of 7 to 11 points.

Liverpool attributed the strength there to bad weather and crop reports and the continued lack of any important Southern hedge selling. Reports from the domestic dry goods trade continued favorable, and while Manchester is complaining of slackening trade, British weavers are said to have sold ahead from nine to twelve months.

The day's range of prices was as follows:

PROVISIONS.

Firmness in the hog market caused an early advance in provisions, and the market during the forenoon was up from 8 to 20 points above the close of Saturday. Heavy unloading at the advance, however, in connection with later weakness in grain, caused a setback which left final prices at about lowest of the day. Western arrivals were 70,000 hogs, of which 52,000 were at Chicago, 6,000 at Kansas City, and 3,500 at Omaha. Chicago expected 14,000 hogs on Tuesday.

COFFEE.

After a somewhat irregular opening the market turned firmer on a further advance in the cost and freight market, smaller Brazilian receipts, and less favorable reports from the coming crop. Closing prices were firm at top, from 4 to 10 points net higher, with active months selling into new ground for the movement, or about 73 to 75 points amove the low level of Sept. 12. Despite the short session sales were reported of 91,500 bags.

The initial tone was steady at an advance of 1 point on December, while other deliveries were unchanged to 5 points lower. Cost and freight offers from Brazil were 5 to 85 points higher. Havre closed unchanged at ¼ franc lower, and Hamburg was ¼ to ¾ pfening higher after having opened at midday at 1 pfennig. Milreis prices in Santos were 100 to 200 reis higher. Fine weather was reported in three districts of Sao Paulo, with cloudy conditions in the other two.

Spot coffee steady; 9½ for Rio 7 and 12¼ for Santos 4.

Total warehouse deliveries in the United States last week were 107,669 bags, against 125,524 the previous week and 179,295 last year; of the former amount New York had 79,294 bags.

Receipts at Rio and Santos last week were 472,000 bags, against 556,000 last week, 464,000 last year, and 593,000 two years ago.

PLANS BLANKET MORTGAGE.

Southern Railway Preparing to Follow Example of Hill Lines.

The Southern Railway Company is considering a comprehensive plan for handling its financing in the future, and is expected to authorize a large blanket mortgage covering its present bonded obligations. The Great Northern and Burlington systems have adopted the blanket mortgage plan, and St. Paul is preparing to do so. Bankers affiliated with the Southern Railway Company said yesterday that steps were being taken to simplify the raising of funds and the retirement of maturing issues. They added that sufficient progress had not yet been made to admit of announcement of the plan, and that it would probably be some months before the details could be worked out.

The Southern Railway will need much money to carry out the present plan of the management to fully double-track its line, but the demand is not pressing and the new system of financing is not expected in financial quarters to be placed in effect for some time. The new mortgage, it is believed, will be great enough to care for the requirements of the road and its controlled lines for many years. The bonds to be issued will, in the belief of those familiar with the company, not have a stipulated interest rate, so that they may be disposed of at any time on a basis that will meet conditions in the investment market.

The company at the close of the fiscal year of 1912 had a total mortgage and secured indebtedness of $264,764,400. To this amount $5,000,000 in bonds has been added since the first of the year. Earnings of the Southern have grown substantially in recent years, the aggregate receipts of the road for the fiscal period ended on June 30 last being $58,500,000, or about $5,000,000 ahead of 1912. Net income after taxes was $17,855,000, a gain of $350,000 for the year. Last year the company paid 5 per cent. on its preferred shares and had left the equivalent of 3.13 per cent. for the $120,000,000 common stock, as compared with 0.49 per cent. in 1909.

A. W. Shaw Corporation Dissolved.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 22.—The dissolution of the A. W. Shaw Corporation, formerly a large shoe manufacturing concern at Freeport, whose President, Arthur W. Shaw, is serving a sentence in Massachusetts for defalcation, was ordered by the Supreme Court to-day. The receiver also was relieved. He had disbursed $272,905 to creditors holding claims to a total of $325,000.

DESIGN PROTECTION TOO FAR-REACHING

Bill to Satisfy Foreigners at San Francisco Fair Said to be Faulty.

MAY HURT U. S. PRODUCERS

Would Prevent Use of Designs Which May Have Been Originated in This Country.

Considerable opposition is being expressed among trade journalists against the Kahn bill, recently introduced in the House and providing for free importation of articles intended for display at exhibitions. The main object of the bill, the trade press contends, is to afford a means of protection for the designs of the foreign manufacturers who may exhibit their goods here at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Its introduction followed the refusal of manufacturers in several foreign countries to accept invitations to exhibit their wares on the ground that there was no legal protection in this country against the piracy of their best ideas and designs.

One of the main provisions of the bill enjoins any American manufacturer from reproducing a foreign design exhibited at the coming fair. For this purpose the bill asks that an American certificate of registration be given to all designs of goods to be exhibited that have a certificate of registry from any foreign country, or that have been trade-marked or copyrighted abroad. This, the opponents of the bill contend, affords the foreign manufacturer a protection that is not given to any American producer and opens the way to considerable complication and future litigation.

According to one who has made a close study of the provisions of the bill and the probable effects of its passage in its present form, its injustice lies in the fact that in many of the foreign countries there is little or no investigation into the rights of the manufacturer to register a design as original until litigation for alleged infringement makes investigation imperative. In some countries of Europe, it is said, there are provisions for "parcel" registration. That is, a manufacturer sends in from fifty to a hundred designs, done up in a bundle and properly numbered, for registration, and receives his certificates without serious investigation on the part of the authorities. In many cases it is said that foreign registration is valuable only as a record of the date on which a certain design was produced.

It is further contended that the Kahn bill does not specify that the designs registered abroad shall be original, but says that any design with a foreign certificate may be protected. It is said to be only fair to suppose that some of the foreign merchandise exhibited and registered here will show designs that have been in use here for some time, and which may have already been adopted by the American manufacturer. Under the provisions of the Kahn bill, it is maintained, the American manufacturer would be forced to give up the manufacture of goods containing these designs, even though they had been in use here for some time. It further opens the way for the American manufacturer to be enjoined from making goods which he may have designed himself, simply because the design has been appropriated by some foreign manufacturer in a similar line and registered abroad.

So serious is the bill regarded by the trade press that President Swetland of the Federation of Trade Press Associations of the United States, which met in this city last week, on Saturday afternoon appointed a committee to draw up and file a protest against it as unjust to the interests of any American manufacturers and importers. This committee is made up of C. R. Clifford of the Clifford & Lawton publications, John Clyde Oswald of The American Printer and E. R. Shaw of The Practical Engineer, Chicago.

The federation also took direct action on the suggestion of Mr. Clifford, made at the Saturday morning session of the trade press associations that a convention be called for the discussion of plans for legislation that will prevent design piracy in this country. A resolution was passed providing for the appointing of a committee to make arrangements for such a convention. Publications representing seventy-five different trades and industries, ranging from laces to automobiles, are taking an active interest in the matter.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Spring Dress Goods Prices Named.

Prices on dress goods for the Spring, 1914, season were named yesterday by the Pacific Mills through their local selling agents, Lawrence & Co. The figures were made on a basis of free wool, and showed reductions from last year's opening quotations ranging from 10 to 17½ per cent. Prices on several of the leading lines, together with comparative prices for last year, follow: Line C. S. G., 35-inch cotton warp serge, 23⅛ cents net, against 28½ cents net; line C. W., 35-inch cotton warp whipcord, 24 cents net, against 31½ cents regular; line B. C. L., 36-inch plain lustre, 19 cents net, against 22½ cents net; line P. G., 50-inch all wool serge, 51¼ cents net, against 62½ cents regular; line B. A., 35-inch all wool batiste, 28½ cents net, against 33½ cents net; line S. C. L., 50-inch Sicilian, 28½ cents, against 34½ cents net; line J. B., cotton warp brocade, 26½ cents net, against 31 cents net and line V. S. L., 54-inch all wool serge, 52½ cents net, against 62½ cents net. These prices applied only to plain colors.

Tariff Worries Linen Importers.

The possibility of an advance in duties on certain kinds of linens from the present rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem to the 35 per cent. tax proposed in the Underwood-Simmons bill is causing considerable uneasiness among importers of those goods. According to a trade authority the linens on which it is proposed to raise the duty consist chiefly of brown and colored dress linens of the cheaper grades, fabrics that are widely purchased by the poorer classes. It is contended by the importers that an increase of 5 per cent. in the entry tax on these goods would cause an advance in prices that would put them out of reach of a great many of the people for whom they are more or less especially made. None of the importers seemed to know yesterday just where they stood in the matter of tariff, recent inquiries at Washington having failed to reveal the attitude of the Senate and House conferees on points disputed by the importers. A significant point made by one well-informed importer was that while linen shirts, cuffs, and similar articles will be admitted at 30 per cent. ad valorem under the new bill, the American manufacturer of these goods will have to pay 35 per cent. on his raw materials if the present scheme of the tariff makers is put through. This, the importer contends, places a direct tax of 5 per cent. on the American manufacturer.

Less Baggage for Shirt Salesmen.

One of the large shirt manufacturing concerns has introduced an innovation which, if satisfactory, is expected to bring about a material saving in the excess baggage charges of its salesmen. These salesmen are now on the road provided with swatches of shirting materials, folded and stitched about the width of a shirt, instead of carrying a large number of made-up shirts as has formerly been the custom. Only one or two shirts of each model are now carried. A representative of the firm said yesterday that the plan made it possible to show a wider variety of shirt models and fabrics, and that only one trunk was needed by a salesman where two and three were formerly used.

Low-Grade Sweaters Scarce.

Sweater manufacturers report a scarcity of Fall merchandise. This condition has been attributed in some quarters to labor difficulties during the last year, but a prominent selling agent said yesterday that the mills would have been unable to meet the demand even though normal conditions had prevailed. There is a marked shortage of sweater coats designed to retail at $1 or less, owing to their increased use among laboring men whose occupations keep them out of doors during cold weather. It is said on good authority that the demand for such sweaters has more than doubled during the last three years. Among better grade sweaters the Shaker stitch effects with shawl collars are preferred. Maroon is the color most in demand, with Oxford and navy in second and third place. Fleeced effects are popular for women's wear, and among these is shown a long coat for motoring, which has a hat, muff, girdle and muffler to match.

Canton Crepe in Demand.

Canton crepe, a fabric composed of silk and cotton, is enjoying increased popularity for the Fall season. This material, shown in mahogany, terra cotta, navy and Copenhagen blue, Russian green, black and other dark colors, is used mostly for street and afternoon costumes, although it is adapted also to evening dress. The fabric is imported and retails from $1.50 to $2 a yard, which, according to a wholesaler, affords the consumer a saving of about $2.50 in the cost of a dress, as compared with crepe de chine. Canton crepe was being used to some extent in place of crepe de chine, owing to the scarcity of the latter material.

ATTACK 'TELEPHONE TRUST'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Complainants against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, who are urging Attorney General McReynolds to investigate the so-called "Bell Telephone Trust" continue to flood the department of justice with letters. To emphasize the significance of protests from independent telephone interests, one writer points out that there 20,000 independent telephone companies in the United States, with an aggregate capital of $300,000,000, and almost as many subscribers as their big rival.

The Attorney General has not decided whether to await the end of the Interstate Commerce Commission telephone inquiry or begin an independent investigation.

MISCELLANEOUS MARKETS.

BEEF.—Western beef cuts showed no wholesale price changes yesterday.

SUGAR.—The inquiry for refined sugar was small yesterday, and prices showed no change. The raw sugar market was steady and unchanged, while the London beet sugar market was quiet, with prices barely maintained.

MOLASSES AND SYRUPS.—The molasses market was firm and under a fair demand. A moderate business was done in syrups, at unchanged prices.

RICE.—The rice market was firm in sympathy with the South, where recent rains were said to have caused considerable damage to the crop. Trading was quiet, with buyers taking only small quantities.

FLOUR AND MEAL.—There was moderate trading in the flour market, with prices standing at previously quoted levels. The undertone at the close, however, was unsteady owing to the break in wheat. Spring bran stood at $25.25, middlings at $27.50, and red dog at $30.50@$31. City bran stood at $24.50 for bulk and $26 for sacks, while middlings were quoted at $28.10. There were no other notable changes.

OILS.—Linseed oil and petroleum were quiet and unchanged.

NAVAL STORES.—There was a slight decline in turpentine yesterday, reflecting the easier market in the South. That commodity stood at 42 cents. Resin was easy, with trading of a hand-to-mouth character. Tar was firm, owing to limited supplies.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Warp prints combined with plaids in ribbons are among the newer effects that are moving well for Spring. Light warp prints with jacquard figures are also in good demand.

Spoons having pierced initial handles are novelties featured by a local manufacturer. In another line carried by the same concern the idea is extended to the cutting of entire names, names of colleges and of cities, in the spoon handles. The pierced initial spoons can be had in dozen lots only, on the first order, and are said to be suitable for birthday, wedding, or anniversary presents.

Among novelties in the women's neckwear field high-backed collars with draped fichus or a vest finish of lace or net are prominent. The high, straight back is often of black velvet, finished with a net or frill of chiffon and a small throat band of black velvet.

One of the local millinery shops is showing a small black velvet hat with a round crown and a brim which is dented and upturned at the back, where there is placed a high, petroleum blue ostrich pompon. Another attractive model is a smal toque of petroleum blue, with a draped brim which has a high trimming of blue aigrettes in the centre front.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Flax and Cotton Goods Denied Reductions—Cut Hose for Porto Rico.

Adverse action was taken by the Board of United States General Appraisers in an appeal relating to the classification under the Tariff act of 1909, of flax articles imported by Marshall Field & Co. The merchandise included fabrics so woven as to produce a corded effect on the surface, and linen damask and napkins in the piece. The Collector of Customs at Chicago exacted duty at 45 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 358, as manufacturers of flax. The importers contended the goods to be plain woven fabrics dutiable, under Paragraph 357, at 35 per cent. ad valorem.

Henry Bischoff & Co. lost a contention on coarse, brightly colored cotton cloth, returned by Collector Mitchel at 45 per cent. ad valorem under the present law, as manufactures of cotton. Lower duty was asked under Paragraphs 315 to 320, according to value, count of threads and weight.

Children's cotton hose and half-hose imported by Sucesores de Suan Sen C., at San Juan, Porto Rico, gained lower duty under Paragraph 327, act of 1909, as hose made on knitting machines not otherwise provided for. The Collector exacting duty at specific rates, according to value, under Paragraph 328, as hose fashioned, narrowed or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, was reversed.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Building Company in Bronx Completes Sale of Fine Apartment Houses—West Side Flat Deal—Big Lease in Flatbush—Private House Renting Active—Belle Harbor Auction.

The realty market of the week opened under very quiet conditions yesterday. Manhattan furnished practically nothing of importance in realty activity apart from leases, in which respect the demand for private residences seemed to be especially good.

A few sales were announced in the Bronx, and all had to do with apartment houses, indicating that investors regard that kind of property in the borough with confidence. The largest deal involved the sale by the John W. Cornish Construction Company of the two five-story apartment structures at 788 to 792 East 175th Street, 236 feet east of Prospect Avenue, occupying a combined plot, 90 by 140. This completes the sale of the five apartment houses recently finished by the selling company at that point.

W. E. & W. I. Brown were the brokers in the transaction, and the buyer was a client of the firm who purchased for investment.

West Side Deal.

The five-story flat at 111 West Ninety-sixth Street is reported to have been sold by the Adolph Scheibel estate. The plot is 31.3 by 100.11, near Columbus Avenue.

Bronx Borough.

The five-story apartment house with stores at 738 East 180th Street, between Clinton and Prospect Avenues, has been sold by Brooks & Momand for Florence A. Gallagher for a client for investment. The plot is 40 by 105, and it has been held at $60,000.

Joseph F. O'Donnell has sold the five-story flat at 680 East 159th Street, on plot 40 by 100, to a client of De Forest Brothers, attorneys. The property is 80 feet east of Cypress Avenue. The broker in the transaction was A. E. Olsen.

Brooklyn.

Charles W. Seitz has sold the three-story double flat at 433 Bay Ridge Avenue, between Fourth and Fifth Avenues, for the Williamsburg Savings Bank to an investor. The plot is 25 by 100.

$675,000 Flatbush Lease.

A big Flatbush lease has been made by the Greenough estate, which has leased through the Chauncey Real Estate Company the four-story building at the southwest corner of Flatbush and Fourth Avenues to a syndicate for a period of forty-two years at an aggregate rental of $675,000. The ground floor, formerly occupied by the City Savings Bank, has been subleased to John Karn for fifteen years at a rental aggregating $110,000. The property is opposite the entrance to the Atlantic Avenue Subway station.

Long Island.

A sixty acre farm fronting on Hampton Road, Southampton, has been purchased by William W. Bishop from Thomas T. Corrigan, and Henry H. Rogers has purchased a portion of the Thomas estate at Old Town for a Summer home.

Pratt Buys Vanderbilt Camp.

Herbert L. Pratt of Brooklyn has purchased Frederick W. Vanderbilt's Adirondack camp on the upper St. Regis Lakes. Of the twenty buildings on the estate, nineteen are of Japanese architecture. The camp property has a shore line of nearly a mile, and embraces more than sixty acres of woodland and about forty acres of land under cultivation.

Mr. Vanderbilt bought the property in 1901 from the late H. McK. Twombly at a price said to have been $100,000, and it is estimated that since that time Mr. Vanderbilt spent equally as much in improvements.

Private Dwellings Leased.

John J. Kavanagh has leased for Juliette M. Schroder the four-story dwelling at 67 East Eighty-second Street to Herbert S. Connell, and for Henry B. Montgomery the two-story dwelling at 167 East Seventy-eighth Street to Charles Edge.

The F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Company has leased for the Chelsea Realty Company the three-story dwelling at 28 West 105th Street to Helen Clarke.

H. C. Senior & Co. have leased for Eleanor T. Smith and David B. Ingersoll the three-story dwelling at 170 West Eighty-second Street to Dr. Horace P. Gillingham.

Slawson & Hobbs have leased the following private dwellings: 162 West Seventy-third Street, for Dr. Burnett C. MacIntyre to M. Hastings; 159 West Seventy-third Street, for the estate of C. F. Hoffman to J. S. Martin; 345 West Eighty-seventh Street, for J. Parker Sloane to Charles D. Orton; 155 West Ninety-fifth Street, for Charles Bernheimer to F. E. Moore, and 329 West Seventy-eighth Street, for W. E. D. Stokes to E. J. May.

Foley & Hughes have leased the three-story dwelling at 357 West Twenty-first Street for William J. Stevens to Cerophin Milton and the four-story house at 551 West 141st Street for the West Side Bank to Mrs. Florence Conlon.

Commercial Leases.

M. Forman & Co. have leased for the Irvel Realty Company the store and basement, containing about 10,000 square feet, at 36 and 38 West Twenty-fifth Street, to Abraham Cohen for five years.

Foley & Hughes have leased the store at 208 West Fourteenth Street for Miss Ellen Maloney to Frank G. Piona, and the store at 342 East Thirty-fourth Street for the Murtha estate to Fred Bouchard.

Country House Leases.

Fish & Marvin have rented for J. W. Johnson his residence at Scarsdale to J. C. Sloane; also for Mrs. W. M. Wheeler her residence at Bronxville to Hugh S. Robertson, and for George H. Maurice his residence at Lawrence Park to Gardner Cornett.

In all 179 lots were sold for a total of $88,155, an average of $492 a lot. The lots on the Jamaica Bay front brought from $590 to $850 apiece, and those on the inside streets from $410 to $570. The property was located on Montauk, Dennison, Suffolk, Henley and Oxford Avenues, and Bay Side and Beach Channel Drives, adjoining the Belle Harbor Yacht Club.

Pearce, J. F. R. Troeger, Thomas J. McDonnald, Anna Steiner, Julius G. Repstock, Charles A. Hunter, Walter Schroeder, Archibald Wiguhart, Joseph Twinem, Dennis J. Minton, A. W. Baillie, T. F. THREE DIE IN WRECK OF STEEL TRAINS

More Than Fifty Injured in Head-On Crash on Long Island Railroad.

BREAKS 20 YEARS' RECORD

Flagman Is Arrested Following Disaster Near College Point—Steel Saves Many Lives.

Three men, employes of the Long Island Railroad Company, were killed, and more than fifty passengers, among whom were twelve policemen on their way to attend Mayor Gaynor's funeral, were injured early yesterday morning in a head-on collision between two electric all-steel Long Island trains which met, through a mistake in signals, on a sharp curve of single track 500 feet east of the College Point station. While most of the injured were treated at the scene of the accident by College Point physicians, several were taken to Flushing and other hospitals. Two of them may die.

After a preliminary investigation, Coroner Ambler of College Point ordered Walter R. Maize, 30 years old, of 329 West Fifty-eighth Street, Manhattan, a flagman in charge of a signal tower at Whitestone Junction, arrested on a charge of homicide. The Coroner held him in $10,000 bail pending further investigation.

According to the evidence obtained by the Coronor, Maize permitted a train going east from New York to Whitestone Landing to run past his signal tower into the single track section between the Junction and Whitestone Landing, down which a train with right of way from the landing to Manhattan was coming at a speed of forty miles an hour. These two trains met in the collision.

The dead were motormen of both trains and a Long Island Railroad conductor who was on his way to Manhattan to report for duty.

Both Trains Behind Time.

The eastbound train in the wreck was No. 308, due to leave the Pennsylvania Station for Whitestone Landing at 6:16 A. M., and the one with which it collided was Train No. 311, due to leave Whitestone Landing at the same time. Both trains were late. That from Whitestone was over twenty minutes behind time, while the one going east was ten minutes late. The westbound train was carrying several hundred passengers in five all-steel cars. There were twenty policemen on their way to the Gaynor funeral, and there were many silk mill workers on their way to factories. The train for Whitestone was made up of two steel cars and carried few passengers.

The wreck, in the opinion of Coroner Ambler, J. A. McCrea, General Manager of the Long Island Railroad, and other officials was due to disregard by Maize, the flagman in the Whitestone Junction signal tower, of Rule 5 of the Long Island Railroad, which orders that "at the end of double tracks when signalmen are on duty signals will not be given to trains to enter single tracks until all superior overdue trains have arrived or orders have been given permitting inferior trains to proceed."

Between midnight and noon all westbound trains on the Long Island are considered "superior" trains in railroad parlance and have the right of way under this rule on single tracks. According to the railroad officials, therefore, Maize should have held up the eastbound train, which was an inferior train, until the train for Manhattan had passed his tower on to the double tracks of the main line. This he did not do, with the result that the eastbound train entered the single track stretch between Whitestone Junction and Whitestone Landing, and ran head on into the superior train a little east of the College Point Station. After his arrest, Maize said that he had permitted the eastbound train to proceed because he supposed that its conductor had special orders. He had been reprimanded, he said, for holding up overdue trains, and did not wish to offend again.

Trains Meet on Curve.

The two trains met on a sharp curve under the bridge over Third Avenue, College Point, in a cut twenty feet deep. The train from Whitestone was going at an estimated rate of forty miles an hour, while that from New York, not having picked up its speed after leaving College Point, was moving only ten miles an hour.

When the two trains struck there was a roar that was heard all over College Point. Coroner Ambler, in his bed at his home several blocks away, and policemen in the College Point Station heard the noise and jumped to their feet. A moment later Acting Sergt. Turnstall of the College Point Station telephoned the news of the wreck to his station and the Coroner several hospitals, and other police stations were notified. Private physicians in College Point were called. In a very few minutes seven ambulances from the Flushing, St. John, and St. Mary's Hospitals were on the ground. Coroner Ambler, who arrived ten minutes after the crash, took command of the rescue work.

Capt. Walsh and Lieut. Capper of the College Point Station called all the patrolmen at hand to assist them. These, with the aid of the policemen on the train who had not been incapacitated by injuries, soon established order around the wreck and helped in the aid of the injured. Laudenber's Hotel and several houses near the wreck were thrown open for use as emergency hospitals, and here the physicins and surgeons worked for several hours.

Fire started in the seats of one of the cars, but it was soon put out. The current in the third rail was cut off automatically, so that the workers ran no risk in extricating the dead and injured. Only three of the cars were damaged, the front one of each train and the second of the westbound train. All three were bent and torn into uselessness, and two were overturned.

Lives Saved by Steel Cars.

The civil authorities and the railroad officials agreed that great loss of life was prevented by the use of all-steel cars in the two trains. Coroner Ambler, after viewing the wreck, said that the steel cars again had proved their worth, and a statement, issued yesterday afternoon from the office of J. A. McCrea, General Manager of the Lnog Island Railroad, supports this opinion. The statement is:

> We believe there is no question but that the use of steel cars on the trains in the collision this morning materially reduced the loss of life and injury to persons. We have equipped 218 of our smaller type of cars, that is, the Subway type, operated on trains out of Flatbush Avenue, with the Hedley device, but we have not equipped the heavy type of steel cars, such as were in collision to-day. These cars are standard steel coaches, full vestibuled, equipped with motors, and a much heavier type than the Subway car.
> The Hedley device was invented specially for the Subway type of car, and is, no doubt, a great factor to prevent such cars when in collision from climbing and telescoping. It has not been considered seriously for the standard type of steel car.
>
> That is the first serious accident of this kind we have had with the steel cars, and, if our investigation shows that there is anything left undone in the construction or the equipment of these cars, we will, of course, take advantage of it.

Mr. McCrea added that spring bumpers were used on the large cars, such as were in the wreck yesterday, and that the Hedley device could not be attached to such cars.

Breaks Record of Twenty Years.

According to the records in the offices of the Long Island Railroad in the Pennsylvania Station no passenger of a Long Island train had been killed for twenty years until yesterday. Several met death twenty years ago in a three corned collision at Blissville, near Long Island City, but there have been no passenger fatalities since.

Maize, the flagman who was arrested, has been in active railroad service for the last twelve years, and with the Long Island Railroad for one year. He was assigned to duty in the "J. C." tower at Whitestone Junction last Spring. He has been considered a trustworthy man, but no railroad official who discussed the wreck attempted to free him from blame. All held him alone culpable except Coroner Ambler, who intimated that others might be involved after the inquest, which he said he would hold in a few days.

Chief Train Dispatcher Magee said that if Maize had had the least doubt about letting the "inferior" train through, he should have asked for orders from Jamaica.

Traffic along the line where the wreck occurred was held up six hours after the collision. The first train after the wreck passed through College Point at 1:38 in the afternoon.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Sept. 22.—A letter from H. L. Langdon, Traffic Manager of the Long Island Railroad, appeared in a local paper on Thursday, bearing out the contention that not a passenger had been killed on the railroad in twenty years. The letter was the outcome of another published in the same paper on Sept. 11, to the effect that not a passenger had been killed in about eighteen years. A reader challenged the statement. That the railroad's boast held good was brought out in the reply of Mr. Langdon to the challenge. In part he said:

> To the Hempstead Sentinel, Hempstead, L. I.:
>
> Dear Sir: Referring to your favor of the 15th inst., asking as to the correctness of the statement published in the Sentinel of Sept. 11, that a passenger had not been killed on the Long Island railroad for about eighteen years, I beg to say that your statement would have been correct if it had read twenty years instead of eighteen, as to a passenger on a train.
>
> Of course, every one appreciates that an accident may happen at any time, that an employe may fall in his duty, or that a trespasser or a careless driver or chauffeur may get in the way of a moving train and cause a fatal accident to passengers.
>
> The Long Island Railroad has been extremely fortunate. It carried nearly thirty-seven and a half million passengers last year and expects to carry forty million this year, and no passenger has been killed on its trains as a result of a train accident, for more than twenty years.
>
> A. L. LANGDON, Traffic Manager.

OIL EXPLOSION KILLS THREE

Mother and Two Children Set on Fire—Another Woman Dying.

A woman and her two children were burned to death, while another woman was so severely burned that she is not expected to recover, as a result of two explosions in Newark, caused by pouring kerosene on smoldering fires in stoves. The dead are Mrs. Antonia Kiaput of 149 Jackson Street and her two children, Joseph, 3 years old, and Andrew, 15 months old. Mrs. Yadwiga Philipoff of 50 Hermon Street is in the St. James's Hospital as a result of the second explosion.

Mrs. Kiaput's clothing caught fire and she was burned from head to foot, and the night gowns of her children, who stood near by, were also ignited. Neighbors heard the woman's screams and hurried to her assistance. John S. Fischer was first to reach the woman. He wrapped her in a blanket and carried her out to the street, while others carried out the children. The mother died in a short time. The little children were taken to St. James's Hospital, where, lying side by side on the same cot, they died at 8 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Philipoff, too, was set on fire when she poured oil on a fire. Neighbors came quickly to her assistance and extinguished the flames, but she was badly burned.

GIRL'S AUTO KILLS A MAN.

Miss Scalla's Car Skids and Runs Down Two at New Village, N. J.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., Sept. 22.—An automobile driven by Miss Emma Scalla, daughter of Frank Scalla, proprietor of Scalla Park, Washington, N. J., ran down and killed an unidentified foreigner last night. The accident occurred at New Village. The man's neck was broken.

With the foreigner was another man, Stephen Slake, who was also struck by the auto. Slake was taken to the Easton (Penn.) Hospital in a critical condition. Heavy rain was falling at the time of the mishap, and the accident is attributed to the bad condition of the road, which caused the auto to skid.

Police Seize $1,500 Gambling Outfit

A gambling outfit worth $1,500 was seized last evening when the police, according to their report, raided the premises on the first floor of 166 West Twenty-second Street. Inspector Gillen and Capt. Mason of the West Seventeenth Street Station gained access to the place by the simple process of ringing the front door bell, announcing themselves as players and walking in.

UNITE MITCHEL LEAGUES.

New Organization to Appeal to Anti-Tammany Democrats.

A start was made yesterday in bringing together and crystallizing the strong Mitchel sentiment which exists in the Democratic ranks. An organization to be known as the Allied Mitchel Leagues of Greater New York was launched, with County Clerk William F. Schneider as its Chairman, and with headquarters in the Longacre Building.

This organization hopes to take advantage of the dissatisfaction which has long existed among the Democrats who were members of the old County and Cleveland Democracies with the supremacy and methods of Tammany Hall, and to use in behalf of the Fusion Mayoralty candidate the uneasiness which the impeachment of William Sulzer has caused among many regularly enrolled Democrats. The latter are willing to admit that Mr. Sulzer may have been guilty of grave irregularities, but are unwilling that Tammany should reap any benefit by exploiting his failings. They argue that if an attempt is now being made to remove Mr. Sulzer from office it is rather because he would not be subservient to Mr. Murphy than because the Tammany leaders are scandalized by what he did.

A meeting was held yesterday afternoon at Fusion headquarters in the Fifth Avenue Building to take steps to utilize in behalf of Mr. Mitchel these two political groups. Every borough was represented, and delegates were present from the Cleveland Democracy, the Young Men's Civil League, the Hungarian League of the City of New York, the East Side Mitchel League, the Colored Men's Democratic League, the Business Men's Mitchel League, the Irish-American Mitchel League, and the Washington Heights Business Men's Association.

Nathan D. Jacoby was appointed manager of the Allied Mitchel Leagues, and Mr. Schneider received authority to communicate with the other independent Mitchel organizations and invite their co-operation in a vigorous campaign.

CONGRESS TICKET PUZZLES.

No Nominations Yet for Places of Harrison and Sullivan.

The Democratic Congressional district committees of the Twentieth and Thirteenth Districts held meetings last night to select candidates for Congress in the places of Francis Burton Harrison, who resigned from the Twentieth District to become Governor General of the Philippines, and Timothy D. Sullivan of the Thirteenth District, who died recently. No selections were made.

The meeting in the Thirteenth District, which was held at 263 Grand Street, adjourned until next Monday night. The only business transacted was the selection of Pascal Bresha to fill Sullivan's place on the Congressional Committee.

The meeting in the Twentieth District was held at 208 East 116th Street, but an adjournment was taken, subject to a call from the chair.

The Republicans in the same districts also held meetings to select candidates for the same offices, but adjournments were also taken without making selections. In the Twentieth District the fight is between Lewis H. Gutterman and Isaac Seigal.

PUPILS ON A FOOD STRIKE.

Better Luncheon and Shorter Hours Demand of Syracuse Youngsters.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 22.—One thousand pupils from the three high schools of the city, representing one-third of the student body, went on a strike this morning, demanding shorter school hours, better food at the luncheon period, and longer time in which to eat it.

Behind the movement is a protest against one instead of two sessions a day in the high schools. Beginning with the present term, pupils have been reporting at 9 A. M., and have been kept till 2 P. M., with a half hour for luncheon, and without the privilege of leaving the buildings.

Headed by a band and escorted by mounted policemen, the strikers, including many girls, paraded the streets and were cheered by crowds on the sidewalks.

The procession started at the Central High School, and recruits were picked up at the other institutions. At Technical High School one of the male teachers guarded the door until a band of fifteen girls formed a flying wedge and pushed him aside.

This incited the boys to action, and while 600 pupils from the Central School stood outside and cheered, boys and girls began piling out of the windows on the ground floor. Percy M. Hughes, Superintendent of Schools, issued this statement to-night:

"Every pupil who took any part in the demonstration of to-day is indefinitely suspended, and will only be allowed to return to their classrooms when their Principal is satisfied by assurances from their parents that they will behave themselves in the future."

MITCHEL TO SEE HEARST.

Fusion Candidate Fears Action by the Independence League.

The final decision on the part of John Purroy Mitchel as to his attitude toward the Independence League, it is expected, will depend a good deal on the assurances he receives from William Randolph Hearst. Mr. Hearst is expected here at the end of the week, and it is understood that Mr. Mitchel will then go over the situation with him.

Pressure is being brought to bear on Mr. Mitchel to induce him to cut adrift from the Independence League and stand on his own merits. It was represented to him that the showing of the Independence League at the primaries was not sufficient to warrant him in weakening his support among the conservative elements in the community, through the fear of radical measures with which he would have to obtain Hearst's support. He was told that if he wished to get all the strength of Mayor Gaynor he would have to give convincing proof that he would not indulge in any governmental experiments.

On the other hand, it was the fear that Mr. Hearst would put a third ticket in the field, unless Mr. Mitchel was selected, which had much to do with the designation of Mitchel for Mayor by the Fusion Committee. Some of his supporters are advising him that if he throws over the Independence League now the third ticket will appear after all.

If Mr. Hearst wished, there is no doubt that he could induce James A. Allen to retire and leave the nomination for Mayor either to himself or to some other strong candidate.

It is held by the Fusionists that such action would result in a Tammany victory. In the dilemma Mr. Mitchel, his friends say, is forced practically to await the result of a conference with Mr. Hearst before he takes a definite step, and his decision may not be announced for several days.

FUSION NOTIFICATIONS.

Candidates Will Speak at Cooper Union Meeting on Monday.

Formal notification of their nominations will be made to the candidates on the Fusion city ticket at a meeting to be held in Cooper Union on next Monday night. Henry L. Stimson, ex-Secretary of War, will preside, and the speakers will be Job E. Hedges for the Republicans, Timothy L. Woodruff for the Progressives, and Frederic R. Coudert for the Independent Democrats.

Collector Mitchel is expected to make a declaration of the principles of his campaign for the Mayoralty, and Controller Prendergast and Borough President McAneny will also acknowledge their nomination for the Controllership and the Presidency of the Board of Aldermen.
